Speculation Still Lives On

'Quincy's' Amelia Earl Lost 50 Years Ago

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Fifty years ago today (Thursday), Quincy's and America's most famous female flyer was lost near Howland Island in the Pacific Ocean on an attempted around-the-world flight.

When Amelia Earhart and co-pilot Fred Noonan vanished mysteriously July 2, 1937, it sparked much speculation as to the circumstances surrounding the disappearance.

The twin-engine Lockheed had reached the two-third mark of the around-the-world goal when it suddenly and mysteriously vanished that July 2.

Some claim she and Noonan were on a spy mission for the U.S. checking out Japanese military bases in the Pacific. They note this was just four years before the Japanese sneak attacked Pearl Harbor.

And, they say, the plane ran out of fuel and crashed in the ocean. Earhart and Noonan, according to the way they tell it, were picked up by the Japanese and executed.

There were stories during World War II that a "white woman and man" were executed on an island that year.

There has also been speculation down through the years that Amelia Earhart was actually alive.

In fact, just a few years ago there were reports she had been seen in Chicago.

She was 39 when she disappeared. She would have been 89 this month.

But in 1981 while speaking to a standing-room-only audience at the Quincy Historical Society, Earhart's sister, Mrs. Muriel Morrissey spiked the speculation and rumors which she called "nonsense."

She said that fatigue and bad weather probably teamed to bring the plane

Work Underway On Clock Tower Vietnam War Memorial

VIETNAM VETERANS Memorial At Marina Bay

O'Connell Development Company of Quincy is creating a $500,000 85-foot brick and granite clock tower memorial at Marina Bay, in Squantum, to honor all the men and women of Quincy who are missing in action or who died while serving in the Vietnam War.

O'Connell Development Company has compiled the names of those veterans who either listed their permanent address as Quincy or lived in Quincy for most of their lives. These Vietnam veterans, who died or are still missing in action will have their names incorporated into the design of the four-sided memorial at Marina Bay.

In addition to listing these veterans' names, there will also be a side incorporating the history of Marina Bay and a side which will suggest an appropriate quote reflecting the memorial's intent.

The tower, just off the boardwalk and across from Corporate Park at Marina Bay, will have a gold lead cupola and a working clock.

At a height of 85 feet, it will become a Quincy landmark.

The tower will have a 16 foot by 16 foot base and is being built by O.B.C. Inc. of Quincy. G.E. Ross Associates is the architect.

Work on the tower is already underway and dedication of the memorial is scheduled for Sunday, Sept. 27.

Families of South Shore Vietnam veterans, as well as various branches of the military local dignitaries and officials will participate in this very solemn tribute and commemoration to those who lost their lives in the Vietnam War.

The names of the veterans will appear on the memorial under an olive branches symbol and after this inscription:

"Dedicated in sorrow, gratitude and pride to the citizens of Quincy who died or are missing in action while serving their country in the Vietnam War."

McCauley, LaRaia Mix It Up Over Resignation

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The mayoral race heated up along with the temperatures this week as incumbent Francis McCauley and challenger Joseph LaRaia traded barbs regarding the resignation of Building Inspector Kenneth Johnson to take a more lucrative job in the private sector.

The loss of individuals such as Johnson "reflects the difficulty the mayor has in keeping qualified competent individuals," said LaRaia, a city councillor.

"It points up to the political interference of the mayor's office in managing the affairs of the city," said LaRaia, who is also a former Quincy mayor.

McCauley rejected LaRaia's charges and said, "Many of the people I have appointed have gone on to bigger and better things. Councillor LaRaia also had problems with department heads in his administration.

"However, instead of going on to bigger and better things, some of them went on to jail, others were forced to resign because of indictments and charges pending against them."

"My decision to leave the department is due to the fact that these people actively recruited me for over a month," said Johnson.

"When I took the position with the city, I thought I would stay for about three years, but I got several offers.

"There was no political influence at all," said Johnson.

"I just felt this was the best for me."

Johnson added, "Everyone in the city that I've worked with has been tremendous. The city is very lucky to have the type of people it has."

Johnson, a 27-year-old Squantum resident, told the mayor last week that he was leaving the $39,501 a year position he has held for about a year to join a Chicago-based company at a higher salary.

"They came up with an offer that was just too good to pass by," said Johnson.

"I feel very badly leaving the city," said Johnson, who noted that he will be working in the Bay State area but outside of the city of Quincy.

"I look forward to a good career with this company," said Johnson, who denied any interference by the mayor's office.

LaRaia called Johnson a "young, talented and mature public servant who was a credit to the department as well as to the city of Quincy in a short period of time with the city.

"Unfortunately, his office

Police Report On Kelly's Pub Placed On File For Year

By JANE ARENA

The City License Board Tuesday placed on file for a period of one year a police report concerning Roscommon, Inc., doing business as Kelly's Pub & Grub, 25-27 Billings Rd., North Quincy.

Peter Kelly, president of the establishment, and his attorney, Robert Fleming, told the board that they would not challenge the police report and waived the reading of the report at the meeting.

According to the report, filed by officer Kathleen Roche, there were three patrons found drinking in the bar after hours on the morning of April 18 at 1 a.m. All three individuals were found to be underage, according to the report.

Fleming told the board that the usual procedure of the bar does not include checking identification at the front door, but that this is left to the discretion of the waitresses as they take drink orders.

The police report also stated that a back door of the establishment, which is to be used solely as an emergency exit, was found to be open on several occasions during the night in question. Kelly said that this has been a problem in the past and that people often enter the bar by this door.

Fleming told the board that Kelly has plans to install a crash bar on the back door along with an alarm so that it can be opened only from the inside as an emergency exit. Kelly has also hired two additional employees to check identification at the front door four nights a week. They feel confident that these measures will help to alleviate the problem.

The establishment was subject to a fine of over $3,000 earlier this year by the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission for a similar incident, it was noted.

The board placed the report on file for a period of one year with the understanding that it could be taken out and used against the establishment at any time during that period.

The board said that Fire Chief Carl Valenti and his deputies would check the bar regularly to make sure that the capacity of the establishment was kept under the limit of 105 patrons. They also said that police officers on detail at the bar would report directly to Police Chief Francis Finn to ensure that the bar complies with the conditions set in the hearing.

License Board Briefs

- Granted a request from the North Quincy High School Girls Volleyball Team to hold canning dates on Friday Sept. 25 from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. and on Saturday Sept. 26 from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.
- Granted a request from Joe's Pub, 133 East Howard St., for a license to add one video game machine to the premises. The application was for two machines, but a city ordinance limits the number of machines to four.
- Granted a request from James J. Sage of Pembroke and Harold Stewart of Brockton for the transfer of the repair shop license and the license to store 16,000 gallons of gasoline underground as held by Montoni Realty Trust, 333 Quarry St. The board stipulated that no junk cars or other debris be left at the site.
- Granted a request from Lawrence Carr, doing business as Lawrence Carr Carnival of Wilmington, to hold a carnival at the Elk's Club, 440 East Squantum St., July 8, 9, and 10 from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. and on July 11 from 1 p.m. to 10 p.m. The carnival will benefit A Child's Wish Come True. The board stipulated that all electrical systems and wiring must be up to code with state standards and be installed by a master electrician and inspected by the city.

Gillis Praises Johnson

License Board Chairman John Gillis made a point to praise the work of City Building Inspector Kenneth Johnson at Tuesday's meeting at City Hall. Johnson will be leaving his position at the end of this week for another job.

Gillis said that Johnson has done "good work" for the people of the city and that the board and all who know and work with Johnson would miss him.

Vandals Still Problem At Ross Parking Garage

A representative of Kinney Systems told the City Council's Downtown and Economic Development Committee Monday night that his company painted over the graffiti in the Ross Garage but vandals replaced it the next week.

"It's back again," said Bruce Young, regional manager of Kinney Systems which has operated the city's two parking lots and one garage in Quincy Center since 1984.

He was asked to appear before the committee after city councillors and others complained about the operation and condition of the lots and garage.

Sheets also said he was considering submitting an ordinance prohibiting the sale of spray paint to customers under age 18.

"You can't keep painting the walls of the garage every two weeks," said Sheets.

Young also said that the stairs are washed every morning with ammonia to remove odors, and one full time and one part time employee are on duty to pick up litter.

Councillor Patricia Toland, committee chairman, suggested that signs prohibiting litter be erected, and any grassy areas be maintained.

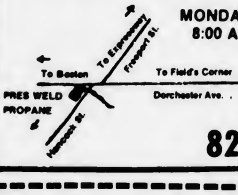
"If youngsters have done this much in that little time, there is an obvious lack of control," said LaRaia.

"I don't think we've arrived at any solution."

Councillor Michael Cheney said spaces for handicapped drivers should be designated immediately.



Cheney also suggested the committee meet again in September to see if any progress has been made with the problems over the summer.

'No More Challenge'

Lydon Decides Not To Seek Re-election

Ward 3 Councillor John J. Lydon, Jr., a veteran of 14 years on the City Council, surprised some onlookers at Monday night's special City Council meeting by announcing he would not seek re-election.

In front of an audience which included a number of his family members, Lydon said, "To a great degree, I have achieved the goals I have established for myself at this point in my life.

"Clearly, my family is my first and most important consideration...My business (Lydon-Russell Funeral Home) has grown beyond my expectations.

"I find that as each year passes, vacation time becomes more important to my family and to me - I like it that way.

"...In short, government is no longer a challenge - the source of achievement and enjoyment that it once was - therefore, I choose not to seek reelection to the Ward 3 Council Seat."

Though Lydon will continue to serve until a new Ward 3 Councillor is sworn in in January, his colleagues took the opportunity to praise and rib him.

Council president Stephen McGrath said he spoke for the other councillors in wishing Lydon well.

"I have enjoyed the 10 years we have served together," said McGrath who was elected after Lydon. "You've done a great job.

"I regret your decision and will miss our relationship."

Councillor Michael Cheney said to Lydon, "I've learned from you that there is always a lighter side to things, and a people side to issues."

JOHN J. LYDON, JR.

Referring to the amount of time required of ward councillors, Cheney joked, "My wife is probably watching this at home and saying 'why aren't you doing the same thing?'"

Councillor James Sheets noted that he and Lydon both came on to the council at the same time 14 years ago.

Text Of Lydon's Statement On Page 20

Sheets drew laughs from his colleagues when he related an election night story about Lydon.

"It was 3:30 in the morning when Jack Lydon called to ask me a question and a favor," said Sheets.

"We had just been elected, but Jack was asking for my vote for him as council president," said Sheets.

He told Lydon, "You added to the council and city government a touch of class."

"It's been a pleasure to serve with you," said Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro, who joked that Lydon had asked his support for council president before he was even elected.

Lydon finally served as council president in 1982-1983.

Councillor Joseph LaRaia, who is running for mayor, said, "I'm sorry you won't be joining us in the miseries of running for office, but you've made a courageous decision."

"I've come to like and respect you," said Councillor Patricia Toland.

Councillor Thomas Nutley said the council would miss Lydon's "strong opinions."

"The city is losing a very, very valuable servant," said Nutley.

"You've taught me a great deal," said Councillor Richard J. Koch, Jr., "including to stand back and laugh at yourself."

Koch, who moved to Cape Cod, will also be leaving the council at the end of this term.

At the end of the councillor's comments, McGrath smiled and said that a retirement party would have to be held for Lydon.

Lydon has become known for the St. Patrick's Day party he holds annually.

But it was Fire Chief Carl Valenti who had the last word later in the meeting.

"He was always a good friend of the firefighters," said Valenti, "and a gentleman."

Squantum Donuts Shop Hearing Resumes Thursday

The City License Board Tuesday continued until today (Thursday) at 9:30 a.m. a hearing concerning traffic conditions at Squantum Donuts, doing business as Dunkin' Donuts, at the corner of East Squantum St. and Quincy Shore Dr.

Owner of the shop, Paul Govostes and his attorney, Neil Kerstein, had not been notified of the hearing and the board called a special Thursday meeting as Tuesday was the last scheduled meeting before the summer recess.

In a May 19 hearing, the board had recommended that the East Squantum St. entrance to the shop be blocked off by barriers to prevent cars from cutting into traffic to enter the shop. They had also suggested that the curb on Quincy Shore Dr. be extended in order to narrow the curb-cut and prevent cars from turning illegally off Quincy Shore Dr. to enter the shop.

MDC Police have indicated however, that they do not want the Quincy Shore Dr. entrance to be the sole entrance and egress from the shop. In light of this the owners have failed to block off the East Squantum St. entrance and the traffic conditions have continued.

The board said they would notify Govostes and Kerstein of the Thursday meeting and would also request that MDC police officers be present at the meeting.

Lydon Move No Big Surprise

John Lydon's announcement this week that he will not seek re-election as Ward 3 councillor took most people by surprise.

But, not everyone.

LYDON

Lydon had announced in early April that he would seek an eighth term.

But, there had been speculation the past year that he might not run again.

When he announced in April that he would, that surprised some observers.

They are the people who weren't exactly stunned Monday night when Lydon announced he was not going to run after all.

Lydon indicated he wants to spend more time with his family and give more time to his growing business as a funeral home director.

These were the two reasons that had spawned speculation the past few months that he might not run.

Monday night he tossed in another: he now finds "No challenge" in government.

"Government for me," he said, "has become dour -- it is overly concerned with regulation and has forced us into the role of regulators. I have never perceived myself in this type of role.

"In short, government is no longer a challenge -- the source of achievement and enjoyment it once was."

He indicated he is also tired of the campaign trail.

And, in Ward 3, it is a long, winding one. Ward 3 has got to be the craziest ward ever put together from a geographical and political standpoint. It seems to be all over the city.

Once upon a time it was South Quincy.

Now it is all over the place, zig-zagging through parts of Ward 2, Ward 4, Ward 5 and Ward 6.

You could easily get tired campaigning there. If not lost.

LYDON'S DEPARTURE from the political arena brings the number of open seats in the City Council this year to four.

Two are at-large seats: the one Joseph LaRaia is vacating to run for mayor and the one Richard Koch, Jr. is stepping down from to live on the Cape.

The third is the Ward 5 seat Council President Stephen McGrath is leaving to run for councillor at-large.

□

SO, REGARDLESS of how the election goes, Quincy is sure to have at least three new faces in the City Council.

□

It might open the door for more.

A BOSTON HARBOR cruise fundraiser for Tim Cahill, City Council at-large candidate, is set for Thursday, July 9 aboard the Nantascot.

CAHILL

The vessel will leave Rowe's Wharf, Boston at 8 p.m. and return at 11 p.m. Tickets are $20 each and may be obtained by calling Tina Cahill at 770-0066.

□

KENNEDY

WELL, if you're wondering whether Christopher Kennedy is seeking re-election to the School Committee, he is. He's the latest candidate to take out nomination papers at City Hall.

□

MENDING: Both Marty Finnegan, Quincy public schools athletics director and Richard Sweeney, Jr., former president of the Quincy Kiwanis Club, are recuperating at their homes from recent back surgery. Sweeney incidentally, was recently elected vice president of the New England District Kiwanis Foundation.

□

TED KENNEDY, Jr. will be the speaker at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce breakfast Monday, July 20 (7:44 a.m.) at Lombardo's, Randolph. His topic "Civil Rights of People With Disabilities."

□

HERB FONTAINE was the man of the hour at last week's special City Council meeting when he was honored with a bronze plaque. But this week, he was just plain Herb again. When Fontaine began snapping his fingers for council president Stephen McGrath to turn on a microphone so he could record a comment for WJDA, McGrath replied that it was on.

McGRATH

"Do you want me to take your plaque down?" he asked with a smile.

□

NUTLEY

COUNCILLOR THOMAS NUTLEY got a laugh from those attending a press conference on zoning orders in the mayor's office during which about 15 people stood behind Mayor Francis McCauley's desk for photos.

"I got behind the desk a lot sooner than I anticipated," quipped Nutley.

A future candidate?

down and there was no spy mission involved.

Miss Earhart, who became the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean in 1932, used North Quincy's Dennison Airport as home base for many of her flights during the 1920s and early 30s.

Last radio contact was near Howland Island, well north of Australia, where Miss Earhart was headed.

Earhart had planned the trip to gather statistics on the amount of punishment a plane's engine could withstand, Mrs. Morrissey said. The monsoons in the Pacific were stronger than anticipated, causing the plane to go down, she insisted.

Mrs. Morrissey has written a book about her sister entitled Courage is the Price and is a flying enthusiast herself. She said Amelia became interested in flying during World War I when she entered the "Voluntary Aid Detachment" in one of the largest military hospitals in Toronto, Canada.

Morrissey said the military had just started to use planes for reconnaissance missions and Amelia's interest in flying was sparked by her contact with injured pilots, who despite their injuries were eager to fly again.

After the war, Earhart went to California where she became friendly with a barnstormer. He took her on a plane ride, unheard of for a woman then. But she enjoyed it and became determined to fly.

Mrs. Morrissey recalled that her sister was a determined, courageous woman who did "things not for honor or glory, but for inner satisfaction and the feeling that she had opened the door for somebody else."

"Amelia's flights were not made as stunts," she said. "She wanted to show that women could do it."

The two sisters grew up in Kansas where they had what Mrs. Morrissey described as an "exciting childhood." She said they were tomboys whose mother had their seamstress make them bloomers so they could "shimmy up trees and ride horses bareback."

Mrs. Morrissey recalled an incident from their childhood in which they built a "roller coaster" after visiting an amusement park. The girls greased two planks with butter, leaned them up against a shed and slid down.

Her statement was prophetic.

Not only was Amelia Earhart the first woman to make a solo flight across the Atlantic, in 1935 she became the first person to fly from Hawaii to California.

Earhart early saw the tremendous potential of commercial aviation and in 1930 joined the Luddington Line, one of the first passenger services which operated between New York and Washington, D.C. She became an officer in that company.

No one for sure knows what did happen that July 2 a half century ago.

And, 50 years from now the speculation will probably still be there.

McCauley, LaRaia Jab Over Johnson Resignation

has been deluged with a tremendous amount of pressure, some of which has recently emanated from the mayor's office, particularly the projects of the city hospital building program as well as others in progress.

"A recent directive from the mayor in changing the assignment of inspectors at the hospital reflected an increased work load on the building inspector directly and I am sure is a major reason for his decision to leave the employ of the city of Quincy.

"I am sure Mr. Johnson has not indicated those reasons for his departure because of the type of individual that he is, and points up to the political interference of the mayor's office in managing the affairs of the city."

LaRaia pointed out that Franklin Jay was not reappointed to his position as treasurer-collector, and that City Solicitor Dean Nicastro left the city's employ.

McCauley responded that when Johnson took the job last year, he told him that if he acted in a professional manner and strictly adhered to the building regulations and codes "there would be no interference from me in the conduct of his job."

"The reason he is leaving is because he can't refuse the offer," said McCauley.

"I asked him again Tuesday if there had been any political pressure and he said there had been no political interference on the job.

"So, we do have our problems keeping people, but at least in my administration, the people who have left me have gone on to the private sector and have improved themselves," he said.

"We're sorry to lose Ken Johnson, but I'm not surprised because he has quite a bit of background and he can do much better in the private sector.

"Ken is a very talented young man," said McCauley. "He has a great academic background and he was offered a job he couldn't turn down."

McCauley said he has already offered the position of building inspector to a Quincy man and expects a reply soon.

"If things go well, we could have a new man on board in the building inspector's office by Monday, July 12," said McCauley.

If the local resident does not accept the position, the city will advertise for a new building inspector, he said.

Quincy's Yesterdays

How Early Quincy Celebrated The 4th

July 1-7
111 Years Ago

Hancock and Washington Sts. were literally alive with people in the glare of the new calcium lights, tended with infinite care by Supt. Nathan A. Brickett in the belfry of First Parish Church.

Particularly the fine decorations were noted at the homes of the leather merchant E.B. Pratt on Hancock near Adams St., where the trees were hung with gaily colored lanterns and Deputy Sheriff Washington M. French on Washington near Temple St.

As the clock struck midnight, cannons roared and the flag went up the pole at the Hose House on Washington St. amid the rockets red glare and the Fire Company sang the Star Spangled Banner under the direction of Galen Bowditch, the expressman.

It was July 3, 1876, in Quincy, the eve of the Centennial of American Independence.

Independence Day, 100 years after, began at sunrise with the ringing of church bells and a salute fired from 50 guns.

The parade formed at 5 a.m. on the new road that ran from the Poorhouse on Sea St. to Greenleaf St. and, shortly after 6 a.m., the marchers stepped off down Greenleaf led by Wash French and a platoon of mounted police.

Chief Marshal Edward Whicher was at the head of the line in a chariot drawn by four horses and the First Division featured a float with a large axe marked: "Father, I cannot tell a lie. I did it with my little hatchet."

The parade wound down Greenleaf to Hancock to South Quincy, turning at the corner of Water and Pleasant Sts., thence to Quincy Ave. and Washington St., and back to the Square to disband at the Stone Temples.

The main event took place in a 115-foot by 85-foot tent pitched in a field off Granite St. across from the home of the late Capt. Lewis Bass. The audience was admitted at 1:30 p.m. and soon the 1,000 seats were filled.

James H. Slade, a stenographer from Quincy Point, presided and the Declaration of Independence was read by six selected grammar school girls: Nettie Crocker, Alice Spear, Amanda Sylvester, Ida Paine, Nettie Penny and Nettie Randlett.

By the time Charles Francis Adams Jr. began the opening address, a general review of the history of Quincy, it was sweltering hot and the audience was restless when School Dept. Col. Francis W. Parker rose to deliver a history of the city's public schools.

The speech-making droned on into the early evening, for what would the Fourth of July be like without the oratory of the Rev. Reginald Howe of Christ Church, Prof. William R. Dimmock of Adams Academy and Josiah Quincy.

The biggest applause of the day, undoubtedly, went to the Rev. Edward Norton and Insurancemen Charles H. Porter, who announced that they would not speak but gave texts of their orations to be printed in the weekly paper, the Patriot.

The oratory ended, mercifully, at 6:40 p.m. and everyone adjourned to the Fireworks Grounds at the rear of the railroad station in South Quincy for a band concert at sunset and a display of fireworks after dark.

July 4th Cookout Specials
And Pray For Good Weather

Well, here it is the Fourth of July weekend again, can you believe it?

Here are a couple of recipes that I'll be using in our yearly cookout. First of all, I like to use individual skewers when I can (I pick up extras at yard sales and flea markets). It makes serving a lot easier.

For the chicken lovers, I cut up boneless chicken (from any part of the chicken) into almost bite size pieces. Then some fresh mushrooms, green pepper and fresh tomatoes and some onion. Place a piece of the chicken, followed by the mushroom, and so forth until each one will have at least three to four pieces of chicken with the vegetables in between.

With skewered steak you can use just pieces of sirloin steak which cook up quickly, goes a long way, and are tender along with mushrooms in between.

If you want to make frankfurters this way, cut franks in one inch lengths, spread with mustard and string on skewers alternately with pieces of pickle and onion wedges.

If you use lamb, it is a good idea to marinate for about an hour in whatever sauce you like from soy sauce and lemon juice to oil and vinegar (which I sometimes use along with fresh garlic).

And if you like chinese shish kebab, and are using pork, it is a good idea to precook the pork first (boil if you like) dip it in soy sauce, cornstarch and peanut oil, skewer between slices of pepper and cook until really done.

And if you think we get away without pasta, I usually serve this with some kind of pasta, either a fettucini, (white) or ziti and tomato sauce. Also white boiled rice goes well.

Happy holiday!

Marie D'Olimpio is the author of "Simply Italian-And Then Some," a collection of her own recipes. Copies of the book are available at That's Italian, Franklin St., South Quincy; Previte's Market, Sumner St., Quincy Point and Samosit Pharmacy, Samoset Ave., Merrymount.)

Tips For Self Protection While Driving

- Keep windows rolled up and doors locked at all times. Check your gauge to see if you have enough gasoline before leaving.
- Keep your purse and other valuables out of sight either under the seat or in the glove compartment.
- At intersections and stop lights, keep your car in gear. If you are threatened, blow the horn and drive away.
- Hitchikers should not be picked up, especially by a woman alone. Don't stop to help disabled drivers if you're alone; report them to police or a service station.
- If you have car trouble, raise your hood and stay inside with your doors locked. If a stranger stops, ask him to report your predicament to the nearest Police Department.
- If you are being followed, don't drive into your driveway or attempt to leave your car. Drive to the nearest police station or fire station or open business for help.
- Don't allow yourself to be forced to the curb; speed up or slow down, but keep driving. Write down the license number and description of the car and driver, and report the incident to police at once.
- Park in areas that will be well lighted when you return. Lock your doors. Put your valuables in a locked trunk or take them with you. Always check the rear seat and the floorboard before getting inside your car.
- Never leave keys to your home with your car keys when your car is left in a parking lot or service station. Get a pull-away key chain or separate your keys.

Regina Maris To Be 'Lighted'

Amelia Earhart Celebration At Marina Bay

REGINA MARIS, historic three-masted tall ship, has been outfitted with some 3,800 tiny white lights and permanently anchored at Marina Bay, Squantum. A lighting ceremony will take place tonight (Thursday) at 8:45 p.m. following an Amelia Earhart celebration that will start at 7:30 p.m.

Famed aviatrix Amelia Earhart will be remembered at a commemorative celebration tonight (Thursday) at Marina Bay, Squantum, starting at 7:30 p.m.

The celebration will kick off the July Fourth weekend activities at Marina Bay, Squantum which will include the lighting of the tall ship Regina Maris at 8:45 p.m.

Dennison Airport was near the present Marina Bay and was a forerunner of the former Squantum Naval Air Station.

Earhart and her co-pilot Fred Noonan were last heard from July 2, 1937 near Howland Island in the Pacific, not far from the Solomon Islands.

She would have been 89 this July 24.

Born in Atchison, Kans. July 24, 1898, her 39 years were marked by many accomplishments and associations. However, her love for aviation was what she pursued most actively.

In 1918, as a nurses' aide with the Canadian Red Cross, she first became interested in flying through her associations with members of the Royal Canadian Air Force. Two years later, during 1920, she trained for aviation at Rogers Airport in Los Angeles and later that year bought a second-hand plane.

In 1926, Earhart enrolled at Harvard Law School where she took up social work. Two years later she began teaching at Denison House, a Boston settlement and in the same year wrote the poem "Courage."

She also became one of five incorporators of Dennison Aircraft and flew out of the Dennison Airport near Marina Bay.

In June 1929, with Wilber Stultz as the pilot, she became the first woman to fly the Atlantic as a passenger. After this flight, she published the book, "20 Hours, 40 Minutes."

During this same year she became the aviation editor for Cosmopolitan Magazine. In 1931 her writing career was furthered when her second book, "For The Fun Of It," was published.

On May 20-21, 1932, Earhart became the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean. She set a record time of 13½ hours. She received numerous awards for this feat, and continued to make history.

On Jan. 11, 1935 she became the first woman to fly from Hawaii to the U.S. During that same year she flew non-stop from Mexico to New York City.

NQHS Calculus Team Strong

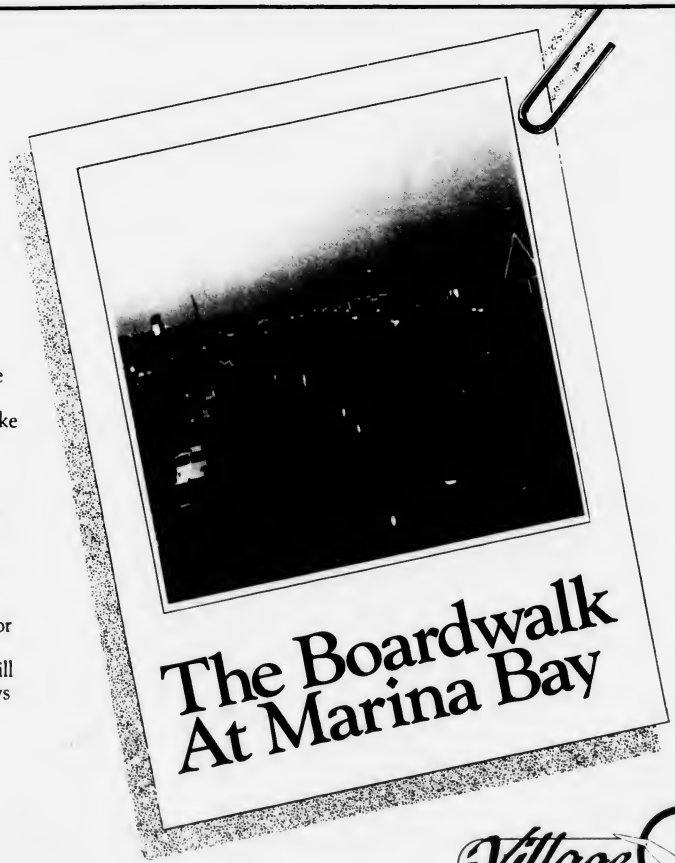
The final standing shows North Quincy High School in third place in New England and twenty-fourth place out of 250 teams in the United States.



Lisa Ramsden was the team's leading scorer this year, backed up by high scorers Cynthia Lee, Jennifer Shores and Martin Steeves.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Possibly because of the instant availability of news and opinions, many observers seem to be overwhelmed by the complexity and pace of today's living.

The problems of today are much better publicized than the problems of yesterday. Just because we know about more injustices and problems does not mean that there ARE more than before. Actually, issue for issue, today's troubles could be said to be "underwhelming" when compared with the long list of grievances against the King which are listed in the Declaration of Independence.

Our forefathers were revolutionary with good reasons and they built a solid foundation of freedom and opportunity on which it is our privilege to carry on what they began. Our forefathers did not promise us freedom from troubles and worries. What they gave us was a superb doctrine for dealing with them. Surely the problems we have (and they are real and they are many) can be solved by men of good will within the governmental, business and social frameworks which have served us so well for so long.

Let us all, as Americans, on this Fourth of July, pause and be thankful for that declaration that allows us to live in a free nation ...

McCauley Launches Campaign To 'Keep Our City Clean'

Mayor Francis McCauley announces he has initiated a "Let's Take Pride in Quincy and Keep Our City Clean," campaign.

With the summer months approaching and school in recess, residents should resolve to keep their properties tidy, he said.

McCauley said that "if a partnership comprised of city departments, businesses, civic and neighborhood organizations and most importantly, individual citizens like you and me -- if we all pitch in -- it will be easier to keep the city clean."

McCauley suggests that neighborhoods, groups and organizations enlist the aid of city councillors to initiate clean-up days. He further suggests that citizens organize problem areas to be targeted, and then tackle one area at a time.

McCauley is also urging local businesses to keep their properties free of debris and trash.

The mayor said, "We should instill the attitude that litter is everyone's business, not just the city government's. We should make it unfashionable to litter."

McCauley said that this should happen on all levels - no one is too old or too young to be aware that it is nicer to live in a city you can be proud of.

The Public Works, Cemetery and Park-Forestry Departments have been and will continue to work diligently to keep public areas clean, he said.

In addition, McCauley noted that the Downtown and Beautification Committee has done extensive work in refurbishing parks and traffic islands throughout the city. Many flowering shrubs have been planted, and trimming and mulching has taken place. Councillor Patricia Toland, chairwoman of the Downtown and Beautification Committee, announced the establishment of a small task force to survey areas and make precise recommendations for improvements.

This task force consists of Peter M. Kenney, executive secretary to the mayor, Frank McLaughlin of the Park Department and a representative of the Planning Department.

McCauley said all residents should take pride in Quincy and keep the city clean.

Quincy Receives $43,630 For 'Gateway Cities' Program

State Secretary of Communities and Development Amy S. Anthony has awarded $43,630 to Quincy to support local efforts to provide services to immigrants and newcomers.

The award, part of an innovative state initiative called Gateway Cities, provides resources to communities which have experienced an influx of newcomers so that special services, such as help in finding jobs and housing, can be provided.

"The new Gateway Cities program will make it easier for immigrants and refugees to share the economic success we have achieved in the commonwealth," Anthony said. "By providing services which address the specific problems facing newcomers, we are taking an important step towards eliminating the barriers to opportunity which often confront newcomers as they adapt to life in a new country."

The award to Quincy will pay for a broad range of services developed as part of a local plan to address newcomer needs. Among the services which will be provided as part of Quincy's Gateway Cities plan are:

- A community liaison worker will be hired by the city to act as an interpreter between city social services agencies and the Chinese and Vietnamese speaking communities and to assist in developing a resource directory in Chinese and Vietnamese.
- The city will also hire a consultant to identify and develop city programs and services to be targeted to newcomer groups;
- English as a Second Language (ESL) classes will be provided and ESL textbooks will be purchased for the Quincy Public Library's new Reader Project Tutoring Program for newcomer groups.

Anthony noted that Massachusetts is one of the only states in the country to target state resources to provide assistance to newcomer groups. "Governor Dukakis has often said that the economic health of the commonwealth must be shared by all its residents," Anthony said. "The Gateway Cities program, created by the state legislature, will help us make good on our shared commitment to provide economic, housing and social opportunities for all."

The $11 million in Gateway Cities program funds will be shared by 26 communities throughout the commonwealth which are experiencing an influx of newcomer groups. The awards, determined by formula based on a community's immigrant and refugee population, support locally-developed plans to address the specific needs of newcomer groups living in the community.

Wollaston Memorial Restored As Part Of Park System

The Wollaston Memorial located at the intersection of Route 3A and Hancock St. in Wollaston has been restored and will become a permanent memorial in the city's park system.

Originally designed and created by Paul Riccardi of Wollaston, it was located in Safford Park on Beale St. in Wollaston to replace the World War I Howitzer placed in the park after World War I. The Howitzer was removed during World War II and donated to the Scrap Drive conducted to secure needed metal.

For many years the site was vacant except for a plaque telling of the Howitzer existence. After its new Post home was built on Weston Ave., Wollaston Legion Post conducted a Public subscription program within the Wollaston community, secured the services of Paul Riccardi and the memorial was placed in Safford Park. A capsule with a listing of the subscribers was placed in the memorial.

The memorial was then vandalized and pulled down at the Safford Park site. Again Riccardi restored the memorial and it was moved to the corner of Weston Ave on the Wollaston Post Home site and remained there until the Post home was sold.

Through the efforts of Mayor Francis McCauley its present site became available with the cooperation and assistance of Phillip Ricciuti of the Hancock Monument Company and Richard Koch, executive director of the Quincy park, forestry and cemetery departments. The memorial was moved to its present site adjacent to Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Then came another setback. It was broken as a result of an accident. Once again it needed restoration.

Joseph Cunniff and Arthur Senter, past commanders of Wollaston Post, were appointed to coordinate efforts with Mayor McCauley's office represented by Koch.

The memorial was recreated by the James C. Cunniff Monument Corp. of Quincy and erected under Koch's direction.

The cartridge containing the names of the subscribers for the original memorial, carefully preserved through the restoration of the memorial has been placed within the memorial and dedicated to the men and women of Wollaston who served this nation in times of war.

Sterling School Presents $1600 Check To Fight Drugs

Students and faculty of the Sterling Middle School recently concluded their participation in Quincy's "Drug Awareness" week by releasing 200 helium-filled balloons and presenting a $1,600 check to Project Feelings, Inc.

A Quincy-based drug research organization, Project Feelings is led by executive director Jack Donahue. It is a non-profit organization.

The funds, raised by students and faculty through the sale of candy bars, were presented to Donahue.

Sterlins assistant principal Richard Hutchison, coordinator of the drive, said, "The volunteer serve project was inspired by the students' gratitude for an April 3 assembly program and workshops given at the school by Mr. Donahue and his brother Brian, a former NY Jets lineman."

"We are very proud of our students' enthusiasm and great capacity for giving their time and service for worthwhile causes."

Both Hutchison and Donahue agreed that students' reception of drug awareness messages and their active involvement in promoting drug free lifestyles were "very promising signs of a healthy future for the city of Quincy."

According to Donahue, the donation from Sterling will be used for a new part of the program, "For Parents Only."

"Parents can call and we'll bring a panel to speak," said Donahue.

For Parents Only will start in Quincy and expand to Hingham, according to Donahue.

The following inscription will also appear on the tower:

"In the 1930's, Dennison Airport was founded and became an important landmark in this area. It hosted national air shows and flights by famous aviators, among them, Amelia Earhart.

"As World War II approached, and America's focus turned from the seas to the skies, the Victory Plant was transformed into the Squantum Naval Air Station. Many pilots who fought in the skies over Europe and the South Pacific were trained in the skies over Quincy.

Mayor Signs 30 Zoning Change Orders

"These are some of the most important documents I will sign," said McCauley.

"No one here is against development per se, but it has to be harnessed and channeled."

The zoning orders were proposed by the City Council's Zoning Task Force established last year by Councillor Stephen McGrath. Some were also suggested by Citizens Advocating Proper Planning (CAPP).

Among the zoning orders are decreases in the height of buildings in any given district, limiting density, and requiring a hearing before the Zoning Board of Appeals to cross over from one zoning designation to another, explained Planning Director Richard Meade.

"The orders protect the interest of the city," said Meade, a task force member.

McGrath noted that there had not been an overview of the city's zoning regulations since the early 1970s.

"The city was in danger of an uncontrolled growth spurt," said McGrath. "We needed ordinances which would take us into the 1990s and year 2000."

Councillor Thomas Nutley, chairman of the task force, said, "The key is that we are not halting development, we're just reducing it a bit."

Peter Kolson of Germantown said, "Young people can be justifiably proud of our elected officials and citizens group which looked after their interests."

Nutley noted that developers have not been "tremendously upset" with the zoning changes.

He also said that 34 of 57 recommendations have been brought in, and more will be coming forward.

Nutley said that some buildings already underway will still be constructed under the old zoning regulations.

Kelly To Head McGrath Campaign

City Council president, Stephen J. McGrath announces that former council president, Leo J. Kelly has agreed to serve as campaign manager for McGrath's campaign for Councillor at Large.

"I am very pleased that Leo has agreed to take on management of my campaign," said McGrath.

"Leo's knowledge of the city makes him an invaluable asset to my campaign and I look forward to his input and counsel," said McGrath.

Kelly said, "As a past council president, I know what is required for a successful leadership role on the City Council.

"Having served with Steve for six years and having observed him as council president, I believe Steve has shown those qualities of leadership and concern for Quincy."

"I would like to assist him as much as possible in seeing him continue on the Council at an At Large capacity so the people of the city can benefit from Steve's knowledge, experience and leadership," Kelly said.

Morrisette Takes First With 4 Wins In Row

The Morrisette Legion baseball team completed the first half of the season in grand fashion, winning four straight to finish in first place in Zone 6 with a 7-2 record.

Morrisette won all three games last week.

Morrisette defeated Canton 6-1 paced by the outstanding pitching of Wayne Chambers. Chambers allowed just one Canton hit and one unearned run. He struck out nine and walked four.

In his three starts, Chambers has given up five hits and one earned run. He has helped Morrisette tremendously, as number two pitcher Dan Overby has not fully recovered from tendonitis.

Chambers also helped his own cause, driving in the go-ahead run in the second with the game knotted at 1-1. He drove in Chris Ricciuti who was aboard on an error and moved to second on Ron Fletcher's single.

Morrisette's first run came in the bottom of the first when Steve Minichiello walked, moved to second on a wild pitch and scored on a Dan Biagini single.

Canton got their lone run in the second on two walks and a throwing error on a sacrifice bunt.

Morrisette scored two in the fifth and two more in the sixth. In the fifth, Billy McDougal singled and scored on Mike Mullaney's double and Rob McDonald singled home Mullaney.

In the sixth, McDougal drove in Fletcher who had walked and stole second. McDougal scored on a throwing error after stealing second.

Steve Minichiello made the defensive play of the game, making a diving shoe-string catch on a fly ball to right field.

Morrisette also downed Quincy by a 6-1 score. Larry Taglieri pitched his fourth complete game to bring his record to 4-1. Taglieri allowed one unearned run, walked one and scattered six hits while striking out six.

Quincy got on the board first when Jim Dennis singled, moved to second on a wild pitch and came home on Kyle Robertson's single.

Morrisette answered with one in the second on a Rob McDonald single, Ron Fletcher's walk, a fielder's choice and a single by Billy McDougal. They went ahead for good in the third when Dan Biagini doubled home Taglieri who had singled and stole second.

Quincy had a two-out threat in the bottom of the fourth when Peter Tufts and Joe Gately singled but were left stranded.

Morrisette scored four runs in the sixth to put it away. A single by McDonald, a sacrifice by Fletcher and infield throwing error brought in McDonald. Chris Ricciuti drove in a run and he was brought in by McDougal's triple. Mullaney knocked in McDougal.

Billy McDougal went three for three for two RBI. Rob McDonald had three hits and Dan Biagini had two hits and an RBI.

Rob Higgins started for Quincy and took the loss. Steve Happas came in for relief.

Happas and Tim Baker had Quincy's other hits.

Morrisette and pitcher Wayne Chambers (3-0) had little trouble with Holbrook, breaking the game wide open with a 13-run second inning.

Chambers went six innings, giving up four hits, four walks and fanning 10. None of Holbrook's runs were earned.

Morrisette put together 20 hits for their 20 runs, led by Billy McDougal's four hits and two RBIs. Dan Biagini had three hits, including a homerun and triple for 3 RBIs. Steven Minichiello had three hits and two RBIs. Mike Mullaney had three hits, Rob McDonald two hits and two RBIs, Larry Taglieri two hits and one RBI and Chambers two hits and an RBI. Chris Ricciuti also knocked in a run with a single.

Morrisette plays Wollaston at Adams Field Friday at 8:30, Milton at Adams on Monday and travels to Braintree in a very important game next Wednesday at 8 p.m.

TIM COLLINS of Quincy has completed his sophomore season as a goalie on the Norwich University varsity hockey team. He had an 8-6 record with a .903 saves percentage and a 2.90 goals against average, both among the top ten in the ECAC East.

After a shaky start, Cable settled down defensively, especially Schatzel who made two difficult catches in left field. Sullivan and Ryan Ackerman also made outstanding putouts.

Quincy Tennis Club Marks Centennial

The activities include an on-site clambake and singalong, a centennial tournament and a fall dinner-dance.

The club, perhaps the oldest tennis club in the country and the most historic, has a rich, distinguished history. Many players in the New England area and beyond have competed on its red clay courts. The members own and operate the club which is open from early May until mid-November.

The club was established in 1887 when a group met in Quincy to form a "lawn tennis club." Elected at that first meeting were president Perry Lawton, vice president Rev. H.E. Cotton and secretary-treasurer W.W. Osborne. Named to the executive board were Henry M. Faxon, Walter B. Holden, Walter N. Packard and Paul R. Blackmur.

A committee consisting of the officers and Ellis Faxon drew up a constitution. Dues for me were $3, for women $1 and a $5 initiation fee. A tract of land was made available on Bigelow St. for three dirt courts.

In the first tournament on Sept. 17, 1887 Herbert M. Federhen defeated James F. Harlow, 7-5, 6-1, 8-6.

The social high point was the annual dance held on Feb. 15, 1889, at the old opera house.

In the first decade of this century the club's annual March meeting was held in the parlor of the old Greenleaf Hotel. There the members voted to relocate the club to land owned by Dr. N.S. Hunting near the Woodard School for Girls and build a clubhouse designed in the New England shingle style. In 1905 the members voted to build two additional courts for $100.

In the summer of 1910 the club hosted the Argentine Naval Commission on detail at Fore River.

In 1914 the club drafted a constitution. The language, written five years before passages of the 19th amendment, appears quaint and humorous today. Women were given "the full rights of the club except the right to vote and such other restrictions as the Board of Governors may from time to time impose."

Since the club did not own its land, the membership determined in 1913 to find a new location. A committee headed by Quincy banker J. Brooks Keyes recommended purchase of land near the corner of Goffe St. (President's Lane) and Glendale Rd.

The site-on land owned and cultivated by John and Abigail Adams a century earlier--was described as "a delightful setting on a knoll covered with oaks and cedars." The clubhouse was also relocated to this new setting where the club has remained to this day.

League tennis became popular at this time and Quincy's arch rival was the Wollaston Tennis Club (long since disbanded). In an exchange recorded in the club's minutes, Quincy demanded that Wollaston relinquish its "winners shield" for failure to follow the Wright and Ditson tennis rules by importing non-member "ringers" from Boston.

The exchange was minor compared to the club's battle in 1913 with the Rev. Benjamin C. Wilmott, pastor of Bethany Congregational Church. The issue - playing tennis on the Sabbath.

In his sermon the Rev. Wilmott denounced Sunday tennis playing by well-to-do people of the city. It was unfair, he said, to prevent hard working men of the Fore River yards and granite quarries from playing Sunday baseball and allow the well-to-do class to play tennis on Sunday.

Wilmott said he was not in favor of Sunday baseball but that he believed in a square deal for all.

The following Sunday Chief Burrell and Inspector Goodhue made a "sudden visit" to the club where they found eight doubles in action with a large gallery of many well-known society women of the city. The chief threatened arrest of players and witnesses creating no end of furor.

The club hired a lawyer and some members suggested that a test case be made. The executive committee decided otherwise and opted to end Sunday play. The Patriot Ledger headlined "the surrender of the tennis club" calling it "a signal victory for Rev. Wilmott, a relentless foe of Sunday violations."

Two prominent Quincy men, George S. Plaffman and J. Brooks Keyes, guided the progress of the club the years between the wars. Plaffman, Quincy's WPA administrator during the depression, died in 1936 in his 24th year as club president.

In 1956 the George F. Plaffman memorial trophy was placed in competition and is awarded to the men's singles champion for the year.

The continuance of the club during the war years is credited to the late James P. Pennypacker. Last year's club yearbook eulogizes him with the following: "Not just a club member, but a truly contributing member of the club for over 30 years."

The 1950s and 1960s saw steady progress at the club but in recent years the club has faced and survived problems, mainly vandalism and aged plumbing. Vandals torched the clubhouse in November, 1979, resulting in its total loss. In 1982 the ancient sewer line which connected the club to Glendale Rd. gave in, requiring immediate replacement. Both problems necessitated considerable fund raising. However, the challenge was met and today a new clubhouse stands built by member subscription.

In its 100th season the club has a large, active membership and provides reasonably priced tennis from May until November.

Trophies are awarded yearly to members who distinguish themselves in various areas. Besides the Plaffman trophy the Edna Miller Follett award is given to the female champion. The H. Hobart Holly award honors the most promising junior and the Harry Prolman service award rewards the member who has made the greatest contribution to the club.

Today's membership lists contrast with those of 100 years ago. The aristocratic surnames have largely vanished and today's names reflect the ethnic diversity of the 1980s. Nor are the members the socially elite of Rev. Wilmott's day, but rather represent various professions and trades. And they play daily, including Sunday.

Among the notable members is Dr. Philip Maloney who, since 1958, has garnered 40 titles at the club in three adult events. Joseph Horak of Milton, 80 years old and nationally ranked, competes daily.

Florida Style Tourney At Ponkapoag

Dorea McConaghy of Quincy, Mary Michaels and Rita Rogers finished first with a gross 44 in a recent Florida style tournament at the Ponkapoag Ladies' golf inner club.

A nine-hole medal play tournament - was also held with Pat Fitzgerald taking top honors with a net 35.

In a three-way tie for second were Eleanor Verdin, Bonnie Thompson and Joan Heck with a net 37.

Mary Carchedi and Bert Sigilman scored 38 to tie for third.

Granite City Electric Wins Pair, Loses One

In the first game, Granite edged a very competitive Bryan Post VFW team, 6-5. Mike Picariello was the winning pitcher, settling down after giving up four first inning runs.

Bryan Post jumped out to a quick 4-0 lead on hits by Jamie Greene, Mark Kelliher and Donnie Anderson, a walk to Brian O'Malley and errors by Granite.

Picariello did not give another hit in his six and two thirds innings of pitching. He was relieved by hard-throwing Tony Anderlionis who fanned three of the last four VFW hitters.

Brian O'Malley, one of the league's most improved players, allowed only six hits to Granite. Unfortunately, five of those hits came during a five-run second inning for Granite.

Erik DeBoer, Angelo Kyranis and Steve Wysocki all had consecutive singles. Dave Gamsby hit a three-run single and centerfielder Jim Munroe drove in Gamsby with a single.

Granite City's last run was scored in the third when Wayne Sit's line drive single to right field knocked in DeBoer who had walked.

Rightfielder Steve Wysocki made the play of the game, throwing out a VFW hitter at first base on what seemed to be a clean single.

Granite City continued its winning ways with a victory over the Elks. Granite rallied to score eight runs in the last two innings to beat the Elks, 16-7.

Steve Wysocki held the Elks to one run in the first inning. In the second, the Elks scored five runs on Greg Clifford's double, singles to Jim McCarthy and Pat Clifford and walks to Dana Gurwitch and Mike Cahill.

Dave Gamsby relieved Wysocki and gave up one run on seven hits. He hung on to improve his record to 6-0.

For the Elks, pitcher Mike Beatrice had a triple and two singles. Gurwitch, Mike Cahill and McManus all had singles.

Granite City collected 10 hits. Picariello and Gamsby had triples, Steve Wysocki a double and Andy Colleary, Tony Anderlionis (2), Angelo Kyranis (2) and Eddie Costello (2) all had singles.

Granite City's bid for a perfect week fell short as the Fireman upset Granite, 5-4. Fireman's Jason Doyle pitched a strong two hitter to knock off a 13-3 Granite City Electric club. Doyle struck out six and walked only three.

Granite's Gamsby led off the game with a single and scored when Anderlionis' ground ball was misplayed. Erik DeBoer's single was the only other Granite hit.

Going into the six, Granite held a 3-2 lead by Jim Maloney and Billy Eddy singled and four Granite errors gave the Fireman three runs to win the game.

Fireman's outstanding catcher Brian Taylor had two singles and three stolen bases. Steve Neiters contributed a double.

Mike Baylis played exceptionally well in centerfield and chipped in with a double. Shortstop Billy Monteith had incredible range, making many fine plays.

Also contributing to the Fireman's win were Brian Comeau, Mark Portesi and Tom Courtney.

Local 1139 Wins Pair In Quest Of Berth

Local 1139 maintained their second place position in their quest for a playoff berth with a pair of victories last week.

Against Barry's Deli, Local won 13-6 led by Christine Barrett's four hits and three RBIs, including the game winner. Christine, the first girl ever to play in Quincy Babe Ruth, had one double and three singles.

Along with Barrett, other offensive stars were Scott Dunn (two singles, one RBI), Gary Rawdon (two singles, RBI), Steve Kohler (double, single, two RBI) and Fred Regan (single, two RBI). Steve Sumpter, John Shea and Tony Stafford all had singles.

Rawdon also pitched a fine game, scattering seven hits and allowing three walks.

Barry's Deli was paced by Jimmy Glynn, who had a double, and two RBIs. Glynn also played sound defense.

In the second game, Local 1139 downed the Elks, 11-3, behind the five-hit, eight-strikeout pitching of John Shea.

Local offensive stars were Greg Hohmann (double, two singles, two RBIs), Regan (three singles, RBI), Kohler (double, single, four RBIs) and Sumpter (two singles, two RBIs). Rawdon, Shea and Gallagher all had singles.

Chris Beatrice played well for the Elks.

Mulkern Fires 3-Hitter For Bryan Post

Bryan Post enjoyed a successful week, winning two games, defeated Police, 4-2 behind Sean Mulkern's outstanding three-hit pitching performance.

Mulkern dominated the game, going three for three, stealing two bases and scoring two runs.

Bryan increased its lead to 3-1 in the third as Mulkern led with a single, stole second and scored on two infield outs.

Police pulled within one in the fourth as Tom Kiveavy scored to make it 3-2 but could not score the equalizer.

Bryan closed out the scoring with a pad run in the fifth on Steven Waas' sacrifice and Pat McDonough's single.

During the last three innings, Mulkern received spectacular defensive support from Brian O'Malley, Kevin Mullay, Donnie Anderson, Mark Kelleher and Waas who all turned in terrific plays to seal the victory.

McDonough had two hits and Jamie Greene, Chris Stennon, Michael Malvesti, Joe Marnikovic and Paul Murphy also contributed to the Bryan win.

Shortstop Mike Iacobacci and second baseman Mike Doherty anchored the Police defense.

In other action, Bryan Post defeated Morrisette 11-6 with pitchers Waas and McDonough combining for nine strikeouts. They allowed two walks and one earned run.

Morrisette led 5-1 going into the last of th fifth but Bryan rallied with ten runs on ten hits in the fifth and sixth to notch the victory.

O'Malley had three hits while Waas, Mulkern, Mullary and Malvesti each had two. Aaron Sullivan and McDonough had the other hits.

Steven Loud, Kelleher, Stenmon, Murphy and Marnikovic also performed well for Bryan.

Morrisette's offence was led by Rich Keddy and Cunio who had two hits each. David Hutchins, David McManus and Stephen Keddy also singled.

William Reardon Ward 3 Council Candidate

Reardon has lived in Quincy nearly all his life and has been a resident and taxpayer of Ward 3 for over 50 years, he said.

Husband of the late Mary E. (Nogueira) Reardon, he was graduated from North Quincy High School, as were his four children. He has 16 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren, some of whom reside in Quincy.

Reardon also attended the Franklin Institute and a labor school in Boston.

Retired from the Mass. Bay Transit Authority, he was the elected union representative of all hourly employees in the Boilermakers Local 651 at the O.G. Kelly Co., Dorchester.

He held the position for 12 years until the company closed the plant.

As such, Reardon negotiated union contracts and settled grievances between the company and employees. He was also an officer in the Boilermakers Local 651.

Reardon was a member of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilders Workers of America AFL-CIO Local #25, Boston.

A member of the Quincy Citizens Association for over five years, he is a member of the John P. McKeon Post No. 146.

He has been a volunteer at the Sidney Farber Cancer Institute for over eight years, logging in over 1,300 hours. He is also a volunteer at the Children's Hospital and the Wednesday Night Supper Club at the Long Island Shelter for the Homeless.

Reardon said he is concerned about the future of the quality of life in Quincy.

He has been speaking out about the sewage, traffic, rubbish and water problems of Quincy, and the overdevelopment of neighborhoods.

Reardon also said he is against the new Zone D being extended in business areas in Wollaston and North Quincy and wants to put a two-year moratorium on all new construction.

He supports the Quincy Citizen's Association petition on limiting the height, density and parking for new buildings in Quincy.

"I will work for the citizens of Ward 3 to insure that their neighborhoods remain residential and that their needs and concerns are met," said Reardon.

Text Of Lydon's Statement Not To Seek Re-election

(Following is the text of Ward 3 Councillor John Lydon's statement that he will not seek re-election this year.)

"Recently I was preparing my campaign for re-election and considering strategies, finances, functions, door knocking, bumper stickers, signs and all the components that go into campaigning and I thought to myself that I really did not want to spend my summer campaigning - I did not want to go out knocking on doors for votes - I didn't want to ask my friends to go out and get nomination papers signed - put on bumper stickers - or put signs on their lawns. I have served on the Quincy City Council for 14 years - campaigning every two - that is six long summer campaigns. I have concluded that I do not feel like doing it again.

The week before last, as my family and I discussed the upcoming campaign, I realized something that I had not seen before. I was running for re-election to my council seat not because I wanted to be part of the city council any longer - not because I had any major objectives or goals to achieve in city government, but because I was being challenged. I was about to spend the summer doing what I really did not want to do. I have always been one to accept a challenge. However, at some point we have the good sense to ask ourself - to what end! Are the sacrifices entailed really worth it? Is it really what you want?

To a great degree, I have achieved the goals I have established for myself at this point in my life. Clearly, my family is my first and most important consideration. My children are adults and I am a grandfather. They have, each in their own right, achieved success. My marriage has been blessed with good fortune and my wife and I enjoy good health. My business has grown beyond my expectations. I find that as each year passes, vacation time becomes more important to my family and to me - I like it that way.

"Government in Quincy has changed and I realize that change is inevitable, and with time, it does seem as though the proverbial pendulum does exist. Government seems to be missing the qualities that I once admired and enjoyed. The great sense of camaraderie that once existed is no longer there and the philosophy of one for all and all for one that I so much espouse is missing.

I have always enjoyed government - it was a means of providing for people - helping people - friends - neighbors - and the community. Government for me has become dour - it is overly concerned with regulation and has forced us into the role of regulators - I have never perceived myself in this type of role.

In short, government is no longer a challenge - the source of achievement and enjoyment that it once was - therefore, I choose not to seek re-election to the Ward 3 City Council seat.

Government has been good for me and it has added a dimension and a richness to my life that I would not have otherwise experienced. I feel my tenure in office was during a meaningful period in Quincy's growth and I believe that to that end, my contribution to our community has had some significance. Government has allowed me to meet many people that I would not otherwise have had the opportunity and pleasure to become acquainted with. Government had allowed me to accomplish goals, that given a life devoid of government service, I would not have had the ability to achieve. My 14 years are an experience rich in reward and deep in satisfaction.

To each of you, my fellow councillors, my wishes are for your best in whatever future endeavors you choose to undertake. To the people of the city, I have given you my best.

One-Man Patrol Cars Start July 15

The first phase of the Police Study Implementation Project, established by the city last year, has been successfully launched, according to Mayor Francis McCauley.

"When the Police Department initiates its new one-man patrols on July 15, the city will then be able to point to a number of important initial steps taken to improve police department efficiency," said McCauley.

The Police Study Implementation Committee was created to oversee implementation of recommendations made in a controversial report on the Quincy Police Department that was submitted by the Field Services Division of the Massachusetts Municipal Association in October, 1986, McCauley said.

The committee is comprised of representatives of the Mayor's Office, the Police Department and the City Council (Councillors James Sheets and Michael Cheney).

It has encouraged facilitation of MMA recommendations aimed at professionalizing and modernizing the Police Department.

The MMA consultants recommended stronger overall management and internal controls, better utilization of personnel, enhanced training at various levels, improved management and planning practices through more effective use of computer technology and their systems, and restructuring of the department, he said.

"I am pleased with the progress we have made toward building a stronger, more responsive Police Department," Mayor McCauley stated. "Of course, there is still much work to be done. This is only a start. But it is a very promising start, and it demonstrates the city's commitment to public safety and management efficiency."

Police Chief Francis Finn did not comment.

Mayor McCauley cited specific improvements to the Police Department operations including the following:

- New patrol cars with modern features.
- Creation of a new shift, the so-called impact shift, which reassigns officers to peak activity periods.
- Increased supervision of patrol cars.
- A new internal affairs capability within the department to improve community relations.
- Strengthening the department's training program.
- A research and planning capability.
- Enhanced internal communication with the department.
- Computerization of department operation.

According to Brent Wilkes, director of the Massachusetts Municipal Association's Field Services Division, "Quincy has made impressive progress toward improving management and operations of the Police Department."

In MMA's report to McCauley, the report states, "While the consultants and the Police Department do not agree on all the recommendations and issues, there has been enough common ground to achieve measurable results.

The Field Services Division of MMA is the leading organization providing consulting services and technical assistance to Massachusetts cities and towns, he said.

Mayor McCauley stressed that "progress is due in large part to the team spirit and cooperative attitudes of those who have participated in the project. I very much appreciate the constructive role of the Police Department and the useful advice and assistance from the consultants at the Massachusetts Municipal Association."

McCauley also noted that he has approved Chief Francis X. Finn's request to begin the process of accreditation for the Police Department.

The City Council voted Monday night to appropriate $5,600 toward that process.

Houghs Neck Bonfire Cancelled Because Of Danger

The annual bonfire on Edgewater Drive, a long-time tradition for residents of the Rock Island Road area, has been cancelled, according to Councillor Michael T. Cheney.

Cheney said that the Quincy Fire Department cannot issue a permit to hold a bonfire because of the danger that the bonfire would pose to abutting residents.

Several residents at a meeting of the July 3 Edgewater Drive Celebration Committee expressed concern that the dump has been closed and contractors are already showing up with wood to be dumped on the beach for the bonfire.

Residents have requested that the city enforce the maximum fine for illegal dumping and $200 for the transportation of illegal fill - bringing a total fine of $400, said Cheney.

"I understand the concerns of my neighbors, therefore, at their request this year's bonfire will be cancelled, and anyone dumping wood on Edgewater Drive beach will be fined a maximum of $400," Cheney said.

"I have requested, through Captain William Murphy, that patrols be beefed up in the Edgewater Drive area for the purpose of preventing any wood or debris from being dumped on Edgewater Drive."

Many residents filed complaints that substantial damage was caused to their property by unruly crowds of drinkers who did not live in Quincy and have requested that the Quincy Police maintain the same level of police service on the night of July 3 at Edgewater Drive that was allocated last year, according to Cheney.

The residents in the vicinity of Edgewater Drive look forward to a peaceful July 4 weekend, he said.

North Quincy Meeting On Drinking, Vandalism

Ward 6 Councillor Thomas J. Nutley, in conjunction with the Atlantic Neighborhood Association, has scheduled a community meeting with the Quincy Police Department and representatives to address the problems of drinking and vandalism in various areas of North Quincy.

The meeting will be tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m., at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 12 Hunt St.

"We have a law prohibiting drinking in our streets and parks. It should be enforced," said Nutley.

The drinking and boisterousness in the North St. area and Welcome Young Playground area coupled with the shooting out of car windows on North and South Bayfield Rds. and nearby streets recently has caused residents to be very apprehensive and angry, Nutley said.

"The example set for children by beer drinking adults at Welcome Young is a disgrace," said Nutley. "Let's nip-it-in-the-bud and enforce the open container law now," he said.

All North Quincy residents are welcome to attend the meeting which will begin at 7 p.m., Thursday, July 2, at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 12 Hunt St.

Wollaston Doughnut Shop License Transfer Approved

The City License Board Tuesday granted a request from Antonio Andrade of A&A Donuts, Inc., doing business as Dunkin' Donuts, 687 Hancock St., Wollaston, for a transfer of the common victualer license as held by Dandi Donuts of the same location.

Andrade and his attorney, Robert Fleming, told the board that they have plans to remodel the building so that the side which is used as a deli in the existing establishment would become office space for Andrade, who currently owns Dunkin' Donut shops in other locations including Holbrook, Braintree and Hingham.

Fleming told the board that two neighborhood meetings have been held and that none of the residents on Chapman St., which is behind the shop, are in opposition to the proposal.

They also told the board that they are willing to install an outdoor trash compactor which will be run once a day to cut down on trash build-up and that they would have the compactor enclosed.

The board granted the transfer with the stipulation that the remodeling plans be submitted to the board for inspection before any reconstruction begins and that no free-standing sign be erected at the site.

Now Is Time To Apply For College Financial Aid

Rep. Robert A. Cerasoli reminds constituents that now is the time for people thinking about going to college next fall to apply for financial aid.

Students and parents who have questions about filing out financial aid applications can call the Higher Education Information Center's toll-free information hotline at 1-800-442-1171 for assistance.

Trained counselors will answer questions about completing applications and about financial aid programs.

The center is open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday; and 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday (Octover through May).

Rep. Cerasoli pointed out that despite stories about budget cuts and lack of funds, numerous financial aid programs exist to help families afford increasing college costs.

Aid is available through the Massachusetts State Scholarship Office, the federal government, and colleges, as well as private sources such as foundations and community groups, he said.

Massachusetts residents applying for aid should complete the Massachusetts Financial Aid Form (MFAF), according to Cerasoli. The form is available from high school guidance and college financial aid offices as well as the Higher Education Information Center's office at the Boston Public Library, 666 Boylston St., Boston, he said.

A brochure describing various financial aid sources for Massachusetts residents is available free of charge from the Higher Education Information Center upon request, Cerasoli said.

"I hope that anyone who needs financial assistance to attend college will make use of the services of the Higher Education Information Center," said Cerasoli. "The opportunity to go to college should be taken advantage of by everyone."

Massasoit Merger Opposed

Rally Supports QJC As Community College

Business and professional leaders, political figures and students attended a community breakfast rally Wednesday to show strong support for keeping Quincy Junior College as it is.

At the same time, those attending firmly opposed a proposal to merge Quincy QJC under Massasoit Community College with no Quincy area representation on the governing board.

They also called for the state to provide financial help to students attending QJC.

The Community College Association of Quincy and the South Shore and the Board of Trustees of the Quincy Junior College Foundation jointly hosted the rally at the college.

The meeting was led by Paul Hunt, chairman of the Community College Associates, and Peter Eleey, chairman of the Board of Trustees.

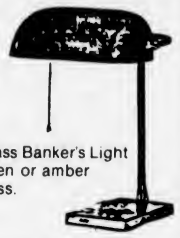
Hunt spoke of the history of service the city of Quincy had provided to the Commonwealth through Quincy Junior College, and argued that the state should provide help to the students attending the college.

Eleey expressed his group's strong support for QJC to continue its service to the city of Quincy, and that there be some form of local control of the college.

Other community leaders continue to support the need for community college services to exist.

Students also spoke out on their need for college programs to continue in Quincy. Some noted they were single parents without resources to attend college in another part of the Commonwealth. They also spoke of the high quality of education they receive at Quincy Junior College.

The groups were firm in their rejection of a proposal submitted by the Board of Regents which as submitted would merge Quincy Junior College under Massasoit Community College with no Quincy area representation on the governing board.



It was noted that although it sppears that the proposal would benefit QJC students through lower tuition it offers no guarantees of program continuation in Quincy. It indicates the planning board, made up of Massasoit officials and the Chancellor of Higher Education's office will decide which programs ought to be moved from Quincy, according to the groups. The plan further offers no guarantees of continued employment to current faculty and staff of the college, they said.

If programs are moved from Quincy to the Massasoit campuses in Brockton or Blue Hills without careful review, it was pointed out students attending QJC could be cut off from their programs without ability to finish them as there are no easy ways to get to either of these schools unless they have access to a car which many QJC students do not.

Both groups considered the rally to be a success and expressed the hope that the legislative bodies would take note and work to resolve the Quincy issue fairly and impartially.

Quincy Junior College has 1000 full time students, 250 part time day students and 200 evening students.

McCauley To Name 2 To Zoning Board

Mayor Francis McCauley said he hopes to appoint fourth and fifth members to the Zoning Board of Appeals before that body holds its next meeting July 14.

McCauley's action follows the City Council's passage Monday night of his order to increase the three member board to five members.

The mayor had made the proposal in 1986, but the council turned it down last year.

This week, it was passed unanimously. A public hearing had been held earlier this month at which zoning board chairman Peter MacDonald had been among those to speak in favor of increasing the board members.

"I'm very pleased that it was passed," said McCauley, "and I want to thank the City Council.

"This brings us in line with most cities of our size, and will provide more input to a very important board," he said.

The current members of the unpaid board will be reappointed, according to McCauley.

In addition to MacDonald, they are Anthony Sandonato and Michael Faherty.

Their three year terms will be realigned to five year terms, he said.

McCauley also said that qualified women would be considered for the new positions on the board.

City of Quincy, Massachusetts

Office of the Mayor

Welcome to Historic Quincy

As the Mayor of the City of Quincy, it is with great pride and pleasure that I welcome you to the City of Presidents.

Quincy's Historic Trail is not a road by which one follows history, but rather a way by which one may experience contact with a rich and diverse history.

Quincy, Massachusetts conjures up a wealth of images in many people. The rich history, the abundance of important historical sites, the source of granite for famous structures, the building place of many ships, the home town of famous people; all of these are distinctions that belong to Quincy alone.

We continue to acknowledge our history and our heritage. Quincy recently celebrated the 250th anniversary of President John Adams' birth. In the words of President Adams, "I made a Constitution for Massachusetts which finally made the Constitution of the United States." Thus, as the nation approaches the 200th anniversary of the United States Constitution, it will be with special pride that Quincy will watch the celebration of the Constitution, whose origins are traced to Adams' law office right here in Quincy.

It has been over 350 years since the first Europeans settled in what is now Quincy and we have been a city for very nearly 100 of those years. From being a small trading post to a city of over 88,000, Quincy has kept pace with the changing world around it, but has retained a distinctive identity that is based in its proud past.

In the pages ahead, you will read about places and men and women that have played significant roles in the history of our city and our nation. I think you will agree with me that Quincy is indeed rich in historic heritage. I urge you to visit the "Church of the Presidents" (First Parish Church) and our City Hall, and while you are in Quincy Center, take time to visit the Adams Academy (site of the birthplace of John Hancock) and a U.S. Landmark, the Hancock Cemetery. All of these historic sites are within a short walking distance of one another and are excellent examples of Quincy's heritage preserved for her visitors and citizens of today.

I hope your visit to Quincy will be a rewarding and memorable learning experience and that you will return again.

Sincerely yours,

Francis X. McCauley

After Six-Year Renewal Project

John Adams Birthplace Now Like It Was

After six years of reconstruction, the birthplace of John Adams, the second president of the United States, looks like it did when he and his parents, Deacon John and Susanna, lived there.

Visitors to the John Adams Birthplace, which peers over the shoulder of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace on Franklin St., South Quincy, can now see more completely how the house looked.

It is open to the public this year for the third time since restoration began.

The only furnishings in the house when it opened to the public two years ago were a table, bench and two chairs in the kitchen and a chest of drawers on another room.

"The house is nicely furnished now and looks like it did when they lived in it. We have had made every piece of furniture that was in the house. It was a giant task," said Wilhelmina Harris, superintendent of the Adams National Historic Site.

The final renovation touches were to the room where Deacon John Adams made shoes.

The rooms are furnished from the period of Deacon John and his wife and probably reflect her taste, said Mrs. Harris. "They are furnished not elaborately, but sufficiently to have a lived-in look," she said.

The birthplace was probably built in the late 17th or early 18th Century for less than $1,000 in the pounds of the day and the clapboards were hand-hewn from trees that grew in its fields.

The pine clapboards of the John Adams Birthplace are unpainted and the U.S. National Park Service, which restored the house, insists that based on research the house will remain that way, despite the fact that John Adams was known to have preferred it white.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill. But research turned up the fact that Abigail Adams, the wife of the second president, wanted them "stone" and white in color.

Since what Abigail wanted, Abigail usually got, in the summer of 1980, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off-white mixed especially for the occasion from a late 18th Century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white so that both houses would look as they did in 1807, the year the last Adams lived in them, but later research indicated it was unpainted. Mrs. Harris, an authority on the Adams family, hopes the USNPS will change its mind again.

The birthplaces, parts of which date back to the 17th Century, were taken over by the National Park Service on May 1, 1979, after years of semi-neglect due to lack of restoration and maintenance funds.

JOHN ADAMS BIRTHPLACE

The John Quincy Adams Birthplace re-opened in 1982 for the first time in three years after undergoing a $175,000 rehabilitation faithful to the lives of the prominent family that lived there.

If you close your eyes and give your imagination full rein you can see them now as they were more than 200 years ago.

There is Abigail Adams in the new pink gingham dress. There is the curly-haired infant, Thomas Boylston Adams, bouncing on his father's knee. And there is John Adams, home from the Continental Congress in Philadelphia for the first time in a year, sitting at the table drinking a cup of tea.

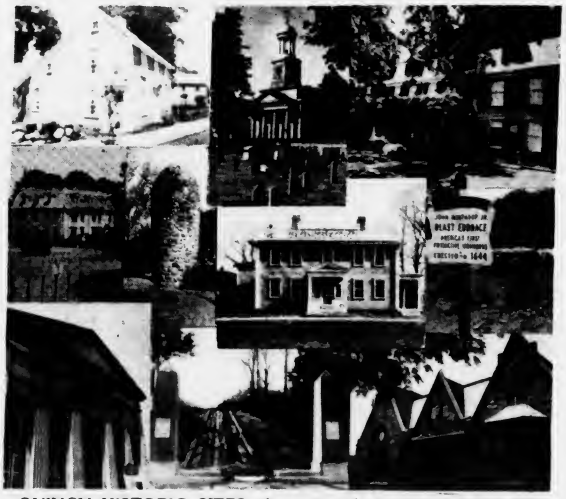
The setting, right down to the pewter plates and candlesticks, is reproduced faithfully in the corner room of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace.

The furnishings of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace are precise reproductions of those that were in the house when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House, the Adams National Historic Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams' old law office, in which the elder Adams, James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution, the model on which the U.S. Constitution was based.

"The law office is furnished pretty much as John Adams had it," says Mrs. Harris, once secretary to Brooks Adams, the last member of the family to live in the Old House. Adams, the last member of the family to live in the Old House.

There is the hutch table on which he wrote the State Constitution; the bookcase filled with books that probably were there in John Adams' day, judging by an inventory of his law library; his old writing desk and two chairs that were copies from those in his second law office in Boston.



Pastels of Abigail and John, originally done in Salem, were photographically reproduced by photographer George Dow and now hang in Abigail's sitting room. The originals are in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

Abigail's old kitchen cabinet was discovered serving as a bookcase in the Old House.

"Brooks Adams always thought that books could go anywhere," explains Mrs. Harris.

The cabinet was reproduced and installed in the kitchen of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace along with copies of the blue china that John purchased when he was emissary to Holland.

The Adams Cottages

Our Only Father - Son Presidents Born Here

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands on the gently rolling hills some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and cordwainer, and his wife, Susanna, 26.

Their home was a weathered gray farmhouse with a high peaked roof and attached lean-to kitchen set on seven acres of farmland at roughly Milepost 11 of the Coast Road, just where it turned up the wooded slopes of Penn's Hill toward the Monatiquot River ford.

He was a pillar of his rural community. Mr. Adams was, a deacon in the First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia and a town constable with a forceful personality and tact that enabled him to collect taxes from his neighbors.

He was a hard-working farmer whose cider was acknowledged best in town, he worked in leather during the winter months, and he had an eye on an adjoining piece of farmland, 9½ acres owned by the Billings brothers, complete with a farmhouse similar to his own.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabdiel Boylston of Brookline, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735 (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the sixth president of the United States.

The junction of Franklin St., Independence Ave., and President Ave. in South Quincy is the only place in the country where the birthplaces of two presidents who are father and son stand side by side in the same city.

When the John Adams Birthplace was retored by the Daughters of Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1681 was discovered under the southeast corner, and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace as early as 1663, when it was little more than a one room shack with fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

According to Henry Adams, a grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U.S. National Park Service in 1979.

The Adams Birthplaces are at 133 and 141 Franklin St. They are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Oct. 15, with guided tours. Admission is $2 for adults and for children over age 12, which also includes admission to the Adams Mansion within seven days.

ADAMS MANSION NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE

The Adams Mansion

Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed and warm than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tufts of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct of Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was at first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith, "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peacefield," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as summer White House for two presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams Mansion National Historic Site.

The site at 135 Adams St., is open to the public from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $2 for adults and for children over 12, and includes admission to the Adams Birthplaces within seven days.

John Adams 'Father'

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

This year is the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution and while most people think of the convention in Philadelphia 200 years ago, the fact is that precious document was born in Quincy. At least the seed was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in the law office of the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go to the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He had arrived home only seven days before on the French frigate La Sensible after nearly 18 months in Paris helping to negotiate a commercial and military alliance with France. He was in such a rush to get home that he apparently landed the day before La Sensible reached Boston by rowing ashore from Nantasket Roads.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

"One was angry, another was full of Greif, and the third with Melancholy, so that I burnt them all," he wrote to her from Passy on Dec. 18, 1778, listing his complaints with her most recent letters. "If you write me in this style I shall leave of writing intirely, it kills me.

"Am I not wretched Enough, in this Banishment, without this? What Course shall I take to convince you that my Heart is warm? I beg you would never more write to me in such a strain for it really makes me unhappy."

"How lonely are my days?" she wrote on a Sunday evening, Dec. 27, "How solitary are my Nights? How insupportable the Idea that 3000 leigues, and the vast ocean now devide us -- but devide only our persons for the Heart of my Friend is in the Bosom of his partner."

Somewhere on the vast ocean the two letters passed each other.

Paris and the dissolute court of Louis XVI held small appeal to the Puritan in John Adams, even when his closest everyday companions were Dr. Benjamin Franklin, still with an eye for the ladies at age 73, and the swashbuckling Capt. John Paul Jones, half patriot, half pirate, who had just taken command of the leaky old East Indiaman he had renamed Bon Homme Richard.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of defeat, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war, Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

"I cannot avoid sometimes repining that the gifts of fortune were not bestowed upon us, that I might have enjoyed the happiness of spending my days with my partner," she wrote, "but as it is, I think it my duty to attend with frugality and economy to our own private affairs, and if I cannot add to our little substance, yet see to it that it is not diminished."

She abstained from drinking black market tea, allowing herself one tiny complaint: "I should like a little green (tea), but they say there is none to be had here. I only wish it for a medicine, as a relief to a nervous pain in my head to which I am sometimes subject."

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, Sept. 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams; and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for the state of Massachusetts, which in turn became the model for the Constitution of the United States.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee -- by the Committee upon the subcommittee -- and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee -- so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer," he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admiration in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw."

Dorothy Quincy Homestead

John Hancock's Declaration Of Love

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house that is set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock St. and Butler Rd., on the banks of Furnace Brook.

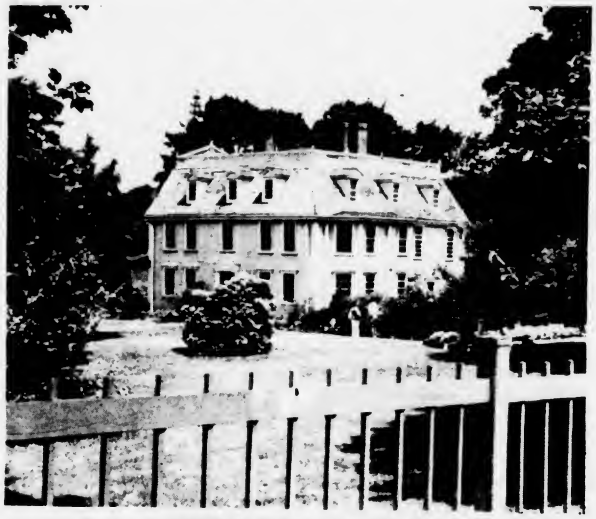
There is the wallpaper with its blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and, at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third. (There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line; two nephews.)

The house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.



The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy homestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British on his heels.

Eventually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later vice president of the United States) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, who restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

It is also open by appointment only Wednesday through Sunday from 10 a.m. to noon for groups. There is a $1.50 admission charge for adults, 50 cents for children.

THE FIRST PARISH CHURCH

TOMBS OF PRESIDENTS John and John Quincy Adams and their wives in First Parish Church.

First Parish Church

Where 2 Presidents, Their Wives Are Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation ot a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chappel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by convenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56 which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of its benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

Still an active Unitarian church, it is open to the public for tours from May 15 through Labor Day, Monday through Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Donations are accepted. There is a charge of 50 cents per adult for organized tour groups, which should make an appointment at least one week in advance. Tours of the church at other times during the year may also be made by appointment.

Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see."

Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced it 'Quin-zee,' including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.--the first Quincy--was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth president John Quincy Adams.

Abigail Adams Cairn

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears , and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children, Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

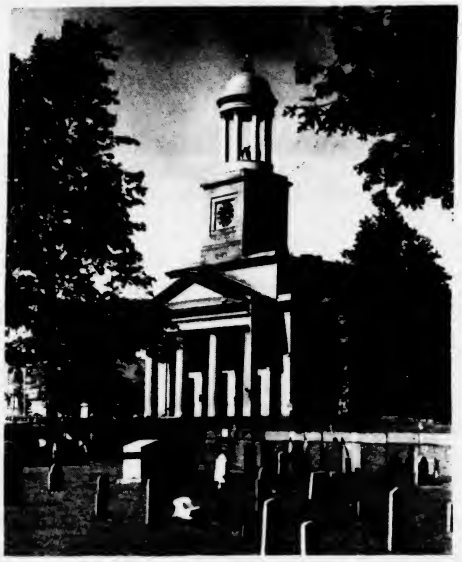
ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth president of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin St.) meets Viden Rd. atop Penn's Hill a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public free of charge.

A fitting memorial . . .



John Quincy Adams occupied the White House in 1828 when United First Parish Church, the Stone Temple, was built of Quincy granite, a fitting memorial to the enduring work of the men who founded the state and the nation.

Two presidents of the United States, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, and their wives, are buried side by side in vaults in the grotto of the Church.

The cornerstone of the Stone Temple was laid on June 11, 1827, and in it was placed a silver plate with the inscription: 'A temple for the worship of God, and for public instruction in the doctrines and duties of the Christian religion.'

Historic Hancock Cemetery in the foreground is the final resting place of early Quincy settlers and patriots among them Col. John Quincy for whom Quincy was named and Rev. John Hancock, a minister of First Parish Church and father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Abigail Adams Wife, Mother Of Presidents

ABIGAIL ADAMS

Mrs. John Adams, the former Abigail Smith of Weymouth, is the only woman to be wife of one president and mother of another --- and she could have been grandmother of a vice president.

Husband John was chief executive from 1797 to 1801; son of John Quincy occupied the White House from 1825 to 1829; and grandson Charles Francis Adams ran for vice president on the Free Soil ticket in 1848.

An early advocate of women's rights, Abigail Adams once wrote to her husband, John:

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors.

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could."

THE GRANITE RAILWAY

The Granite Railway

First Commercial Railroad In U.S.

It was the funniest looking contraption that many among the district's stockholders had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, 6 and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was sited midway between the wheels.

It rode on foot high wooden rails topped by iron plate which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a pier on what on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, particularly hard and weather resistant, were capable of taking a high polish and were to make the Bunker Hill Monument.

The Granite Railway, the first [illegible] in America, was the brainchild of Gridley Bryant, a young engineer who had been engaged to build the Bunker Hill Monument.

But the most successful and [illegible] engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier Col. Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time of Perkins' assignment of him. He must test the concept of a railroad against that a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore had to establish a patent for it. Bryant was able to prove his case to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Perkins was the patriarch, 52 years old, the richest man of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington but turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and at times State Legislature which was even then called upon to incorporate a company in railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it too, largely with his own money.

For a decade after the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster arranged to stop off for a picnic [illegible] Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield. [illegible] at the time that it might never succeed because of the frost that would form on the tracks in the winter.

The Thomas Crane Library

A Romanesque Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite cutters' trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy saw of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial -- preferably a library -- to his father.

"My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestly and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I can not guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses the reference section of the library, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.

"You are, but you wouldn't have if it hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism -- "Food will win the war," they said -- the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine. The experiment failed.

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1936, that now houses the stacks and the children's section.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday to Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. It is closed on Saturdays during July and August.

Stormy Debate

Quincy Was Almost Hancock

If some of the early settlers had their way, you would be living in the city of Hancock today instead of the city of Quincy.

On Feb. 22, 1792, the General Court of Massachusetts passed an act incorporating the North Precinct of Old Braintree as the separate town of Quincy.

But, just before that, quite a few of the residents wanted the new town named after native-son John Hancock instead of Boston-born Col. John Quincy.

Colonel Quincy, who had represented Old Braintree in the General Court, was the great grandfather of President John Quincy Adams.

Many people today think Quincy was named after the sixth President but the honor actually goes to his great grandfather.

John Hancock who was born in the North Precinct, was governor of Massachusetts when the General Court passed the act incorporating the new town as Quincy. He signed the act the following day.

But at the first town meeting of the new town in May, a petition was presented to change the name from Quincy to Hancock in honor of the patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence. The move was finally defeated after a stormy verbal battle.

Opponents argued that Hancock was still alive and that the honor should go to a distinguished-but deceased-person.

JOHN HANCOCK

Colonel Quincy met those requirements. He was both distinguished - and deceased.

He had represented Old Braintree in the General Court from 1717 to 1741 - 12 of those years as Speaker of the House. He died in 1767 at age 77 -- two days after John Quincy Adams was born.

Quincy became a city June 11, 1888.

Quincy Quiz

What was the role in Quincy's history of "Thomas Morton of Clifford's Inn, Gent.?"

Answer:

Thomas Morton, dubbing himself the "Lord of Misrule," took control of the Mt. Wollaston settlement in 1627, changed the name to Merry Mount, erected a maypole and caroled with the Indians until the Pilgrims of Plymouth and the Puritans of Boston put an end to such carrying ons.

What was the role in Quincy's history of Claude Grahame-White?

Answer:

Claude Grahame-White was the pioneer aviator who won a $10,000 prize by flying from Squantum to Boston Light and back on Sept. 7, 1910, during the Harvard-Boston Aero Meet, the first organized flying tournament in the United States.

What was the role in Quincy's history of Francis L. Souther?

Answer:

Francis L. Souther was a member of the Hancock Light Guards, Fourth Massachusetts Regiment, who was killed at the Battle of Big Bethel on June 10, 1861, the first Union soldier to die in combat in the Civil War.

Abigail Adams: A Woman Of Special Honors

Abigail (Smith) Adams was the only woman to be the wife of one President and mother of another.

She was the wife of John Adams, our second President.

She died in 1818, however, and did not see her son John Quincy Adams elected our sixth President.

John Adams did live to see his son become President in 1825.

It Was Richard

For years, the first name of Capt. Wollaston, the leader of the original settlers of Quincy in 1625, was lost to history.

Only recently did the researches of H. Hobart Holly, historian of the Quincy Historical Society, turn up the information that it probably was Richard.

Business is soaring in The Sea Belt.

The South Shore of Massachusetts

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce, representing 39 communities, firmly believes that our area offers great advantages to business and industry. Hence, we have created the term we call "The Sea Belt"(™) The "Sea Belt" of New England, the South Shore of Massachusetts running from Boston to Plymouth, offers a rather unique geographic, social, and recreational opportunity for businesses to expand and relocate.

Through our affiliate, The South Shore Economic Development Corporation, we are helping individual business grow through small business loans.

The tourism industry in the coastal South Shore Communities needs not only individual but also collective action with creative regional approaches. Quincy has recognized this need.

QUINCY YESTERDAY - with America's historical roots of democracy and industry, makes it potentially one of the most exciting historical cities in the United States.

QUINCY TODAY - where pride in our city has led to planned economic development where tourism plays a part and the past and present blend through a sense of dedication and tradition.

QUINCY TOMORROW - a city that is broadening its scope for the future. Tourism is a viable economic industry and defines the Chamber's objectives of creating jobs and promoting business. The "Sea Belt" of New England, the South Shore of Massachusetts, will not be a short-lived phenomenon. We can say, to all concerned, that we are justifiably proud of our past and very confident of our future. Call on us:

City Hall

Seat Of Government For 143 Years

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House for the said Inhabitants,"

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite in Quincy Square has been just that for the past 143 years, the nerve center of government for first the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a president of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

CITY HALL

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a 3 and one half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1 9 million.

Josiah Quincy Homestead

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775, General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquillia" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, exPresident John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

JOSIAH QUINCY HOMESTEAD

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family -- Col. John Quincy, the great grandfather of John Quincy Adams sixth president of the United States.

The Josiah Quincy Homestead is open to the public from June 1 to Oct. 15, Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. Visits may be made at other times by appointment. Admission is $2 for adults and 75 cents for children. Residents of Quincy are admitted free.

How Many Miles From Boston?

Stone mile markers across Hancock Street from each other indicate that the traveler is both 7¼ and 10 miles from Boston. And both are correct.

The 10-miles marker was placed on the Old Coast Road, one of the oldest highways in the United States still in existence, which went from Boston to Plymouth in 1639 by way of inland Milton.

The 7¼-mile marker was raised after the first bridge over the Neponset River was built in 1803, creating the Neponset Turnpike, which is today Hancock St. in North Quincy and Wollaston.

John Winthrop, Jr. Blast Furnace

First Productive Iron Works In U.S.

It failed after nine years of effort and, since failure was anathema in a growing America, perhaps that is why the site and even the memory of the first commercial iron blast furnace in the United States was lost for so long.

It flourished, if that is the word, from 1644 to 1653 on the banks of the Mount Wollaston River (now Furnace Brook) in a section of Old Braintree called "the Woods."

Iron was an important commodity in Colonial Massachusetts, particularly for nails and pots and pans. Iron utensils had to be imported from England, a costly process for the penny-wise colonists.

With this in mind, John Winthrop Jr., son of the governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, went to London and formed the "Company of Undertakers for the Ironworks in New England."

The first iron was turned out in 1644 but young Winthrop was fired from his 100 pounds a year job the next year, to be succeeded by Richard Leader. The Ironworks itself didn't last much longer.

The ore from which the iron was blasted on the banks of Furnace Brook was not a high quality product. It was bog iron from the nearby swamps. Making it proved to be more expensive than the imported kind.

The Company of Undertakers appealed for fresh money in 1646 and apparently there were enough investors ready to send good money after bad because the furnace was still in operation in 1650 when the Scotch Prisoners arrived.

The Scots were rugged Highlanders, soldiers in the army of the future King Charles II who were captured by Oliver Cromwell at the Battle of Dunbar. Cromwell shipped 272 of them to New England as cheap labor in an effort to make the Quincy ironworks a paying proposition. It didn't work.

The Company of Undertakers went bankrupt in 1653 and "the Woods" went back to the bear and the deer.

Meanwhile, with the same Richard Leader as agent, construction began on a second iron works north of Boston in Saugus in 1646. When it was completed in 1650, it was recognized as the first integrated iron industry in America.

Adams Academy

On Site Of John Hancock's Birthplace

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Sts., site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Delcaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body ---25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 and 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar schools" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to 1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S. congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Leverett, an aimiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett who signaled the passing of Adams Academy --- and many other 19th Century classical prep schools --- at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did and on June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed it doors.

The building today is occupied by the Quincy Historical Society, which maintains a museum and research library in the old classrooms. The museum is open all year, Monday through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., and Saturday from 12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., or by appointment. The library is open Monday & Wednesday from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and Saturday from 12:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m., or by appointment. There is no admission charge. It is closed Sundays and holidays.

Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Buried Here

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there. So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Col. John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, most intriguing is one marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm St. lodging house were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and down-trodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

HANCOCK CEMETERY

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath,

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death,

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die,

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock St., Quincy Sq., next to City Hall, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

parts of Plymouth Pilgrims that included the Indian guide Squanto (or Tisquantum), whose name was given to the peninsula that stuck out in the bay.

The tragic Chickatabot died not long after the Pilgrims' visit and he was succeeded as sachem by his son, Josiah Wampatuck, a boy who knew a good deal when he saw one.

Wampatuck sold what was left of his Ceramik deserted tribal lands to a group of whites for 12 pounds, 10 shillings. The lands included most of what is today the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

Moswetuset Hummock, identified by a marker stone and maintained in its natural state, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

City Stonewalled On Auxiliary Police

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The status of the auxiliary police, a volunteer group which hasn't been allowed to perform its duties since late last year because of possible legal liability to the officer or city, can't be addressed on a city level, said City Councillor Michael Cheney after a City Hall meeting Tuesday.

"There is no action that the City Council or mayor can take to change the current status of the auxiliary police," said Cheney, chairman of the council's public safety committee.

But that news didn't sit well with Tony Siciliano, chief of the auxiliary police, who was among those who attended the meeting.

"It's very, very upsetting," said Siciliano. "It seems like other communities have been able to solve the problem, but Quincy has not.

"The people in the city are the ones who are going to be hurt," he said.

The meeting, which lasted an hour and 40 minutes, was also attended by Police Chief Francis Finn, Police Capt. Paul Nestor, Joseph Pearson, Auxiliary Police; Atty. Paul Barbadoro, from the city solicitor's office; Stanley Aldelman, Executive Office of Public Safety, General Counsel; Thomas Rodger, Civil Defense Agency, Office of Emergency Preparedness.

"All of the representatives at the meeting praised the auxiliary police for their past help," said Cheney.

Auxiliary police officers had previously performed duties ranging from crowd control to patrolling city buildings.

"It has become very clear to me that the issue of utilizing auxiliary police beyond what the statute calls for would have to be addressed at a federal and state level," continued Cheney.

"They do not have the powers of the regular police department unless there is an emergency declared.

"It has to be clarified whether the governor or the mayor declares a disaster or emergency," Cheney said. "Then it's up to the chief of police to call up the auxiliary."

Lydon, Nicastro Back McCauley On LaRaia Issue

Two former city officials came to the defense of Mayor Francis McCauley after his challenger, City Councillor Joseph LaRaia, charged last week that the city has lost qualified individuals because of political interference.

Former City Solicitor Dean Nicastro and former Planning Director James Lydon both called The Quincy Sun "to set the record straight."

LaRaia made the charges after Building Inspector Kenneth Johnson submitted his resignation to take a more lucrative job in the private sector.

Nicastro, who was mentioned by name by LaRaia, told The Quincy Sun, "I want to clarify for the record why I stepped down from my position as city solicitor.

"It was to accept an attractive career opportunity which presented itself to me.

"I did not leave because of any particular problems or disagreements with Mayor McCauley."

Nicastro served for two and a half years as city solicitor, and one year as assistant city solicitor. He left in August, 1985, to become associate counsel with the Mass. Medical Society.

"I appreciate Councillor

Joseph Lydon Receives AFL-CIO Award

Joseph M. Lydon of Quincy, executive vice president Massachusetts AFL CIO State Labor Council, recently received the Massachusetts AFL CIO Certificate of Merit Award at the Sea Crest Hotel in Falmouth.

Lydon, honored for his work in the labor movement, started out as a member of Iron Workers Local in New York and subsequently joined Local 7 in Boston. He is a former member of the ILA.

Currently superintendent of the state's Hurley Building in Boston's Government Center, Lydon served formerly as president of AFSCME Local 370 at Long Island Hospital, Boston, and president of AFSCME Council 45, representing City of Boston employees.

MacDonald, Mazrimas Named To Zoning Appeals Board

A retired Quincy building inspector and a past president of a local environmental group have been appointed by Mayor Francis McCauley to the Zoning Board of Appeals which was recently expanded from three to five members.

Allan E. MacDonald of 92 Video Rd., who retired last year as building inspector, was appointed to a term expiring February, 1989.

Mrs. Maureen Mazrimas, 49 Bayberry Rd., Squantum, past president of Save Our Shore, was appointed to a term expiring February, 1991.

She is believed to be the first woman ever to serve on the Zoning Board of Appeals, according to McCauley.

The appointments followed the City Council's passage of McCauley's order to increase the board from three to five members.

"The Zoning Board of Appeals is one of the most important boards in the city," said McCauley. "I initiated the expansion of the board to increase citizen input on the board.

"Under state laws, it takes four affirmative votes of the five members to approve a variance."

McCauley also reappointed three members, Anthony Sandonato, 11 Hitchcock Terrace, to a term expiring in February, 1988; Peter MacDonald, 102 Presidents Ln., the present chairman, to a term expiring in February, 1990; and Michael Faherty, 28 Furnace Brook Pkwy., to a term expiring in February, 1992.

Reappointed associate members were Edmund O'Leary, 165 Whitwell St., to a term expiring in February, 1990; and Daniel Saccoccio, 3 Ocean St., North Quincy, to a term expiring in February, 1988.

McCauley also appointed Martin Gordon, 315 Rock Island Rd., to a term as an associate member. His term will expire in February, 1989.

The zoning board's next meeting will be Tuesday, July 14, at 7:45 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

Lydon, Nicastro Back McCauley On LaRaia Issue

(Cont'd from Page 1)

LaRaia's complimentary remarks about me," said Nicastro. "But I do want to make it clear for the record the reason I left the solicitor's office.

Lydon, who left late last year to join the Ricciardi firm, said, "I think it is unfair of a candidate to mention people without first speaking to them, and it infuriates me when he attributes reasons for their departure which are untrue.

"Frank McCauley, quite to the contrary of causing me to leave, is probably the reason I stayed so long," said Lydon, who was Planning Director from April, 1979, to December, 1986.

"Not only is he a good administrator, but he is also one of the finest individuals I have met in my life."

Rally Theme:

QJC Would Be 'Submerged' In Massasoit Merger

"Merging with Massasoit Community College would mean being "submerged" said Paul Hunt, chairman of the Community College Associates at a community breakfast rally in support of keeping Quincy Junior College independent.

The rally last week was attended by about 100 business and professional leaders, political figures and students who gathered in the college parking lot.

Those attending opposed the proposal to merge QJC under Massasoit Community College with no Quincy area representation on the governing board.

They also called for the state to provide financial help to students attending QJC.

"There are particular kinds of people who come here to QJC," continued Hunt.

"They're not looking for large campuses; they're not looking for a big, full campus.

"...They're looking for a place where they can come and learn and go back to their duties and their work and so forth.

"This college fulfills a very, very basic need.

"We won't have it taken over by another college, and the blood sucked out of it thereafter," Hunt said.

Patriot Ledger editor William Ketter, who introduced the speakers, spoke of the importance of preserving an "important educational institution."

Dressed as a colonial patriot, Jack Cahill, president of Jack Conway Co., said that Quincy's John Adams and John Quincy Adams "would not sit by and see an institution such as Quincy Junior College lose its independence without a battle."

Mayor Francis McCauley noted that the School Committee, of which he is chairman, voted to reject the merger.

"We don't want a merger, we want to continue our identity," said McCauley.

Councillor Joseph LaRaia, a candidate for mayor, said, "It's important that we rally behind the school, it's important that we rally behind the city of Quincy, and that we get behind our legislators."

Councillor Patricia Toland said that QJC serves "people who are not ready to venture into a different atmosphere."

"Independence is the issue," said Peter Eleey of the Governor's Counsel.

State Sen. Paul Harold said, "QJC will not be part of a marriage in which we will not plan an equal role."

Councillor James Sheets, also a professor of government at QJC, said that the college serves many young people who were not motivated to do well in high school.

"We help them fulfill their dream in life," said Sheets.

"We don't have numbers coming here, we have people coming here.

"If we lose that mission, it's going to be the young people who suffer."

Reagan Wreath To Be Placed On J.Q. Adams Tomb

President Ronald Reagan is sending a wreath in recognition of John Quincy Adam's 220th birthday to be presented Saturday at 10 a.m. at United First Parish Church, "The Church of the Presidents," in Quincy Center.

The public is invited.

The wreath will be delivered by Capt. Michael Holty, commanding officer, Naval Reserve Center, Quincy, with a color guard from Weymouth Naval Air Station.

Mayor Francis X. McCauley will receive the wreath on behalf of the city. Richard Post, chairman of the Board of Governors, Walter Wrigley, clerk, and Dorothy Wrigley, registrar, will receive the wreath on behalf of the church.

An escort will then take the wreath to the crypt below the church and place it on the tomb of President Adams.

The presenting of presidential wreaths at the tombs of former presidents is an annual event started in 1966 under President Lyndon Johnson. Since that time ceremonies are arranged by the church and the city on the birthdays of the two presidents: Oct. 30 for John Adams and July 11 for John Quincy Adams.

John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, was born in the then north precinct of Braintree, now Quincy, July 11, 1767, the oldest son of John Adams, the second president.

Like his father, John Quincy Adams devoted his life to public service. He served as senator, as minister to Russia, then England, and as secretary of state under President Monroe. After his term as president, 1825-29, he served for 16 years in the House of Representatives, where he died in 1848.

His tomb is in a crypt within United First Parish Church, along with that of his father, his mother, Abigail, and his wife, Louisa Catherine.

The city of Quincy is named after Col. John Quincy, John Quincy Adam's great grandfather.

Lineup Card, Anyone?

You may need a lineup card with numbers to keep track of the players in this year's political arena.

Looks like three elections: preliminary and final municipal elections in September and November and a special state election probably in December. (Maybe January).

BROWNELL

The latter would be to fill the state representative seat that Thomas Brownell will vacate to accept appointment as a judge at Plymouth District Court.

KELLY

Brownell has been nominated by Gov. Michael Dukakis for a black robe and he is expected to win Governor's Council confirmation without trouble.

Former Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly is a definite contender for Brownell's seat and there are a number of potential candidates.

TOLAND

The timing might present a bit of a dilemma for two of them: Councillor at-large Patricia Toland and Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney.

The dilemma is that they might have to make a big decision: can they run for two different offices virtually simultaneously? Or will they have to decide on one or the other?

If the special election is put over until January, they may not have to wrestle with that decision.

If both Toland and Cheney decide to make a bid for state representative and not seek re-election to the City Council it would bring to six the number of open seats in the City Council in this year's election. That's two thirds of the nine-member body.

CHENEY

All three at-large seats would be up for grabs. Two already are: the one Joseph LaRaia is giving up to run for mayor and the one that Richard Koch, Jr. is leaving to live on the Cape.

The Ward 3 seat is open with incumbent John Lydon's decision not to seek re-election.

And, the Ward 5 seat is being vacated by Stephen McGrath to run for council at-large.

DURKIN

If Cheney gives up his Ward 1 seat, that would make the sixth vacancy.

School Committee Vice Chairman Steve Durkin has been mentioned as a possible candidate for Brownell's seat but last report has him still planning to run for re-election and not interested in the House seat.

SHEILA

Another possibility for state representative is Sheila McIntyre wife of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre who is active in community affairs and who earlier this year was thinking of getting into the mayor's race herself.

Meanwhile, Deputy Civil Defense Director Tony Siciliano who has been mentioned as a potential City Councillor at-large candidate says he is now "leaning toward" running for Brownell's House seat.

SICILIANO

At this writing some observers are tagging Kelly with the "man to beat" label.

The Second Norfolk District where Brownell's seat is, includes all of Ward 1, all of Ward 5, Precincts 1, 2 and 5 of Ward 3 and Precinct 7 of Ward 4.

If Kelly is the only Houghs Neck candidate he would come out of Ward 1 with a strong vote.

If Cheney gets in, he would split some of that vote In this case, Toland would benefit with a good Ward 5 vote.

And if Cheney does get into the race it would set the stage for an interesting sidelight: the strength of the former councillor from Ward 1 vs. the strength of the present Ward 1 councillor.

□

COUNCILLOR James Sheets appears to have some opposition in Ward 4. Philip Baldassini, former city employee, has taken out nomination papers for that seat.

□

ANSELMO

AND, if you're wondering if Frank Anselmo is going to seek re-election to the School Committee, he apparently is. He has taken out nomination papers.

Recalls Boston Light Flight From Marina Bay Area

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Reading the article on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial on Thursday July 2, I noted that in addition to the veteran's names there will be also a ride incorporating the history of Marina Bay.

Being a Quincy resident for 84 years, I still have a good memory of a historical event held on the site of Marina Bay. The Harvard Aeronautical Society held a historical international air meet on Sept. 3 to Sept. 10, 1910. Drew airmen and aircrafts from England and France.

The flight to Boston Light was a record. It was a great sight to see those aircrafts fly. It took a great courage for airmen to fly frail aircrafts which were the pioneer of today's air travels.

City Stonewalled On Auxiliary Police Issue

Related cases are being tried in the area of civil rights in the federal courts, according to Cheney.

"It is up to Congress to change the federal civil rights laws to address the liability question, and up to the state to further define the duties of the auxiliary police in a state statute," he said.

"I don't see that happening any time soon."

Cheney noted that the auxiliary may perform ceremonial functions such as participating in flag-raising ceremonies.

"If I said that to my men, they would laugh me out of the building," said Siciliano.

"We don't intend to do ceremonial things."

Siciliano said that auxiliary police officers recently completed a training program conducted by the Mass. Criminal Justice Training Counsel.

"That was a waste of the taxpayer's money," said Siciliano. "We have a well-trained auxiliary police force doing nothing, waiting for an emergency or disaster to take place, at which time they may not be available."

Siciliano said he has 27 out of 60 officers who have not left.

"They're upset now," he said. "They're saying, 'they had us go to school, we took the training, spent the taxpayer's money, for what?'

"They don't want to give us any authority at all."

Siciliano said that 10 auxiliary police officers assisted at last year's Miss Quincy Bay Pageant, an annual event which will take place again next week.

"We won't be able to do that this year," he said. "We're at a standstill."

Siciliano said he is disappointed with what he feels has been lack of support.

"The administration has not done anything. The City Council, other than Councillor Michael Cheney, has not done anything except appropriate money to train us.

"I would have thought we would have gotten more support from the people in Quincy, the veteran's organizations, the civic organizations.

"We're very, very disappointed. All these years we've been giving service to the community and now we can't do it anymore.

"We're only allowed to go out if there is an emergency or disaster...if we can find people to go out...

"We may not have anyone left."

Topless Swimsuits (For Men) Banned At Wollaston Beach

July 8-14, 1939
48 Years Ago

Health Commissioner Dr. Richard M. Ash warned that samples of water taken from Quincy beaches showed "a very serious condition of pollution from sewage exists at all times off the shores and frequently on the shores themselves."

"Due to the time required for analysis of the water it is impossible to take samples and have the results early enough to warn bathers that day," he added, "consequently, I advise extreme caution in checking the situation before bathing."

Relief from the pollution appeared to be on the way as the State House Committee on Metropolitan Affairs reported favorably on a bill that would earmark some $24 million to clean up Boston Harbor and Quincy Bay.

But pollution wasn't the only problem faced by Quincy bathers.

MDC officials refused to lift their ban on topless bathing suits (for men) on Wollaston Beach despite the fact that Chelsea District Court Judge Frank D. Crowley ruled that it was no crime (for men) to go topless at Revere Beach.

RAILROAD IN DANGER

A commission set up by Gov. Leverett Saltonstall reported that a New Haven Railroad proposal to abandon its South Shore lines on Sept. 24 would endanger the financial structure of the area.

The commission also cited the proposal as a danger to National Defense since the lines serve the Fore River Shipyard, the Hingham Ammunition Depot, the National Guard Camp in Bourne and the Cape Cod Canal.

Sour Cream Fruit Salad

Pretty To Look At, Hard To Resist

Whenever there is any kind of a party or get together, my neighbor, Helen, makes her famous sour cream fruit salad. It is really something that goes with any kind of a buffet or luncheon, a light dessert that's pretty to look at and hard to resist!

HELEN'S
SOUR CREAM FRUIT SALAD

1 cup bite size marshmallows
1 cup crushed pineapple drained
1 cup mandarin oranges, drained
½ cup walnuts (cut)
½ cup shredded coconut
1 cup sour cream

Mix the first three ingredients together in a large bowl, then add the walnuts and coconut. After this, add the sour cream and chill. This is a lovely fluffy mouth-watering dessert that can be made a couple of days ahead of time if you wish. By the way, because I am a whipped cream lover, I sometimes substitute the cream and have also used both cream and sour cream together. So experiment, mix it any way you like, I guarantee you'll love it either way. Of course if you're lucky enough to have a gal like Helen as a longtime neighbor, you'd hardly have to do it yourself.

Crime Watch

Crime Prevention Officer

Assault Prevention

Tips For Self-Protection While Walking

- Walk with someone when possible. Most muggers and other thugs will be discouraged if you have company, male or female.
- Stay in well lighted areas and near curbs, away from alleys, entry ways and bushes.
- Don't carry a purse unless it is absolutely necessary. If you do carry a purse, never set it down on store counters, supermarket baskets or on bus seats.
- Avoid carrying extra money or valuables on your person.
- Don't accept rides from strangers. If a driver stops to ask you directions, avoid getting near the car; you could be pulled inside.
- If you are being followed by someone on foot, cross the street, change direction or vary your pace. If he persists, go straight to a lighted store or a home and call the police. If you are being followed by someone in a car, turn around and walk in the other direction. If he persists, record his license number and call the police.
- When you return home, have your key ready to open the door without delay. Leave an outside light on so you can easily see when you return.
- Stay near other people; avoid shortcuts through parks, vacant lots aor other deserted places.

Jarnis 'Picks Up' Campaign Pace

School Committee candidate Robert Jarnis accelerated his campaign efforts while running in the Merrymount Neighborhood Association Road Race.

There were over 100 runners at the annual July 4th holiday event. While there were runners of all ages, most, however, were young school age children, according to Jarnis.

A regular jogger, he finished in the middle of the pack and said he was pleased with his time for the 2.5 mile course. "Any time I can run under a 7 minute-per-mile pace, I am pleased," said the candidate. "What is remarkable about this race," said Jarnis, is how very well these young runners were. Most of the top finishers in the race were the youngsters."

"It is often easy to underestimate what youngsters can do. The results of this race can serve as a clear reminder that, given the correct framework and a little direction, the youth of Quincy have the energy and desire to be good performers and high achievers," he said.

The candidate mentioned that all the city's neighborhood associations, like the Merrymount Neighborhood Association, deserve a great deal of credit for providing such opportunities for the neighborhood kids to get involved, to have fun, and to be successful.

"The lesson this race provides," concluded Jarnis, "is just how far our youngsters can go when given the right support and a little direction." Jarnis vowed to train harder for next year's race so that he could "keep up with the kids."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It is true that there is probably nothing in this world we need today as much as understanding. Understanding between parents and children; between husband and wife; between friends; between races; between countries. After all has been said and done, a smile, a kindly word, an understanding spirit and touch in all relationships count for more than we are usually willing to grant.

It is a sad fact that many people sometimes go through life misunderstanding associates, friends and family. Much misunderstanding is due to the fact that a few drops of kindly understanding are not allowed to fall into cups that would be brimming with happiness if a little understanding were present. A little understanding can go a long way toward solving most serious situations.

Everyone has some right and virtue in his point of view. Resentment flares up if refuse to accord this right and probability. Isn't it true that many times we feel resentment if we think that the other person is not giving us our just due? ... Especially when we feel it is due us in the matter of understanding and consideration.

It is really quite simple! A large chunk of understanding can be bought at a very low cost. Try it!

Independence Day Breakfast Held At Squantum First Church

Surrounded by waving American flags and the sound of patriotic marches, the congregation of the First Church of Squantum met out-of-doors yesterday for its annual Independence Day breakfast before the Sunday service.

The breakfast was sponsored by young people of the church to raise money for summer campership at Christian camps and conferences.

During the service, Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, pastor, preached on the subject, "The Roots Of Our Freedom," tracing fundamental concepts implicit in the American Constitution back to their Biblical origin.

Dr. Langevin urged his listeners not to be the muddle-headed kind of flag-waver who thinks that American leaders can do no wrong but rather that kind of Christian patriot who truly loves the values that American democracy represents at its best and who applies his or her critical intellect to the issues of the day as an expression of that love.

Once again, Dr. Langevin attacked the present American policy of supporting mercenary fighters in Nicaragua.

"Supporting the contras is supporting terrorism in the name of the American people," he said. "It is important for us as Christians to read our daily newspapers and see what these so-called 'freedom fighters' are really doing."

He was also concerned about charges that employees of the American government have been involved in a cocaine-smuggling operation of massive proportions to earn money to support the contras.

"These are the people who dishonor our flag," Dr. Langevin said.

A Senate committee headed by Senator John Kerry will be opening hearings on these charges within the next few weeks, he noted.

Dr. Langevin called upon members of the church to give their first allegiance to Jesus Christ and his Kingdom and then to use their influence to support and correct and build American democracy as "the greatest experiment in freedom in the history of the world."

Doris Sinckler, Mary Ruth Scott, Bob Gorill and Fred MacMillan sang "O God, Beneath Thy Guiding Hand" as the offertory anthem. Stewart Scott and Tore Wallin were the ushers. Hazel Mayne and Grace Holmes were in charge of the refreshments for the Fellowship Hour after the service.

This Sunday, the congregation will once again gather for worship at 9:30 a.m. Visitors are welcome.

Morrisette In 3-Way Tie For First Place

Morrisette, who has played all of its games to date, stands at 9-3 while Milton and Mass Truck are 6-2 and Braintree is 5-2 with make-up games pending.

Morrisette took a win by forfeit as Carter Post failed to field a team. They downed Wollaston 5-3 but bowed to Milton, 4-2.

Against Wollaston, Morrisette's Larry Taglieri and Wollaston's Jay Lespasio hurled with their backs against the wall for the first six innings as they were forced time and again to pitch out of trouble in a very close game.

Morrisette had the opportunities to open the game up but could only manage one run on 10 hits, leaving nine runners on base. Wollaston had five hits and left seven stranded.

Morrisette's big inning finally struck in the seventh, scoring four runs.

Taglieri went the distance and upped his record to 5-1. He allowed seven hits, fanned five and walked three.

Losing pitcher Lespasio went six and one third innings, giving up 12 hits, two walks while striking out nine. He was relieved by T.J. Steen who surrendered two hits.

Wollaston took a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the third when Tom McDonald singled and moved to second on a Mark DiMattio sacrifice who reached base on a throwing error. Dave Tocchio moved the runners with a sacrifice and then Shawn Thompson singled in McDonald.

Morrisette tied the score in the top of the fourth. Rob McDonald opened the inning with a single but was forced at second on Ron Fletcher's fielder's choice. Chris Ricciuti and Billy McDougal then singled to load the bases. A run was forced home as Larry Taglieri drew a two-out walk.

There was no more scoring until the seventh when Morrisette came up with four runs on four hits and two walks. Steve Minichiello led off with a walk and was sacrificed to second by Dan Biagini. An intentional walk to McDonald backfired as the next batter Fletcher singled up the middle to drive in the go ahead run. The runners reached second and third when the relay was mishandled. Ricciuti drove them both home with a single to left and took second on the throw to the plate. He then scored on Taglieri's single.

Wollaston came back with two runs in the bottom of the seventh. Tocchio led off with a double and scored on Tom Logan's single. Rogers, a pinch runner, reached third on an infield out and a wild pitch and then scored on another wild pitch.

Morrisette had all singles: two each by Eddie Flavin, Minichiello, McDonald, Ricciuti and one apiece by McDougal, Fletcher, Biagini, Wayne Chambers and Taglieri.

Wollaston's Tocchio had two hits while Tom McDonald, Lespasio, Logan, Thompson and DiMattio had one.

For the second time this season, Morrisette lost to Milton. Milton ace Doug McNeil hurled six innings of two-hit ball striking out 12 and walking one.

Morrisette's Wayne Chambers suffered his first defeat of the year, allowing one earned run, seven hits, two walks and fanning 10. Chamber's was hurt by Morrisette's five errors.

Milton scored one in the third, one in the fifth and two in the sixth to take a 4-0 advantage.

But Morrisette struck back in the seventh to score two runs. Their comeback effort ceased when they left the bases loaded.

Rob McDonald opened the inning with a single and then scored on walks to Ron Fletcher, Chris Ricciuti and Billy McDougal. McNeil was relieved by Maguire who struck out the next two hitters. Flavin then hit a run-producing single but the rally fell short when Minichiello flied to center.

Morrisette was held to four hits, two by Flavin, and one each to McDonald and Fletcher.

Morrisette will play Mass Truck Sunday afternoon at Strong Field in East Bridgewater, travels to Randolph on Monday at 6 p.m. and plays Canton at Canton High School at 6 p.m. Wednesday.

KRISTOPHER KENNEY, 9, of Quincy, finished in third place in the male 12 and under division with a time of 34:09 in the New England Baptist Hospital's third annual Spring Run for Fun race. Approximately 150 of the runners participated in the race which raised $1,000 for Mission Possible, Inc., an organization which sponsors programs for the youth of Mission Hill.

Quincy Running Up Against Tough Luck

Last week, Quincy lost to Milton and Holbrook and tied Braintree and Weymouth.

Quincy had a 7-6 lead over Weymouth but Weymouth scored a run in the seventh inning. The game was then called on account of darkness and will be played over at a later date.

Against Braintree, the game was called with the score tied at 1-1 at 10:30 p.m. because of a curfew at Braintree. The game, which lasted 11 innings, will be played over from the start on July 14 at Braintree at 7:30 p.m.

Joe Taylor started pitching for Quincy and went eight innings before being lifted for pinch hitter Mike Toland who singled for Quincy's only hit.

Ted Novio went the distance for Braintree, fanning 14 and walking three. Quincy hit some shots but right at Braintree fielders.

Braintree had seven hits and five walks off two Quincy hurlers but were held by Quincy's strong defense. Centerfielder Bill Roche ran down some well hit balls and third baseman Sean Gately turned in some timely fielding performances.

Quincy scored their run in the fourth inning when Happas and Jim Dennis walked, both moved on a fielder's choice and Happas scored on a wild pitch.

Braintree tied it in the fifth when Bob Kearney singled, moved to second on a fielder's choice and scored on Rick Delvecchio's single.

Quincy lost to Milton 5-3 even though Quincy had eight hits and loaded the bases three times. Kyle Robertson led the attack with two singles and a double. Sean Gately had two singles while Steve Happas, Bill Roche and Nick Dragone had the remaining hits.

Milton starter Fred Quinlan broke a finger sliding into third base in the fifth and was relieved by McNeil who gave up four hits but no runs in three innings. Karlson had two triples for Milton, one with the bases jammed to drive in three runs.

Joe Taylor took the loss for Quincy. Robbie Higgans made a relief appearance, striking out three in two innings.

Against Holbrook, Quincy suffered a 7-4 loss, committing seven errors.

Jim Dennis pitched well for Quincy, giving up eight hits, fanning five and walking none. Holbrook scored six unearned runs.

Quincy had seven hits with Dennis having three and Mike Toland two, who started his first game. Bill Roche and Rob Higgans had the other Quincy hits.

Quincy plays Wollaston, Carter Post and Canton Wednesday, Thursday and Friday respectively at 8:30 p.m. at Adams Field and then Weymouth next Monday at Adams at 8:30.

Donahue Says:

Keeping Youngsters From Drugs Worth More Than Pros

By TOM SULLIVAN

Quincy's Brian Donahue is discovering the politics that go on behind the scenes in pro sports and also that a background of drug abuse can hurt your chances of being signed.

The 295-pound giant, a 1980 graduate of Abp. Williams High, was one of the outstanding football players in New England, although he gained most of his fame in track.

He won the New England title in the shot put at Abp. Williams with a toss of 59 feet and later broke the national record with a toss of 66-1 in Chicago while at Exeter Academy.

Last year Donahue signed with the New York Jets as a free agent. The jets knew of Brian's background in drugs (he admits he began experimenting with drugs in high school), but took a chance on him.

"Things were progressing well with the Jets but I had a feeling I was losing myself and didn't have a total grip on what I was doing," Donahue said.

"I felt I was getting in the situation I was in before with drugs. I got married just before camp and, although the Jets are a fine organization, I left camp because, just when you think you have it beat, you are ready for a fall."

"If I can help one child stay away from the misery I went through, it would be worth even not making the pros."

Donahue has been in contact with the Los Angeles

BRIAN DONAHUE

Raiders, Miami Dolphins, Houston Oilers, New Orleans Saints, New England Patriots and Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

"I tried out with the Patriots, Raiders and Cowboys, but most were pretty well stocked with defensive linemen," Donahue said. "My lack of experience hurt and I feel my past drug problems hurt me. I have been clean since the Jets camp and have gone around talking to youngsters."

Donahue feels his former agent, Irving Marks of New York, hurt his chances when he put him in contact with the Dolphins and told him not to do anything, as he was all set with Miami. However, things didn't work out and Donahue passed up several other chances while waiting to hear from the Dolphins.

"My new agent is Charles Caddy of Indianapolis, whom I met at the Cowboys' tryout," Brian said. "I honestly feel my drug background is hurting me. Officials of one team will talk to another and I think they are afraid to take a chance with me. You just don't know what goes on behind the scenes."

Brian still has hopes of making the NFL and he also would like a chance to make the 1988 Olympics.

"I feel I could be a good representative of the United States in the Olympics," he said. "If I don't make the NFL, at least I know I gave 100 per cent."

Brian and his brother Jack, himself a former drug abuser, formed the Heavenly High Youth Ministries, an anti-drug organization and the two devote their summers to discussing and describing the evils and dangers of drugs and alcohol.

Marty Finnegan, coordinator of athletics in the Quincy schools, had conducted more than 200 chemical health programs at schools throughout New England and Brian has been with him at about 25.

"He does a wonderful job," Finnegan said. "The kids are awed by his size and you can hear a pin drop when he speaks. Brian is a terrific boy and I hope his past drug problems don't prevent him from making the pros."

Brian has been a member of the Quincy Track Club since his high school days and has won several national and New England titles in the shot put. QTC coach Jeff Hennessy is one of his biggest boosters.

Brian went to the U. of Texas for a year and a half, playing football and throwing the shot put. He transferred to Iona so he could train for the shot put with Olympic coach Tony Neclario.

One of Brian's outstanding achievements while trying out for the pros was running the 40 yards at 4.75 while weighing 292, a fine accomplishment.

Brian is married to Lori Lee DeThomasis of Albertson, Long Island, whom he met while at Iona. They have a four-month old daughter, Jessica.

Over $1,700 Raised In Quincy Schools Alumni Golf Tourney

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Over $1,700 was raised in the first annual Quincy Public Schools Alumni Scholarship Golf Tournament held recently at the Halifax Country Club and featured about 100 alumni, staff and friends of Quincy High, North Quincy High and Quincy Vo-Tech.

According to Marty Finnegan, Quincy coordinator of athletics and scholarship fund committee co-chairman, the money will probably be divided into three scholarships, one for each school.

Finnegan called the event a big success and thanked everyone who participated. "The participants and the merchants who donated prizes made this event a big success," Finnegan said.

In addition to raising scholarship funds, Finnegan said the event had a positive impact on adult-youth interaction.

"This is just one more example of adults caring for youth. The more we can do to show this development of care and concern for our young people, the greater our success will be in bringing respect and love among all," Finnegan said.

"The adults and kids got together and were able to communicate and experience love for one another," he added.

Tee time was 1 p.m. on June 29 and all golfers were off the course by 6 p.m. A roast beef dinner followed and then prizes were awarded to the top finishers.

100-Mile Endurance Race

Hot Sun Forces Seamans Out After 48 Tough Miles

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A hot desert sun: it makes most people run for the nearest ocean, pool or air conditioner.

But not Quincy's Bob Seamans.

A 58-year-old advertising executive, Seamans ran under a blazing sun in the June 27 Western states 100-Mile Same Day Endurance Race. Not only did he contend with scorching sunshine but also Rocky Mountain terrain and even rattlesnakes.

Unfortunately, the sun got just a little too hot for Seamans' liking and forced him out of the grueling race after he pounded the course for 12 hours and 48 miles.

"The temperature reached 100 degrees in the shade and 105 degrees in the sun," Seamans said. He said the first five hours were "beautiful" because there was cloud cover and a breeze.

"Then the sun came out and the temperature got into the 100s. It was just too much," he said.

Still, Seamans said if he had had more water to douse himself to keep his body temperature cool he would have went further, perhaps even finished.

"Before you quit, you think a lot about all the training you put in. I could have gone on but I could have hurt myself.

"I made the right decision," said Seamans, adding that he was not close to dehydration.

Seamans ran the race last year, completing 57 miles before bowing out.

His training routine consisted of running 60 miles a week, then increasing the mileage to 75 to 85 miles one week before the race. Seamans said he ran six times a week, taking a day off to "refresh the body."

The race began in Squaw Valley, Calif. and journeyed through old mining trails, around menacing rattlesnakes and ventured to peaks of up to 9,000 feet before ending in Auburn, Calif.

BOB SEAMANS

Seamans stopped his run at Devil's Thumb which he described as "terribly steep." The mountain has a 2500 foot vertical drop from the base of the canyon to the peak.

Of the 375 entrants, only 150 finished, the lowest percentage in the 11-year history of what some call "the most grueling one day-physical event."

Seamans said a 35-year old chemical engineer from California won this year's event in 17 hours and 45 minutes.

Last year's winner quit 30 miles into this year's race, he said.

As an example of the intense heat, Seamans said his canteen water turned warm just one mile after refilling. To make matters worse, contestants were warned against drinking stream water for fear of contracting a disease.

As a precaution against dehydration, checkpoints were set up along the course. Seamans said after 30 miles, a checkpoint reading indicated he had lost four pounds in fluids. At a second check point 10 miles later, a reading showed he had lost seven more pounds.

But Seamans questioned their accuracy, saying he and other runners did not believe they lost that much fluid so quickly.

To qualify for the race, Seamans said one must run a 50 mile race in 10 hours or less. He said his time was between seven and seven and a half hours.

Then a lottery is held to select the proper amount of participants.

"Even if you run a 50-mile race in 10 hours or less you're not automatically in," Seamans said.

Seamans, who was the 1980 New England 50-Mile Masters Champion, calls himself a "common runner." He has competed more than 100 marathons, including the Boston Marathon over 20 times and the Newport Marathon 11 times.

As for next year's endurance race, Seamans said he will definitely enter.

"I won't train any harder. I'll just carry five canteens instead of three."

Sullivan, Duddy Pace Tigers Over Indians

Brian Sullivan's stellar pitching and Ken Duddy's power hitting paced the Tigers to a 9-2 win over the Indians.

Sullivan fanned 14 and allowed just five hits in his complete game performance. He did not give up a run until the fifth inning.

Sullivan was given plenty of support from his Tiger teammates as they ran up a three run lead and exploded for four more runs in the fifth.

Duddy was perfect at the plate, connecting for two doubles and two singles. He scored four runs and drove in two.

Jay Wakelin had three hits and two RBIs, Justin Tobin had a triple and a double while Jay Evans, Pat Donaher and Sullivan had a double each. Jamie Korvelis contributed an RBI single.

For the Indians, Sean Cleary had 13 strikeouts and two walks in six innings of work. Cleary and Bacallo hit triples and Bacallo also had a double to drive in both Indian runs.

EXTRA! Quincy Sun Car Care Guide

Today's computer technology makes happy endings possible

Accidents will happen. Unfortunately, many of us experience a fender bender. Fortunately, getting our car back on the road isn't the problem it once was. Computer technology is helping to speed the insurance claims process, locate replacement parts, and keep costs as low as possible.

As recently as five years ago, car owners plowed through red tape to get their cars operating after an accident.

Insurance adjusters were caught up in endless paperwork and the claims procedures could be time consuming. The prices at auto repair shops were high and many times owners were told that parts were out-of-stock.

For most Americans this added up to higher insurance premiums, expensive parts and service charges, and the inconvenience of not having one's car.

Streamlined system

Today's procedures have been reduced to a claim adjuster checking off damaged items on a line drawing of a car. Such skeletal drawings are available for every American car and most imported cars built during the past 10 years.

This information can be transmitted by either computer terminal or phone modem to a central database. Immediately, a printout is returned containing replacement parts identification, location and cost. In addition, labor costs are indicated.

This information comes from a database containing more than 40 million items. It is apparent that this computerized system of ADP Collision Estimating Services (a division of the computer services giant Automatic Data Processing Inc.), saves auto insurance policyholders both time and money.

The ADP Parts and Assemblies Locator System (called "PAL") is a special feature developed two years ago to provide even more help to auto insurers, repairers and auto parts distributors in providing the very best service possible to the public.

Due to the vast number of auto replacement parts produced — both by the manufacturers of cars and by independent manufacturers of auto parts — a single simplified system was needed to locate replacement parts at reasonable cost in any area of the United States.

The system developed by ADP Collision Estimating Services does just that. It even goes so far as to give the specific name, address and phone number of auto parts distributors, available inventory, part numbers, name and cost.

With the use of telephones, portable computer terminals and modems, such detailed information is instantly available at any location in the country. It's literally "quick as a wink," and from an independent source not controlled by an insurance company or repair service.

All of this adds up to getting your car back on the road within the least amount of time.

According to ADP Collision Estimating Services president Garen K. Staglin, the company is processing more than 20,000 computerized auto damage estimates each day in the United States and Canada. This adds up to more than four million estimates a year.

ALL THE KING'S HORSES AND ALL THE KING'S MEN couldn't put your car together again as fast as auto repairers using the PAL System (Parts and Assemblies Locator System) from ADP. Using today's computer technology and an exclusive North American database, PAL finds the right part at the best price in the least amount of time.

In addition, the system provides a detailed inventory and the location of graded salvage parts, which offers the potential for even greater savings.

The ADP Parts and Assemblies Locator System is yet another example of computers relieving the frustration and anxiety we all experience at various times in our lives. If the worst does happen, and your car is banged up, there is a simple and effective system for getting everything back to normal.

CITY OF QUINCY

Final Statement of Community Development Objectives and Projected Use of CDBG Funds

1987-1988 Program Year

I Introduction

The City of Quincy will receive $1,837,000 in Community Development Bloc Grant (CDBG) Entitlement funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for the 1987-1988 program year. This statement describes community development objectives of the City of Quincy and projected use of CDBG funds for the 1987-1988 program year and expenditure of CDBG funds to date for the program year ending June 30, 1987. Public comments regarding this statement are welcome and should be addressed to the Department of Planning and Community Development, Quincy City Hall.

II Community Development Objectives

As the City plans and implements its community development activities, it aims to carry out the CDBG Program's primary national objectives which include decent housing and a suitable living environment and expanding economic opportunity, principally for persons of low and moderate income.

To this end, the City has established several objectives for its CDBG program:

1. Housing
   - Maintain decent, safe and sanitary housing conditions for all residents.
   - Preserve and rehabilitate the City's housing stock.
   - Create affordable rental and homeownership opportunities for low and moderate income residents.
2. Public Service
   - Provide a variety of health programs, social services, educational and cultural opportunities and recreational activities for residents of all ages.
3. Economic Development
   - Foster economic stability and growth in the City's commercial areas.
   - Leverage private investment with the community and create additional employment opportunities for the City's low and moderate income residents.
4. Public Works
   - Maintain and improve the City's infrastructure in order to promote neighborhood revitalization.
   - Renovate existing public parks and playgrounds and construct new recreational facilities.

Through the establishment and pursuit of these objectives, the City of Quincy makes a firm commitment to all components of its neighborhoods - housing, infrastructure, parks and playgrounds, public services and commercial development. The projected use of funds allocated for the 1987-1988 program has been developed so as to give maximum feasible priority to activities which will benefit low and moderate income persons. The City has allocated 74 percent of total funding for this purpose.

III Projected Use of CDBG Entitlement Funds for the 1987-1988 Program Year

Housing/Commercial Rehabilitation	$458,000
Housing Development Corporation	150,000
Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services	22,500
Public Works Improvements:
Atlantic Germantown, Houghs Neck Montclair Quincy Point Southwest Wollaston Quincy Center
	374,450
Commercial Development Loan Fund	100,000
Business and Professional Organization	15,000
Elderly Outreach/Van Program	109,925
Neighborhood Recreational and Social Services: Atlantic Germantown Adams Shore Houghs Neck Beechwood Ward Two Squantum Community Center
	165,625
Planning and Administration	313,000
Contingency	128,500
TOTAL	$1,837,000

Expenditures proposed under the 1987-1988 CDBG program demonstrates the City's continuing commitment to the goal of providing decent, safe and sanitary housing for all residents. Funds are provided to extend the City's housing rehabilitation loan and grant programs and to provide support for the operation of Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, Inc.

A new housing initiative is planned which is intended to create greater affordable housing opportunities for low and moderate income persons. Under this initiative, start-up funds will be provided for the Quincy Affordable Housing Development Corporation (QAHDC), a local non-profit corporation made up of representatives of development firms, banks, business groups and concerned citizen groups. By acquiring and developing privately or City-owned land and by rehabilitating and converting deteriorated or abandoned structures into residential units, the QAHDC hopes to increase availability of owner-occupied or rental housing for low and moderate income families, elderly citizens, minorities and handicapped persons.

Funding for reconstruction of streets and sidewalks and other public works improvements to be carried out in all areas of the City, is substantially increased under this budget.

The Commercial Development Loan Fund, a new program initiated over the past year, proved to be effective in meeting the City's goals of assisting in rehabilitation and expansion of local businesses, leveraging additional private investment in the City's commercial areas and creating additional employment opportunities for low and moderate income persons. Accordingly, additional funding to meet the demand for these loans is provided.

Finally, the City's continued commitment to human services, particularly to addressing the needs of the elderly, is reflected in this year's budget. The City's proposed allocation, which reaches the maximum level of expenditures allowed for public services, once again provides funding for the City's elderly outreach program and for operation of seven community centers providing health, educational and social services for residents of all age groups.

IV CDBG Entitlement Funds Expended During 1986-1987 Program Year. The current program year will end June 30, 1987. Below are expenditures through March 30, 1987 only:

Housing Rehabilitation	$536,749
Commercial Rehabilitation	512,551
Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services	35,908
Public Works Improvements	83,023
Tree Planting	1,815
Professional & Business Groups	12,000
Elderly Outreach Van Program	76,674
Neighborhood Recreational & Social Services	124,292
Planning and Administration	240,552
Property Acquisition Appraisal	48,856
TOTAL	$1,672,420

NOTES: 1. The above expenditures were drawn from the CDBG allocation for the 1986-1987 program year and from previous years' allocations.

2. The City anticipates additional program income, from revolving loan funds, of $200,000 to be used to fund residential rehabilitation loans.

A major objective established for the past year's CDBG program is the preservation and improvement of the City's housing stock, particularly those residences located in low and moderate income neighborhoods. A review of expenditures indicates the City's commitment to carrying out this objective. Approximately one third of total expenditures has been spent on major housing initiatives: A housing rehabilitation program providing low cost loans or grants to eligible homeowners and landlords, and funding of operating costs and capitalization of a revolving loan pool to be operated by Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services in its new target area, Quincy Point. Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services provides rehabilitation loans tailored to the financial capabilities of eligible applicants.

Provisions of basic and necessary human services, another goal of the 1986-1987 CDBG program, is addressed by the program's public service component. This includes operation of seven community centers providing health, educational and social programs for residents of all ages and operation of a senior citizens' van transportation program. While public services expenditures are capped by CDBG regulations, the City is consistently at the maximum level of expenditures allowed.

The City increased its efforts toward the goal of commercial area revitalization by initiating a commercial development loan fund to provide local businesses with low cost loans for expansion and rehabilitation. Businesses receiving assistance under this program, in turn, create job opportunities for low and moderate income persons or assist in eliminating slums and blight.

The City's commitment to its stated goal of improving the infrastructure and renovating public parks and playgrounds is reflected in approximately $85,000 in expenditures for tree planting and reconstruction of streets and sidewalks.

Finally, the City has given maximum feasible priority to funding activities which benefit low and moderate income families. Nearly 80% of CDBG funds expended over the past program year were used for that purpose.

V. Displacement

The City of Quincy undertakes all of its CDBG programs and activities in a manner which either eliminates or minimizes the displacement of persons. To this end, the City has prepared and is following a displacement plan. A copy of this plan is available through the Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development.

Be it Ordained by the City Council of the City of Quincy as follows:

That the Revised Ordinances of the City of Quincy, 1976 as amended, are further amended in Chapter 24, The Zoning Ordinance, Article I Administration, Section 14, Board of Appeals to read as follows.

Section 14 Board of Appeals

1. There shall be a Board of Appeals as provided by the General Laws, Chapter 40A, Section 12, as amended, which shall act on all matters within its jurisdiction under this chapter in the manner prescribed in such section and shall have all powers granted by such section, subject always to the rule that it shall give due consideration to the promotion of public health, safety, convenience and welfare, encouraging the most proper use of land, and conserving property values, that it shall permit no building or use injurious, noxious, offensive or detrimental to a neighborhood and that it shall prescribe proper conditions and safeguards in each case.

The Board shall consist of five (5) members to be appointed by the Mayor. All members of the Board shall be residents of the City; one member shall be an attorney at law, and one shall be either an architect, engineer or master builder. The terms shall be arranged, so that one member is appointed on the first Monday of each February for a term of five years. Any vacancy in the Board shall be filled for the remainder of the unexpired term.

There shall also be three (3) associate members of the Board of Appeals who shall be appointed in like manner and have the same qualifications as the regular members of the Board, but for a term of three years. In case of an unfilled vacancy, inability to act, or interest on the part of a member of such Board, the chairman shall designate one (1) of the associate members to take the place of such member.

The Board of Appeals shall exercise the powers and perform the duties prescribed for a Board of Appeals under the provisions of the General Laws, Chapter 40A, or any amendments thereto. Any action of such Board under such sections shall be in accordance with and subject to the terms thereof.

2. The Board of Appeals may request the written comments and recommendations of the Planning Department and any other municipal office it deems proper during its review of any petition. Any such request, however, shall not toll the periods established by Chapter 40A of the General Laws within which the Board must act.

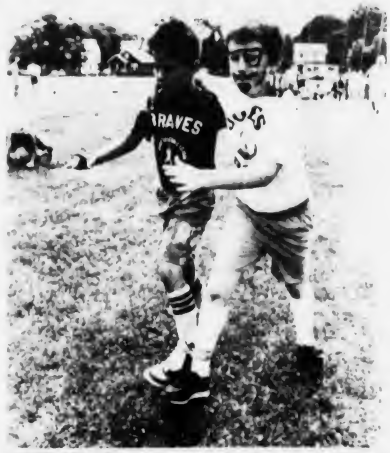
Doughnut Shop Traffic Hearing Placed On File For Year

By JANE ARENA

The City License Board, in a special meeting, placed on file a hearing concerning traffic conditions at Squantum Donuts, doing business as Dunkin' Donuts, at the corner of East Squantum St., and Quincy Shore Dr.

Rona Goodman, president of the Squantum Community Association, told the board last Thursday some improvement has been made since hearings were held in late May, but that the problem had not been alleviated.

In May the board had suggested that the shop block off the East Squantum St. entrance to the shop and that the Quincy Shore Dr. entrance be used as a two-way entrance and egress.



Neil Kerstein, attorney for the shop's owner, Paul Govostes, said that the shop did not block off the entrance because the MDC police had said that a separate entrance and exit are needed.

Building Inspector Kenneth Johnson said that the Quincy Shore Dr. entrance could be a two-way because it is wide enough to meet the 24 foot requirement for a two-way entrance and exit.

The board had also suggested that the curb on East Squantum St. be extended in order to prevent cars from turning illegally off Quincy Shore Dr. to enter the shop. Kerstein said that barriers had been erected for this purpose.

Police Chief Francis Finn recommended that the shop continue to cooperate in the matter and that the city petition to extend the island onto a small portion of MDC operated property. The city would have to petition the MDC for the use of the property. Chief Finn also recommended that Quincy Police Captain Walter Frazier monitor the traffic conditions and set up a morning detail in the area if he finds it necessary.

One-Man Patrol Cars Take Road

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The Quincy Police Department was scheduled to put into effect yesterday (Wednesday) the one-man patrol car system which was recommended in a report of the department last year.

However, two-man cars will still be used for certain sections of the city, and for certain situations.

"Statistically, one man cars have been proven to decrease crime," said Capt. Fred Laracy, acting chief in the absence of Chief Francis Finn who is on vacation.

"Some people are for it, some are against it," he said.

"I feel it's worthy of a tryout. If we find that it is not successful, then we'll change it.

"If it is successful, then adoption of it is acceptable," said Laracy, who noted that Boston has employed the system for several years.

According to Laracy, the same number of officers as before will be on patrol, but distribution will be according to need.

Quincy, which had been broken down into five areas for police purposes, will now have four sections, he said.

The North Quincy section will now have four, one-man cars; Houghs Neck section, which starts at the police station, will have one, two-man car for Germantown, and two one-man cars; QuincyN Point three, one-man cars, and West Quincy, three, one-man cars, according to Laracy.

"We'll make sure at least 13 cars are on the road at all times," he said.

In addition, eight members of a special impact shift, generally assigned 6 p.m. to 2 a.m., will be used in trouble areas, said Laracy, who noted that those hours have proven throughout the country to be the peak hours for crime.

"They'll give assistance to the officers regularly working that night," he said.

"We expect to run into minor disruptions, but they will be corrected as we go along," Laracy said.

In addition to increased police visibility, the one-man patrol car system reportedly is safer, police officers are more alert, and there is better product output, according to Laracy.

Quicker response time to calls is also reported to be a benefit, he said.

According to Laracy, the department has been working

Legion National Commander Elect:

Comer Personally Supports North's Actions

By JANE ARENA

National Commander-elect of the American Legion, John P. ("Jake") Comer said in a press conference Tuesday that "The American Legion has not taken a position on (Lt. Col. Oliver) North," but said that he personally is in support of him.

"I have to feel that he was acting on orders from above," Comer said. He further stated that America is "privileged" to have a patriot such as North.

"I wish Ollie North all the best. I believe he was a man in uniform doing all he could for his country and that he felt he was doing the right thing," Comer said.

These statements were made during a press conference called by Comer to discuss his recent trip to El Salvador and Nicaragua and the American Legion's policy toward those countries.

"Our organization is in support of the Contras," he said, "and in support of democracy in those areas."

The past four National Commanders of the American Legion have made visits to Central America, Comer noted, but he chose to make the trip before he is installed into office in August so that he can discuss the issues at the Legion's National Convention soon after he takes office. Comer said that he also hopes to meet with President Reagan soon after he is installed.

JOHN P. COMER

Among the issues he plans to review with the president is the American trade embargo on Nicaragua, he said.

"The embargo on Nicaragua may very well be hurting the people we want to help," he said. "It hurts the people in terms of supplies."

Comer noted that people in the country are having difficulty even locating supplies and materials to repair shoes, and also related that people must purchase toilet paper by the piece as they stand in lines to use public facilities.

"Central America is a devastated place," he said. "The poverty is unbelievable.'

Comer said that he also sees the need for increased economic support to the Contras in Nicaragua "if there is to be a democracy there."

"Even if we don't give military aid," he said, "they still need economic support."

Comer further stated that scholarship aid to Nicaragua is lacking and that Russia is giving more scholarship aid than the U.S.

"The American Legion has always been a strong supporter of scholarship aid," he noted.

Comer also spoke about the Communist regime of the Sandinista government and of his dealings with government leaders during his two-day visit there.

He said that the Sandinista ambassador in Washington had told Comer that he would be able to visit a military air base in Nicaragua and that arrangements had been made for the visit. However, government officials in Nicaragua told Comer that nothing had been arranged and that a request must be made to visit the base 48 hours in advance. Comer called the incident an example of "Communists speaking out of both sides of their mouths."

He also told reporters that his hotel room in Nicaragua had been searched twice during his stay, and spoke of "Communist harassment tactics" against Catholic priests in the country.

"We stopped our support of the Sandinistas because the people were better off under a totalitarian regime," he said.

He further stated that the American Legion will be "supportive of Contra aid until free elections can be certified." He stressed, however, that the American Legion is strongly opposed to sending American troops into Nicaragua.

"The American Legion will never again sponsor a war that we cannot win," he said.

Sheets Opposes Expansion Of S. Q. T Garage

Ward 4 City Councillor James Sheets said he will introduce a resolution at the next City Council meeting opposing the expansion of the Quincy Adams Parking Garage, South Quincy, from 2000 to a 3000 car parking capacity.

The state Department of Transportation had announced an interest in expanding the facility which now allegedly is at capacity, according to Sheets.

The councillor indicated he will work with the Quincy delegation on Beacon Hill, Representatives Michael Morrissey, Thomas Brownell and Robert Cerasoli, as well as Sen. Paul Harold to block the proposed expansion.

Sheets indicated that the expansion would add to the traffic and air pollution of the area.

He also said that if the plans called for adding a number of parking decks, the appearance from Independence Ave. and the closeness to the homes on the Independence St. area would be "absolutely unacceptable."

According to Councillor Sheets, the city was not informed of the intention of the Department of Transportation.

Sheets said that if the department insists on proceeding, he will demand a full environmental impact study, among other things.

City Advertises For New Building Inspector

The city advertised in the Boston Sunday Globe last weekend for a building inspector to replace Ken Johnson who recently left the $39,501 position after about a year to take a more lucrative job in the private sector.

"We decided to go out and readvertise," said Mayor Francis McCauley, who had offered the job to a local resident who declined the position.

In the meantime, McCauley said he appointed Assistant Building Inspector Taylor Ahearn to serve as Acting Building Inspector.

Ahearn, a career employee, will receive the salary of the building inspector and will sit on the Quincy License Board, McCauley said.

The city also readvertised for a traffic engineer to work out of the Planning Department to implement some recommendations made in the Traffic 2000 Study, the mayor said.

A New GOP Start?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Massachusetts Republican Party is still the elephant joke of the country. The Bay State is now so securely in the strong hands of the Democratic Party that the state GOP has become little more than a political nuisance. However, one-party states are unhealthy because the dominant party decides the entire political agenda.

Up in New Hampshire, the same thing is happening except it's the New Hampshire Republicans who are in charge. However, the weaker Granite State Democratic party chaired by J. Joseph Grandmaison is not waving a white flag and with state leaders like Paul MacEachern, a strong but unsuccessful gubernatorial candidate last year, the Democrats are better off than they have been in years.

While the Republicans outnumber them in the State House of Representatives and State Senate by a two-to-one margin, the Democrats are continually fighting back. Even though the governor and both US Senators are members of the GOP, the Democrats are beginning to win special elections in the Legislature and hope to make giant inroads in statewide offices as well. One reason for such optimism can be found in the Democratic belief that they can bounce back. Last year, they took their issues and sold them to the political center, a strategy that is geared for victory.

However...the Massachusetts Republican Party remains in the eyes of the electorate to be nothing more than an anti-Democrat Party. This image and strategy must change if the state GOP is ever to elect more of their numbers into electoral office.

The Massachusetts Republican Party must be more than a narrow-based conservative party. It must reach out to the political center and sell their issues to Democrats and Independents as well as to Republicans. But when the state GOP is infighting so often, how can it reach outside to non-Republicans?

The Republican leadership now in command under chairman Ray Shamie must mold the state party into an open party aiming for the centrist majority of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. While active Republicans tend to be more conservative, the vast majority of the entire statewide electorate is much more moderate and is turned off by extreme conservative positions.

President Reagan's charisma may have carried Massachusetts in two presidential elections but Reagan Republicans will find it extremely hard to do likewise when running for legislative and statewide public offices.

The bottom line for Massachusetts Republicans is to reach out to the electorate as a party with open arms, ready to accept all. The party that once housed the Christian Herters, John Volpes, Frank Sargents and Ed Brookes must be ready and willing to share the political scene with the John Sears, the Andy Cards, the Ed Kings and the Ray Shamies.

Remember, when you're down and out, the only way is up. To do otherwise is to wave the white flag of surrender!

Special Primary --- Maybe

City Clerk John Gillis estimates it will cost about $20,000 for a special primary and final election to determine Rep. Thomas Brownell's successor.

GILLIS

Big question: Will there be a special election?

There's no doubt that Brownell, who has been nominated for a judgeship at Plymouth District Court by Gov. Michael Dukakis will be confirmed by the Governor's Council.

BROWNELL

Brownell would like to stay on until October to steer legislation he has filed through the House. One piece, ironically, is a judicial reform bill.

If he does stay until then a special election might not be set until January or February. It takes something like 14 weeks for the election process to allow candidates time to take out nomination papers, collect signatures, to campaign - and, of course to publicize the elections for the voters.

To call or not to call a special election will be up to House Speaker George Keverian who says he may but, then again, may not.

KEVERIAN

If the election couldn't be called before January or February, the indication is that Keverian would leave the seat open until next year's regular state election.

He notes that Quincy meanwhile still has two other legislators who could look out for Brownell's district (Second Norfolk) constituents.

TOLAND

"It would not be fair to the district," she says, "to leave that seat vacant until January, 1989." That is what it would mean if it was decided to wait until the November, 1988 state election to fill the seat. The winner of that election would not take office until January, 1989.

If a special election is called it would be better for Toland and two other potential candidates if it were to be held in February.

That would be far enough away from this year's city elections so that Toland, Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney and School Committeeman Vice Chairman Steve Durkin could run for re-election this year instead of having to make a choice this year whether to seek re-election or run for the Brownell seat.

Toland would like to run for the Brownell seat but, she says, until the special election matter is "clarified" she is a candidate for re-election to the City Council at-large and nothing else.

Cheney is thinking about it.

Durkin has indicated he will seek re-election to the School Committee but might run for the Brownell seat if the special election is set for around February.

Meanwhile Sheila McIntyre, wife of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, who was also a state representative, is still giving serious thought to running as is Tony Siciliano, Deputy Civil Defense Director.

Newest name being mentioned as a candidate is Charles Shea, Jr., son of former City Councillor and State Rep. Charles Shea.

FORMER Quincy Atty. Samuel Coffman who died recently at age 88, was a man a little ahead of his times when it came to foresight.

Some 25 or so years ago, Coffman proposed building a parking garage in the Ross parking area.

But some of Quincy's business leaders of that time shot the idea down at a City Council hearing. A garage in the Ross parking area would spoil the beauty of the beautiful rear entrancees to some of the stores -- one in particular -- the anti-garage theme went.

Years later, when a parking garage was built there, a few of these leaders still left, thought it was a great idea. To hear one or two of them you would have thought it was their idea.

Some of these so-called leaders were the same ones who opposed linking downtown Quincy to Capens Bridge in Braintree back when the Southeast Expressway was being built.

And, when that was finally done -- years later with the Burgin Parkway extension -- they thought that was a terrific idea, too.

Ah, hindsight!

Siciliano Seeks Changes In Laws Affecting Aux. Police

Anthony Siciliano, Quincy's Auxiliary Police Chief, has written to the State Secretary of Public Safety stating he feels it is his "duty and responsibility" to see that changes are made in the laws which govern auxiliary police.

Quincy's Auxiliary Police officers have not been allowed to perform their duties since late last year because of possible legal liability to the officer or city.

Siciliano's letter came after a City Hall meeting last week where those attending agreed the problem can't be addressed on a local level.

In the July 9, letter to Charles Barry, Siciliano stated that the laws must be changed "because circumstances require that we reevaluate the direction and goals of agency programs."

"In my capacity as Quincy's Deputy Director of Public Safety Civil Defense, and as the Auxiliary Police Chief and also as chairman of the Massachusetts Auxiliary Police Association Inc. Task Force, I feel that it is my duty and responsibility to see that revisions and changes are brought about," he stated.

"The term 'liability' is used constantly by local officials regarding auxiliary police utilization in the city of Quincy and in communities throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

"Officials are not always aware that they too may be held legally liable if they are not prepared to respond properly to emergencies or disasters.

"Furthermore, they may be liable if recognized potential hazards are not included in their local emergency response plans. Court cases have already established legal precedents in both of these areas.

"... If Auxiliary Police volunteers are to sit idle, waiting for an emergency situation to happen, then how are they to be expected to perform properly when a situation does happen?

"Auxiliary Police volunteer personnel who are properly trained under the guidelines of the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council should be allowed by law to perform duties which could be considered as continuous training in non-emergency situations such as vandalism patrols of schools, playgrounds, crowd control, etc.

"The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is in danger of losing their most precious asset...unless something is done to protect it, if they are not kept active and trained in non-emergency roles, the auxiliary police may not be available at times of intense emergencies and disasters."

Siciliano also wrote a letter last month to Robert J. Boulay, director of the Massachusetts Civil Defense Agency, requesting a meeting with Atty. Gen. James Shannon, Barry, and the Mass. Auxiliary Police Association Task Force.

Purpose of the meeting would be to review and change, if necessary, the regulations which govern auxiliary police in cities and towns which will enable them to be called out for duty in non-emergency situations also.

Boulay responded that Stan Adelman, legal counsel for the Executive Office of Public Safety who attended the Quincy City Hall meeting, would prepare a synopsis and findings of that meeting.

Siciliano said he was pleased that the issue was reaching the state level.

"It encourages me," he said. "At least we have the state listening to us."

One-Man Patrol Cars

on the one-man car system for several years.

The change in patrol systems will affect some 100 patrolmen and communication personnel, according to a press release from Chief Finn. The majority are men, but some are women.

"All officers concerned with this change have received instructions at in-service training sessions in order to create a safe transition to the one-man car patrol system," stated Finn.

"The safety of the police officer is the deep concern of the department. It is with this objective in mind that operating procedures have been devised for the one-man patrol unit," he said.

"Maintaining a communications link between the motorized unit and the dispatcher is vital for the protection and assistance of an officer in the field.

"The dispatcher must share the burden of protecting the officer in the motorized unit. He must be kept fully informed of any situation affecting an assignment or of any action initiated by a motorized unit."

"... The dispatcher is the partner of the officer in the one-man car."

The procedures include suggested actions for situations broken down into three levels of hazard to the officer.

Seven situations require response from at least two officers, according to Finn.

They are an assault on an officer, on-scene arrest for a felony or violent misdemeanor, resistance to arrest, use of force, crime in progress, family disputes and fleeing suspect.

The one-man patrol car system was among a number of recommendations suggested in a controversial report on the Quincy Police Department that was suggested by the Field Services Division of the Massachusetts Municipal Association in October, 1986.

Plan A Referendum Signatures Certified

July 15-21, 1955
32 Years Ago

A City Hall source disclosed that 5,700 out of 7,500 signatures on Plan A petitions had been certified, more than enough to place the question on the referendum ballot for the Nov. 8 city election.

However, the Quincy Taxpayers Association announced that it would go ahead with plans to hire a handwriting expert to challenge the validity of the signatures needed to qualify; 4,599.

City Clerk Donald P. Crane said he would not release official word on the petitions until he returned from vacation in mid-August.

If Plan A proponents were successful in the fall, the new form of city government would go into effect in January 1958. Quincy operated under the Plan E type of government since 1950.

Iced Apple Cake
A Delicious, Moist Dessert

At our July 4th weekend cookout, some of my guests brought dessert. One of my nieces, Ann, who can bake just about anything, brought her original recipe for iced apple cake, a most delicious moist dessert. It just went so well with a cup of tea when I was able to sit for a minute. Here is the recipe.

ANN'S ICED APPLE CAKE

Peel and cut four or five large apples, set aside.

Mix:
1½ cups sugar
½ cup margerine
2 eggs
Stir in 1 cup of milk
Mix together:
3 cups flour,
4 tsps baking powder
1 tsp salt
Add:
2 Tbsps cinnamon and cut up apples

Mix together and bake in 350 degree oven for 30 minutes. Cool and ice with ¾ cup confectionary sugar with about five or six tablespoons of water until smooth. Pour over cooled cake and cut in squares. (Pan size approximately 10 x 14)

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

One of the best quotes on happiness we have come across is one by J. Walter Sylvester ... "Happiness comes not from without but from within. It comes not from the power of possession but from the power of appreciation."

THe struggle to enjoy life, to be contented and satisfied, is a constant one. In recent years crime, corruption and crises of life - added to the fast pace of modern living - have made realization of contentment, peace of mind, true happiness even more difficult to achieve.

The secret is still the same; it lies in the mind ... Those who are able to limit their goals, desires and dreams to reasonable ones, who will keep in mind the lot of those less fortunate than they and who accept the world as it is, and people as they are, can still find serenity.

The key to inner hapiness, then, is not to be found in money, power, position or influence over others. It's to be found in one's mind, in viewing life relatively, with a realistic sense of proportion, thereby achieving an inner peace (and here faith can help) neither human beings nor daily events can threaten ...

'Love Your Enemies' Sermon Covenant Congregational Topic

On Sunday at the 10 a.m. worship service of the Covenant Congregational Church, Whitwell and Granite Sts., Rev. Fred Lawson will preach on the topic of Christ's admonition to 'Love your enemies.'

This is the second in a series of messages based on the gospel of Luke. The service will be held in the sanctuary rather than outside so the minister of music, Richard Smith, can play an organ solo.

All members are reminded that during the summer season, each one has a responsibility to act as greeter. A nursery for children age five and younger is available and will be attended by Lori-Anne Facella. Following the service, a coffee hour will be shared in Person Hall.

On Wednesday, Vacation Day Camp began at 9:30 a.m. Each session will last until 11:30 a.m. There is a registration fee of $4 per camper, with a maximum fee of $10 per family.

The theme is "A Journey to Japan" and activities will be related to that theme.

The Day Camp will be held through Aug. 12, and on the last day a trip to Drumlin Farm is planned.

More information about any of the church's activities is available by calling the church office at 479-5728.

'Rooted In God' Squantum Church Sermon Topic

"Rooted In God" was the title of the sermon preached Sunday by pastor Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin at the First Church of Squantum.

His text was the entire first Psalm, which begins, "Blessed is the man who walks not in the counsel of the wicked, nor stands in the way of sinners, nor sits in the seat of scoffers..."

The hymns sung by the congregation were "Praise to the Lord, the Almighty," "O for a Thousand Tongues to Sing," and "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus."

Pianist Janet Williamson and organist Mary Ruth Scott accompanied the congregational singing. For the offertory, Janet Williamson played "Prayer" by Englebert Humperdinck. She was accompanied by Mary Ruth Scott.

Kate Crossman and Eva Martin were the greeters for the morning. Stewart Scott and Tore Wallin were the ushers. May Lewis and Grace Holmes hosted the Fellowship Hour after the service.

During the summer, the Sunday worship services all begin at 9:30 a.m. Visitors are always welcome.

Grade seven speakers were Cassian Jae, Jodie Pacheco, Amy Wong and Michael Giese who also served as master of ceremonies.

'What Ever Happened To Hell?' Sermon At Bethany Church

During the summer at Bethany Congregational Church, Coddington and Spear Sts., Quincy Center, there will be one worship service at 10 a.m. in the sanctuary.

The Rev. J. William Arnold, senior minister, will preach the sermon Sunday, July 19, on the question, "What Ever Happened To Hell?" Lay scripture reader will be Shirley D. Pyne.

Edward Ouellette, tenor, will be the guest soloist, with Peter E. Krasinski, Bethany's director of music at the organ console. Ouellette will sing two selections: "Agnus Dei" by Georges Franck and "O Divine Redeemer" by Charles Gounod.

The Church School is closed for the summer. However, nursery care for babies and toddlers is provided.

The worship service will be broadcast "live" direct from Bethany's sanctuary at 10 a.m. over radio station WJDA, 1300 kc.

A fellowship hour will be held in the Allen Parlor at 11 a.m. following the worship service. Individuals and families from the area are invited to share in both the worship and fellowship.

For more information about Bethany's ministries and programs, contact the church office at 479-7300.

Chris Peter Memorial Blood Drive

The Chris Peter Memorial Blood Drive will be held Thursday, July 16 from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. at St. Thomas Aquinas Church Hall, 1000 Sea St., Quincy.

Chris Peter, who was a strong supporter of the blood program, was killed in September of 1984 by a drunk driver. As a tribute to their son, Charlie and Trudy Peter hold a blood drive to raise public awareness of the problem of drunk driving and at the same time, ensure the adequate blood supply for patients in need of blood's life saving qualities.

During the summer, it is most difficult to maintain the community blood supply, so blood donations are essential. The American Red Cross, with help from the family and friends of the Peters and the Quincy community, hopes to collect over 100 units of blood.

By donating blood, you will join Charles and Trudy Peter in this special tribute to life.

To make a donation appointment or for more information call the Peters at 471-9586.

International Exchange Program Appoints Two Community Counselors

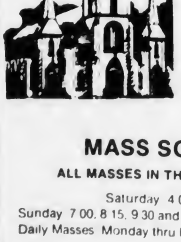
Scott Goldman, an English teacher for the Boston community schools, is an active member of Boston's theater community, as well as being a veteran traveler.

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin, he has taught in Holyoke and Amherst, and coached basketball at Concord Academy.



The AYUSA Program offers American families, high school students, and communities the opportunity to increase their understanding of the cultures of Europe, the Orient, Central America, and the Philippines by hosting an international student.

Community leaders, educators, parents, and students are encouraged to contact Joyce and Goldman at 524-4050 for more information about AYUSA's exchange programs, or write to AYUSA International Regional Office, 30 Austin St., Hyde Park, MA. 02136.

25 To Compete For Miss Quincy Bay Title

Twenty-five contestants will compete for the title of Miss Quincy Bay of 1987 and some $2,500 in prizes Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Quincy Center Plaza.

The beauty pageant, highlight of the annual Quincy Sidewalk Bazaar, will for the fifth year be held at Quincy Center Plaza at Hancock and Granite Sts.

It will start at 7:30 p.m., an hour and a half earlier than in past years.

The new queen, who will be crowned by last year's winner, Michelle Toth of Weymouth, will reign over Quincy Bay Race Week July 29 to Aug. 2.

She will also receive the largest share of the prizes. The four runners-up will also share in the prizes which will include diamond earrings, restaurant gift certificates, savings bonds and other gifts.

Music for the pageant will be provided by Baron Hugo and his orchestra.

Bernie Reisberg will be the emcee.

There will be five judges: Dr. O. Clayton Johnson, Quincy Junior College president; Sal Gallinaro, Quincy Bay Race Week Association president; Cynthia Ryder, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association; Tricia A. Tanner, Miss Quincy Bay 1985; Ronald E. Zooleck, executive director, South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Tabulator is Richard Corner.

The 50th anniversary of Quincy Bay Race Week will also be celebrated.

In case of inclement weather, the pageant will be held Saturday at 6 p.m. at Quincy Center Plaza.

The pageant is cosponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and the Quincy Bay Race Week Association.

Morrisette Drive In High Gear

The Morrisette Legion baseball team won two of three games during the past week to improve its record to 11-4 as it continues its drive toward a playoff berth in Zone 6.

The four top teams will meet in a double elimination playoff series to determine the zone's representative in the state playoffs. There is a real log jam with Morrisette, Milton, Mass. Truck of Weymouth and Braintree in the running for the four spots. Morrisette has played all its games, but the other tree teams have several games to make up.

Morrisette will meet Quincy Friday night at 8:30 at Adams Field and will be home to Holbrook Monday night at 8:30 at Adams.

Morrisette rolled over Randolph, 13-4, Monday night at Randolph as Dan Overby got his first start since recovering from tendonitis. He went five innings, allowed five hits, struck out four and walked two, giving up no earned runs. Larry Taglieri relieved and struck out the three men he faced.

Morrisette scored six runs in the second inning, breaking a 1-1 tie. It added five in the fourth and one in the fifth.

Dan Biagini and Rob McDonald supplied the fireworks for Morrisette as Biagini went 4-for-4, a triple, double and two singles and five RBI.

McDonald was 2-for-3 with a walk. He had a three-run homer and drove in four runs. Steve Minichiello, Ed Flavin and Chris Ricciuti had singles.

In its previous game Morrisette lost for the second time to Mass. Truck, 10-5, again hurting themselves with poor defense. Mike Marini went the route for Weymouth, defeating Morrisette for the second time.

Mass. Truck scored six unearned runs in the fifth inning to put the game away.

Trailing, 9-0, Morrisette scored twice in the sixth and three times in the seventh and left the bases loaded.

McDonald had two hits and two RBI, Biagini had an RBI single as did Bob Cinquegrano and Minichiello. Ricciuti and Bill McDougal had singles. Tim Brillo pitched well in relief of Chambers.

Earlier Morrisette had exploded for 12 runs in the first inning and rolled over Braintree, 13-2, as Taglieri pitched his fourth win in five starts against Braintree in three years. In these five games he has a 1.50 ERA.

Morrisette sent 15 men to bat in the opening inning and had eight hits, including two doubles, a triple and back to back homers. It was aided by two Braintree errors and two walks.

Leadoff batter Flavin beat out an infield hit, stole second and continued to third on a bad throw by the catcher. He scored as Minichiello reached on an error, Biagini doubled to left scoring Minichiello, McDonald reached on a fielders choice as Biagini scored, Ron Fletcher walked, Ricciuti reached on an error, McDougal singled, Mike Mullaney doubled, Taglieri walked, Minichiello singled and Biagini cleared the bases with a triple. McDonald followed with a two-run homer off lefty Chris Lane, who just came in in relief. Fletcher followed with a solo homer. Lane settled down and allowed only two hits and a run over the next six innings.

Meanwhile Taglieri was cruising along, scattering six hits, striking out five and walking three in improving his record to 6-1.

Biagini had another big night with a triple, double and single and four RBI, while McDougal had two hits and McDonald had his home run and four RBI.

Sean Mulkern struck out 16 as Bryan Post and Barry's Deli played to a thrilling 7-7 tie in the Babe Ruth League. The game was halted by curfew after eight innings.

Denny McLean, Joe Bevilacqua and Mike Doherty played well for Barry's.

Bryan scored first on hits by Aaron Silverman and Mulkern, but Barry's came back to take a 4-1 lead on key hits by McLean and Bevilacqua. Bryan closed to 4-2 on hits by Donnie Anderson and Pat McDonough but Barry's widened its lead to 5-2 on McLean's long triple.

Bryan drew to within 5-4 on hits by Anderson, Chris Stenmon and Brian O'Malley but Barry's added a run on hits by Ken Staskywicz and Jim Glynn.

Bryan made it 6-5 on Anderson's double but Barry's made it 7-5 in the

Quincy Cable Takes 2 Out Of 3

Quincy Cable improved its record to 13-7 in the Quincy Junior Baseball League by taking two of three games last week.

Cable squeaked by Kiwanis, 5-4, in an extra-inning contest and edged Foley Chrysler, 11-7. Burgin Platner eased by Cable, 6-1.

In the Kiwanis game, Aidan O'Donaghue held Kiwanis to one run until the sixth inning and needed relief help from Jay Schnabel to preserve the victory. O'Donaghue struck out 10 and Schnabel added three strikeouts in an inning and one-half in relief.

O'Donaghue and Schnabel were both 4-for-4 as Cable pounded out 14 hits. Terry Sheehan and Mike Kavanaugh each had two hits while Jamie Schatzel and Brian Wood added singles.

Schnabel picked up the win in the Foley game, striking out seven. Schnabel also helped the Cable cause going 3-for-4, including a single, double and two-run homer for five RBI. Sheehan was 3-for-3, Schatzel had two hits and other hitters included A.J. Carthas, Kavanaugh, Wood, Chris Sullivan, Neil Mahoney and Clint Fullerton.

For Foley, Sergi Wassilieu had three hits, including a grand slam homer, a double and single for five RBI. Foley was held to six hits.

Against Burgin Platner, Cable batters outhit their rivals, 7 to 5, but excellent defensive plays by Burgin players and a six-run, first inning proved to be the difference.

After the first inning, Cable pitcher Wood, in relief of Schatzel, held the Burgin team hitless in the next four innings, striking out six.

Cable scored its only run when Sheehan doubled to drive in O'Donaghue who reached second base on a fielder's choice and a stolen base. Other Cable hitters were Carthas (2-for-3), O'Donaghue (2-for-3), Wood, a double, and Dan Donahue.

For Cable, stunning defensive plays were turned in by Carthas, who played shortstop and second base, Mahoney, Wood, and O'Donaghue.

Granite City Clinches National League Title

Granite City Electric clinched the Babe Ruth League National League championship with wins over Sons of Italy and Bank of New England, improving its record to 16-4 with games remaining with Quincy Police and Local 1139.

Pitcher Erik DeBoer (4-0), coming back from arm problems, struck out nine Morrisette batters, giving up only three singles as Granite City won, 3-1. Morrisette's Mat Smith deserved a better fate as he allowed only six hits and struck out 11.

In the second inning DeBoer singled, took second on a passed ball and scored on Angelo Kyranis' single. Kyranis moved up on a wild pitch, Steve Wysocki and Andy Colleary walked to load the bases and Wayne Sit's line single drove in Kyranis and Wysocki.

DeBoer had two singles and Wysocki and Mike Picariello one each. Shortstop Tony Anderlionis and center fielder Jim Munroe anchored the Granite City defense.

Granite City's 15-year old players, DeBoer, Kyranis, Anderlionis, Wysocki and Jim Munroe had fine seasons. Against Bank of New England the 15-year olds had all 10 hits as Granite City rolled, 10-4.

Munroe led the attack with three hits, a double and two singles, and scored four runs. Anderlionis had a great game at shortstop, had two singles and scored twice. DeBoer doubled and tripled and Kyranis, one of the most improved players in the league, had a single and a ground rule double. Wysocki had the other hit, a single.

Kevin Daly, Tom Balzano, George Rozanitis and Rich McDonald had doubles and Kevin Johnson a single for Bank of N.E. Chris Abbate, Kevin McDougall, Tom Norton, George Fahey and Eric Sprague played fine ball.

Also playing well for Granite City were Andy Veneziano, Ed Costello, Dave Jolley, Vin Anderlionis and Corey Haddad.

seventh on Glynn's single. Once again Bryan rallied to tie at 7-7 on hits by Mike Malvesti, O'Malley and Mulkern.

Bryan Post had the winning run in scoring position in the bottom of the eighth but relief pitcher Doherty shut the door.

Anderson had three hits for Bryan and Mark Kelleher, Kevin Mullay, Paul Murphy, Steven Waas, Steven Loud and Joe Marnikovic also contributed to the victory.

Glynn led Barry's as he reached base four times and scored three runs.

Mulkern, O'Malley and Mullay had three hits for Bryan, with Mulkern having two doubles and O'Malley one.

McDonough singled twice and Malvesti had a long double. Stenmon had a single driving in two runs. Silverman, Loud, Kelleher, Murphy, Anderson, Marnikovic and Waas all played well.

Bryan denied a last ditch Fireman rally in the seventh as O'Malley, Waas and Mullay combined for an excellent 5-4-3 double play.

Brian Taylor and Steve Nieters paced the Firemen with four and three hits respectively. Shortstop Bill Monteith played strong defense.

Quincy Legion Fighting To Make Playoffs

The Quincy Legion baseball team is fighting for the playoffs and won three of four games during the past week to improve to 6-6.

Quincy still has an outside chance of being one of the four top teams in Zone 6 and qualifying for the double elimination playoff series.

Coaches Ed Spring and Dick Laracy are pleased with the way the team has been playing, particularly the pitching of Rob Higgins, Jim Dennis and Steve Happas and the hitting of Kyle Robertson, Mike Toland, Happas, Dennis and Higgins.

Quincy lost a 4-3 heartbreaker to Mass. Truck of Weymouth Monday night as Weymouth scored four unearned runs in the fifth inning. Higgins took the loss despite giving up only four hits, striking out five and walking four. One of the hits was a home run out of Adams Field by Mike Marini.

Quincy left seven runners stranded, including the bases loaded once. Quincy had seven hits, two singles by Robertson and Happas, a double by Peter Tufts and singles by Bill Mulkern and Dennis. Quincy had a chance to tie or win in the seventh as it had three base runners, but a double play and an infield fly ended the threat.

Quincy defeated Wollaston, 4-1, behind the six-hit pitching of Higgins, who struck out seven and walked two.

Wollaston's run came on a long home run by Tom Logan in the fourth inning.

Quincy scored twice in the fourth on walks to Mulkern and Tufts, both scoring on singles by Sean Gately and Higgins. Quincy added two in the fifth on two walks, two errors and a single by Tufts. Higgins had two hits.

T.J. Steen started on the mound for Wollaston and was relieved by Jay Lespasio in the fifth. Wollaston mounted a threat in the last inning when, with one out, Steve Austin, Chris Higgins and Lespasio all singled to fill the bases but Higgins struck out Tom McDonald and Joel Rogers to end the game. Chris Noble had the only other Wollaston hit.

Quincy rolled over Carter Post of Dorchester, 10-1, as Dennis pitched five-hit ball, struck out 13 and didn't issue a walk.

Quincy was led by Robertson, who had a three-run homer and reached base four times on a walk, error and single. Toland, who caught his first game, had a double and single and scored twice, Dennis had two singles and scored twice, Paul McLellan had an RBI single and scored a run, Higgins had a single and scored twice and Nick Dragone had a single. All Quincy players played in the game and performed well defensively.

Quincy also walloped Canton, 11-1, with Happas pitching a four-hitter, striking out five and walking three. It was his first start of the season after pitching in relief.

Quincy scored three runs in the fourth and fifth innings and five runs in the sixth.

Toland had three singles, a walk and scored twice, Happas had three singles, Mulkern had a triple and single, Higgins a double and single and Jim Kerns, Gately and Dennis a single each. Kerns took a hard ground ball in the face in the sixth and had to leave the game.

All the outfielders played well as a heavy fog hung over the field.

Quincy has a tough schedule over the next week. It played at Braintree Tuesday, meets Braintree again tonight (Thursday) at 8 at Adams Field, faces Morrisette Friday night at 8 at Adams, hosts Weymouth Sunday at 5 p.m. at Adams and plays at Milton Monday. It also has a game to make up with Randolph.

Lipton Regatta Saturday, Sunday

The Squantum Yacht Club will host the first Lipton Cup Regatta Saturday and Sunday.

The regatta is sanctioned by the Massachusetts Bay Yacht Clubs Association.

The MBYCA, in conjunction with the Squantum club, recently unveiled the beautiful 32-inch ornate silver cup, which was awarded by former Boston Mayor John "Honey-Fitz" Fitzgerald, grandfather of President John F. Kennedy, to Herbert Allbright in 1930 and will symbolize the event.

Past Commodore Don McGilvray of the Squantum Yacht Club, Fred Hersey and Ed Gallagher Sr. met many times over the past few years with Allbright and finally prevailed upon him to put the cup back into active competition. Although he was entitled to possess the trophy for life under the terms of the Deed of Gift, Allbright opted to offer it back to the Mass. Bay Yacht Clubs Association, whose officers accepted it last December.

The MBYCA has designated the Squantum club as the cup's custodian under terms which require that the club run a Sir Thomas J. Lipton Trophy Regatta this summer.

It will be an annual event, hopefully one of the major regattas in the Northeast in future years.

Friday is the deadline for race reservations. A perpetual trophy will be awarded along with keepers.

The regatta will be preceded by a skippers' meeting Friday night from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Squantum club. There will be a reception and briefing with complimentary wine and cheese.

Whiffle Ball Tourney Results

Playgrounds in District 1 of the Quincy Recreation Department recently held its annual whiffle ball tournament on the grounds of Merrymount Park.

Seven teams competed in a single elimination tournament held at Fenno St. Playground. Atlantic Park with Adam DeBoar, Dave Pacino, and Thomas Brosnan defeating the strong Squantum team of Ryan Nickerson, Justin Madden and Nick Shea. Adam DeBoar was the hero for Atlantic as he hit the game winning home run in the final game, as well as the game winning RBIs in the two previous games.

In the junior division, eight teams competed at the Fenno St. Playground. Welcome Young withstood a two-run homerun by Kevin Nickerson of Squantum which sent the semi-final game into extra innings. Bobby Larkin had the game winning homerun for Welcome Young to propel them into the finals against Beechwood Knoll.

Beechwood Knoll surrendered to Welcome Young, 3-0, after a long extra inning semi-final game where John McNeil had the game winning homer in extra winnings. The Welcome Young team consisting of Bobby Larkin, John Ingrassia and Mike McEvoy will advance to the city finals to be held at Russell Park Friday.

Mount Clinches First Place, Scrambles For Second Spot

The Manet Men's Basketball League, with one week left in its first regular season, heads towards the playoffs with the Mount having clinched first place with an 8-1 record.

The Quincy Nets, Timmins Contracting and Jaehnig Chiropractic Club are tied for second at 5-4. Elm St. University is 3-6 and Clean Machine 1-8.

The playoffs will begin next Tuesday, July 21, at 7 and 8:15 p.m. at the Quincy High girls' gym. The public is welcome.

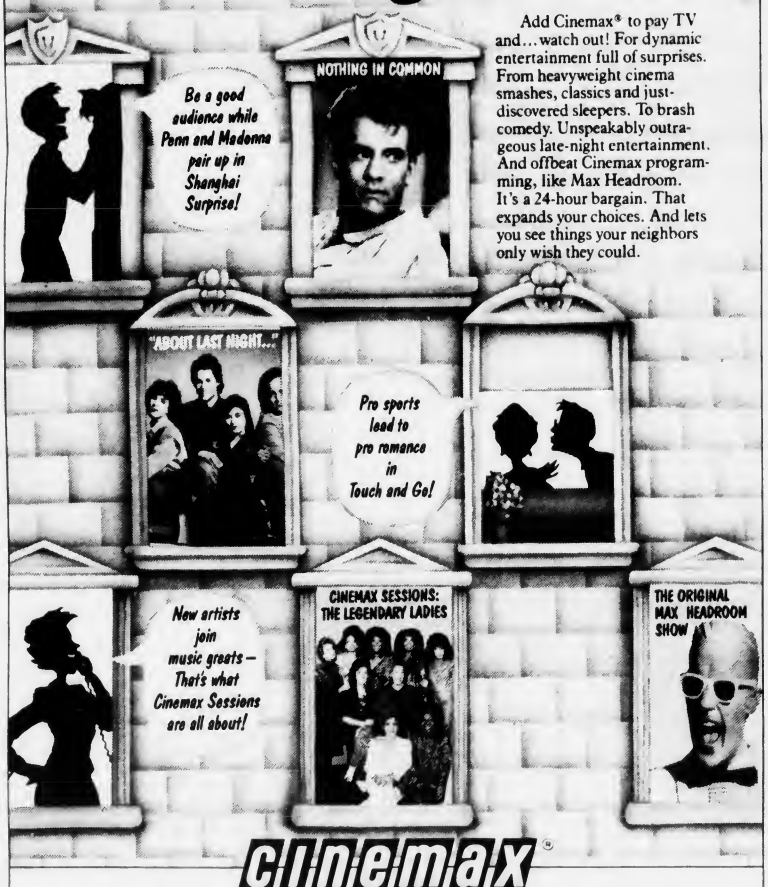
The Mount suffered its only loss at the hands of the Quincy Nets, 67-54, as Al Wolfe, Steve Belcastro and Ed Carroll combined for 45 points to offset a season's high 38 points from the league leading scorer, Mark Millane, former North Quincy High and Eastern Nazarene College scoring leader.

The Mount bounced back to defeat Elm St., 63-59, in overtime as Ged Phelan came off the bench to spark an incredible rally which saw the Mount overcome an 18-point deficit. Jim Kelly, John Phelan and Jim Phelan combined for 48 points. Pat Bradley led Elm St. with 18.

Elm St. defeated Clean Machine, 65-58, sparked by P.J. Fay's 22 points and Dean Coletti's 21. Brian Donahue and Kevin McGrath had 15 each in a losing cause.

Steve Millane's 32 points powered Timmins Contracting over Clean Machine, 81-62, as Timmins broke open a tight game with a second-half burst. Bob McDonnell had 14 points for Clean Machine.

Timmins received 20 points from Bill Murphy and 19 from Kevin Brogioli to defeat Jaehnig, 84-68, despite 26 points from Chuck Jaehnig.



Jaehnig rebounded with a 66-45 win over the Nets as Jaehnig featured a balanced scoring attack led by Glen Ryerson with 14. Kurt O'Sullivan kept the Nets close with a game-high 16 points.

Mass. Patriots Win Volleyball Tourney

The Massachusetts Patriots White Elite 15 and under volleyball team won the recent Northeast Festival Tournament held at the University of Rhode Island.

The champions were led by co-captains Debbie Panaro and Deirdre Murphy of North Quincy High and Nancy Laitinen of Quincy High.

In a field of over 20 teams from as far west as Chicago and south to Kentucky, the Patriots' White team defeated every opponent, breezing through pool play, going 8-0, to be seeded first for flight play. In flight play it won all three matches with a 6-1 record to be seeded second for the championship round.

In the double elimination championship round, Mass. White defeated last year's champions and this year's third seed, Windy City from Chicago, in its first match, 2-1.

The Patriots won their second match against the top seed and their sister team, Mass. Royal, 2-1, and ended up winning the championship by beating Windy City for the second time in the title round and third time in the tournament.

Murphy's explosive spikes, powerful hitting and tough blocking at the net were outstanding, while Panaro's defensive backcourt play was unbeatable with diving saves and consistent passes, coupled with her outside hitting.

Mass Patriots Royal 15 and under team, captained by Quincy's Amy Guidice and Erin Murray, finished third overall with a 15-7 record, losing only to Windy City and the Patriots White team.

With a 6-2 pool record, Mass. Royal earned a first seed for flight play. They finished first in their flight with a 6-1 mark and were seeded first in the championship round.

Guidice, a middle blocker and outside hitter for Quincy High, devastated the other teams with her great hitting and powerful serve, while Murray, a fine setter for Abp. Williams High, consistently set the hitters and blocked at the net.

WEEK OF: July 16

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK
You can be quite nostalgic, having strong ties to your family's past. But you look to the future too — and generally keep up with the changing times. You tend to keep your anxieties bottled up. The months ahead spotlight "new directions" and focus on travel and expansion in your profession.

AQUARIUS – January 21 - February 19
Invitation to prestige event may arrive during this period. Travel is spotlighted, but plan for changing weather conditions. Conditions change in friendship area also — thankfully for the better.

PISCES – February 20 - March 20
Some difficulties appear in the communications area; try to ensure that your casual comments are not misinterpreted. Outstanding payment may arrive at last. Partner is calmer.

ARIES – March 21 - April 20
Look for a positive outlet for built-up tensions. Coworker may be vague — don't hesitate to ask for clarification. A friend from out of town may be in touch.

TAURUS – April 21 - May 22
The moods of others are changing. Critical acquaintance becomes more understanding, while a shy friend is surprisingly assertive. Your positive influence has played a part in all this.

GEMINI – May 23 - June 21
Sorting out financial papers may prove unexpectedly time-consuming. Community programs lead to new interests and possible new friendship. Relationship is much more clearly defined.

CANCER – June 22 - July 22
If considering major household tasks, be sure to examine the broader picture carefully. Musical events may be accented on the weekend. New relationships are increasingly harmonious.

LEO – July 23 - August 22
The week is like a tapestry, rich in detail and color. Take time to stand back and study the patterns. On a more practical level, pesty financial affairs require attention.

VIRGO – August 23 - September 22
Partnership endeavors are generally highlighted, provided each participant understands the individual responsibilities and the combined goal. You may be asked to sponsor a community or social event.

LIBRA – September 23 - October 22
Avoid taking shortcuts, and watch a tendency to make excuses. Hard work and long hours pay off. Family is supportive of your ideas. Pets are featured in weekend activities.

SCORPIO – October 23 - November 21
Scorpio is surprisingly idealistic through this period, fighting for principles with vigor. Wit is sharp — and you meet someone who's almost your equal. Family ties are tightened.

SAGITTARIUS – November 22 - December 22
Watch tendency of promising too much to too many, and try to give yourself some much deserved pampering. After a few false starts, a pet project is in full swing.

CAPRICORN – December 23 - January 20
An independent streak surfaces, and as a result you make important strides in professional environment. After the weekend, the emphasis is on financial and possibly real estate dealings.

Hibernia Savings Opens Quincy Operations Center

The Hibernia Savings Bank (NASDAQ: HSBK) announces its Quincy operations center and retail banking facility will officially open for business Saturday.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony, to be attended by Mayor Francis X. McCauley, is scheduled for 9 a.m.

The new office, located at 731 Hancock St., will offer a full line of savings and loan services to residential and business customers in the South Shore area.

The bank also announced that Mary Beth Shea has been hired as assistant treasurer and branch manager of the new facility. Previously, she served as the savings officer of East Weymouth Savings Bank.

To attract potential customers, the bank is launching a series of promotional incentives. Starting opening day, those who choose to invest in the bank's one-year term certificates get an opportunity to spin a "Wheel of Fortune"-type device which will determine the account's interest rate, ranging from 8 to 20 per cent. Similar promotional events are scheduled throughout the grand opening celebration running from July 18 to August 1, 1987.

"Our move to a new operations center in Quincy reflects our strong commitment to the expanding economy of the South Shore," said president Mark A. Osborne, who made the announcement. "The office will allow us to better provide the area communities with innovative savings and loan products, and comprehensive banking services."

The opening of the Quincy office comes during a major period of growth for the bank. On Sept. 5, 1986, Hibernia completed its conversion to a publicly held institution, raising over $8.7 million in new capital. Earnings for the first quarter of 1987 were $360,001, or 44 cents per share, a 235 per cent increase over the $252,621 earned for the same period last year.

The Hibernia Savings Bank, founded in 1912, is a state-chartered, federally-insured thrift institution with additional offices located at 263 Washington St., Boston, and 51 Commercial St., Braintree.

LaRaia Tours Senior Facilities

Councillor Joseph J. LaRaia, candidate for mayor, completed a tour of scheduled visits to all senior citizen housing facilities in the city.

LaRaia's most recent visit was to 1000 Southern Artery.

LaRaia said he spoke in support of bringing back the retail district to Quincy Center. He cited the loss of many popular retail stores including the recent plans to close the Remick store.

LaRaia vowed to implement a mall-type development at the city parking lot adjacent to the Court House.

He cited his original plan when he was mayor in 1977, which will provide the same theme for this part of Quincy Center.

LaRaia also spoke of the need for quality medical care at Quincy City Hospital.

The public facility is operated under private contract and needs increased public scrutiny, he said.

Salvation Army Shelters Feline Family Of 9

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The Salvation Army on Baxter St., Quincy Center, provides such things as food, clothing and shelter to people in need.

But recently, the

But recently, the organization has branched out to serve a cat in need and its eight recently born kittens.

According to commanding officer, Major Paul Carlino, and his wife, Joan, the friendly, gray, long-haired cat with blue eyes first started visiting the Quincy Temple Corps about a month ago.

Obviously pregnant, the cat would come into the building when a door opened, and go to the kitchen door where the cook would feed her.

The cat disappeared over the July 4 weekend, and reappeared a few days later but staff members had no idea where the kittens might be.

A short time later, the kittens were found under the red collection box outside of the Salvation Army.

Several of the kittens have the mother cat's coloring, and the rest resemble tiger cats, according to the Carlinos.

A neighbor is caring for the kittens until homes can be found for them.

Anyone interested in adopting a kitten, or having information about the mother cat which is wearing a flea collar, should call 472-2345.

"It's just one more homeless family we're trying to assist," quipped one staff member.

'Quincy Magazine' Summer Edition Starts July 21

Quincy Cable Ch. 3 will begin a special summer edition of the "Quincy Magazine" series on Tuesday, July 21 at 8 p.m.

The series will concentrate on events happening in Quincy over the summer, and on issues of concern to Quincy and South Shore residents.

The first program will feature a report on "Four Little Pages," Franklin Roberts' one act musical drama about the drafting of the U.S. Constitution which was performed recently at the Adams National Historic Site in Quincy.

Ground Broken For New QJC Building

The occasion was to dedicate a new building being built without public funds especially for Quincy Junior College--the only locally sponsored public community college in Massachusetts.

QJC president Dr. O. Clayton Johnson said:

"It is a remarkable feat for a municipal public college that does not receive public funds to be engaged in building a new educational-administrative facility. This action is the result of the human resiliency of the faculty and students, the institutional commitment to continue providing collegiate services to this region, and of the community leadership and support received. It emphasizes our concern for the future, our intention to stand fast and a major attempt to expand our services.

"We express our sincere appreciation to the City of Quincy School Committee, the City of Quincy Council, the Mayor, our legislative delegation and, in particular, the people who have and continue to support us. The faculty and students of the college reward that trust by providing excellent educational preparation and graduating outstanding students. In essence we are a people's college and we proudly serve people from over sixty cities and towns of the Commonwealth.

"Our special thanks is extended to the developer--Ricciardi Company--the support provided has been most gracious. Thank you very, very much."

United Front Fights Hub Incinerator

THREE-ALARM FIRE Sunday at the Odd Fellows Hall on Newport Ave., Wollaston, caused an estimated $150,000 damage. Story on Page 3

State and local officials unified their efforts Tuesday to "strongly oppose" solving Boston's trash problems by siting an incinerator on Quincy's Moon Island or at the closed General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard.

It was also unanimously agreed by the group to oppose construction of any type of incinerator by any group which purchases the yard, according to Mayor Francis McCauley, in whose office the meeting was held.

Discussion centered on Senate President William M. Bulger's derailing of Boston's plans to construct a trash-to-energy incinerator in South Bay.

Bulger said that he would reveal "sometime soon" his own "irresistible choice" for location of the 1,500 ton-a-day plant.

Though Bulger refused to elaborate on his choice, which he said would be in a "less populous location," speculation focused on several sites, including Moon Island and the closed Quincy shipyard.

"We have no knowledge that Bulger was indicating sites in Quincy," said McCauley, "but because rumors were reported in the press, we felt we had to take a strong position.

"Any such attempts will be strongly opposed and resisted by the city of Quincy officials and citizens," McCauley said.

The mayor said he was reactivating the Moon Island task force established last year after taking the island by eminent domain from Boston. City Solicitor Joseph (Jay) MacRitchie is chairman.

He also said that, on the recommendation of Rep. Robert Cerasoli, the General Dynamics Site Task Force will be established to monitor the ongoing possible sale of the shipyard.

Cerasoli and Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro will be among the members, McCauley said.

"We're all concerned that whatever goes there (at the shipyard) that it is environmentally sound and complementary to the neighborhood in Quincy Point," the mayor said.

McCauley said he planned to write to Bulger and Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn opposing the siting of any incinerator for Boston's trash in the city of Quincy.

The mayor noted that Bulger said he would not make his suggestion known until September.

He also said that the ultimate decision will be up to 100,000 Square Feet Of South Quincy Land Marked For Open Space

Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets reports that 100,000 square feet of land in South Quincy has been dedicated to open space and will be cleaned up later this fall.

The land between Liberty St., Penn and Columbia Sts. has become open space through efforts of the community, the city councillor and the Lappan family, he said.

The Lappan family purchased the property from the Peter Rusciuto estate and will build a warehouse on the land abutting Liberty St. near the intersection of Liberty St. and Brook Rd. according to Sheets.

As part of the agreement in allowing the building, the greater majority of the land will be open space and cannot be built on in the future, he said.

Four informal meetings were held by Councillor Sheets, and numerous public hearings were held before various city boards.

"The residents overwhelmingly supported the agreement," said Councillor Sheets.

He also said the land dedicated to open space has

Finn Undergoes Surgery At Mass. General

Police Chief Francis Finn was in the intensive care unit Tuesday, at Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, following surgery Monday to clear his carotid arteries.

According to Mayor Francis McCauley, the operation was successful.

"We wish him a speedy recovery," said McCauley, who noted that Police Capt. Paul Nestor will serve as acting chief.

Finn is expected to be out for at least six weeks.

He underwent bypass heart surgery four years ago.

Low Interest Mortgages Available

Rep. Michael Morrissey announces the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency (MHFA) is making available, once again to qualified homebuyers, approximately $23.5 million in low-interest mortgages.

It is expected that about 300 households are to benefit from the 27-year fixed rate 8.2 per cent mortgage, according to Morrissey.

To qualify for the low-interest loans, residents must fall into one of the following categories: lower-income households, minority households, qualified Vietnam era veterans, and physically handicapped borrowers. To be considered under lower-income households the annual adjusted household income must be under $28,000 for one person, $31,000 for two people and $3,000 for each additional dependent to be living in the house.

As of July 8, 1987 participating lenders are accepting applications which must be completed before Jan. 8, 1988. In order to apply, residents must have already signed a purchase and sales agreement or an accepted offer to purchase agreement. Some of the participating lenders in the area are the Bank of New England, Boston; MFC Mortgage Company, Dedham, and Northern Mortgage Company, Norwell.

There is a limit on the cost of a house in order to qualify for the loans. For example, there is a limit of $124,000 for existing single-family structure or condominium unit, $170,000 for a four-family structure in the Boston area.

Rep. Morrissey said, "These low-interest mortgages are a great opportunity for many people who would normally be unable to purchase their first home. I encourage anyone who qualifies to take advantage of the over $23 million available."

Anyone interested in finding out more information can contact the MHFA Office of Single-Family Programs on 50 Milk St., Boston, MA 02109 or at (617) 451-2766.

$150,000 Blaze Under Investigation

Officials are investigating the cause of a three-alarm fire Sunday afternoon which caused an estimated $150,000 damage to the Odd Fellows Hall at 315, 317 and 321 Newport Ave., Wollaston.

The building also houses Greenlaw's office furniture on the street level.

The fire started in the third floor attic area, according to Fire Chief Carl Valenti. There were no reported injuries, he said.

Valenti said that the fire was difficult to contain to the tow and a half-story wood frame structure because of the close proximity of apartment buildings on either side.

Tenants of both buildings were evacuated while the fire was being fought, according to Valenti.

"We had to make some forceable entries to make sure everyone was out," said Valenti.

Water curtains by the fire department on either side of the Odd Fellows Hall helped keep the fire from spreading, he said.

Tenants were allowed to return to the apartment buildings after the all out was sounded, according to Valenti.

"The fire was pretty well advanced when the fire department arrived," said Valenti, who explained there was no one in the building so there was [illegible] in discovery of the blaze.

The top floor of the Odd Fellows Hall was pretty [illegible] gutted, according to Valenti. He said the building inspector will determine if the building is structurally sound.

The first alarm came in at 4:58 p.m., second at 5:10 p.m. and third at 5:24 p.m., Valenti said. The all out was given at 5:40 p.m.

Valenti noted [illegible] was the scene [illegible] four years ago [illegible] started by youngsters playing with firecrackers [illegible] Fourth of July.

Library To Receive $40,000 Matching Grant From Historical Committee

The Thomas Crane Public Library has been selected for a matching allocation of $40,000 from the Massachusetts Historical Commission's Fiscal Year 1988 Massachusetts Preservation Projects Fund.

According to library director Warren Watson, the grant will go towards repair of windows in the old Richardson building, as well as some pointing.

Watson said estimated cost of the project is $200,000. The $40,000 grant will be added to $100,000 already in the library budget, he said.

Though not sure when work on the project would begin, Watson said that it must be completed by June, 1988.

Sidewalk Bazaar Gets 'Very Successful' Rating

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

It was another banner year for the Downtown Quincy Sidewalk Bazaar.

An abundance of bargains, pleasant weather and plenty of eager shoppers combined to make the 17th annual bazaar a successful one.

The three-day event during which Hancock St. becomes a pedestrian mall for three days is sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Hancock St. between School and Granite Sts. was closed to vehicular traffic. People of all ages walked up and down Hancock St. enjoying the bazaar's many attractions.

A random sample of various people and businesses who participated in the annual event agreed it was "very successful" and helped boost downtown Quincy's summer business season.

Sample comments:

"We topped last year which had been the best year ever. Business wise it was very good. The nice days on Thursday and Friday really helped us. The bazaar was very successful and I am pleased."

Robert Colman Sr., of Colman's Sporting Goods: "Business was very good. We had a good crowd, good weather and everything turned out very well. The bazaar days were very successful, very orderly and there were no problems."

Jean Leonard, manager of Ryder's of Quincy: "Business was very good. We sold about everything we put outside. The turnout on Thursday and Friday was very good. Many were here the first thing Thursday morning. It was very successful and it was a lot of fun."

Mark Bertman of Roger's Jewelry: "We were busy this year, more than last year. Thursday and Friday were very busy and the traffic was excellent. Volume was up from the last couple of years and I am very pleased with the bazaar's results."

Kenneth Fallon Jr., executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association: "The bazaar ran very well. There have been little or no complaints on the mechanics of the bazaar. Quincy Cable Ch. 3 and Sun Ch. 8, WJDA, WUMB in addition to the other media added a great deal to it. The Ronald McDonald Show was popular as were the Caricature's Unlimited and Hand and Face Painting sponsored by the Rotary Club of Quincy. The Yankee Jack and Marie performance also drew a big crowd."

Irwin Slatnick of Cummings: "The bazaar went very well. It was very successful because the weather was with us, there was plenty of merchandise at the right price and the customers were satisfied. We had a high turnout and the traffic was very heavy. People were pleased and I think the bazaar was excellent."

Clean Water Day Saturday

"Save The Harbor Save The Bay" and the "Clean Water Action Project" have set aside Saturday, July 25 as Massachusetts' first annual "Clean Water Day."

Mayor Francis McCauley has proclaimed the day to be "Clean Water Day" in Quincy.

Among the many activities scheduled for the day will be MDC Metroparks activities at the Wollaston Beach Reservation in Quincy. Participants will learn about Boston Harbor and the problem of pollution in the harbor. Those interested should meet across from the Wollaston Beach bath house on Quincy Shore Drive at 11 a.m.

Other activities include live music and speeches at Nantasket Beach in Hull from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m., and a barbeque at the beach at 5:30 p.m.

In addition, volunteers from all over eastern Massachusetts will have petitions that ask Congress and the Environmental Protection Agency for full funding of the Clean Water Act and stricter enforcement of key environmental laws which protect the waters and reduce the use of toxics. Each volunteer will also carry a "clean-up bucket" to collect donations to further the work of "Save The Harbor Save The Bay" and the "Clean Water Action Project."

Coming: One High School?

It's something that a lot of us just don't want to think about.

Especially those of us who enjoy the tradational Quincy High School-North Quincy High School sports rivalry topped off by the Thanksgiving Day football game.

But the day may not be too far down the road when Quincy will have to face the fact that it has become (or is about to become) a one high school city.

As a Quincy High School graduate that might be considered treason over on Coddington St.

And it won't win many friends in North Quincy.

What do you mean a combined Quincy-North Quincy High School! No way! Never!

But we're moving in that direction. And seem to be picking up speed.

KOCH

Koch issues the permits for use of the city parks and fields for various activities -- including July 4th field days and other special events.

Fewer permits were issued this year than in years past because there were fewer ward and neighborhood activities.

And, because there are fewer youngsters to go to them.

"We had the fewest requests for permits that I can remember" he says.

He notes that just 15 years ago there were an estimated 20,000 public and parachoial school students in Quincy and about 10,000 senior citizens.

Now, he says, it's the other way around. About 10,000 (maybe less) public and private school students and 20,000 senior citizens.

He notes 13 elementary schools have been closed although one (Wollaston) will re-open in the fall.

At the secondary level, there were only 720 graduates in the three high schools this year: 339 North Quincy, 259 Quincy and 122 Quincy Vocational Technical.

It would seem if the enrollment figures continue to drop, that Quincy one of these days will have to face the fact that few seem to want to face: a one high school city.

It may not be long before declining enrollments will make it unfeasible to pay the cost of operating and maintaining two separate high school facilities.

Of course that would do away with the traditional Thanksgiving Day football rivalry but it might do wonders for all the teams in both girls and boys sports by combining the school athletes.

Unless there is an unexpected development like a baby boom, the one-high school concept may not be far around the corner.

Most of us would like to keep it the way it is. But time -- and changes -- march on.

FORMER MAYOR Walter Hannon has a famous neighbor at his Kennebunkport, Me. summer home George Bush.

BUSH

Well, Bush's place is about the length of a football field or two away but Hannon sees him once in a while.

From observation points, Hannon notes that lately when Bush has been in town and in a vehicle an ambulance is not far behind. Apparently it's there should anything of an emergency nature happen.

Also, if Bush is playing golf, he and those playing with him dress pretty much alike and are about equal size.

So, it would be difficult for the wrong someone to easily pick out which one is Bush.

Commends Police Dept. For Protecting Women

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Congratulations are in order to the Quincy Police for their commitment to the enforcement of the Domestic Abuse Prevention Act of 1978.

I was pleased to read the editorial in the Boston Globe on July 9, entitled "Protecting Battered Women" which praised the Quincy Police Department's "exemplary program."

Women in Quincy should be relieved to learn that they are protected by police officers who take the issue of domestic violence seriously. Further, the establishment in 1979 of DOVE, a shelter for battered women, was an example of citizen activists and public agencies working together to solve a menacing social problem. The presence of DOVE in our community demonstrates the continued commitment of people throughout the South Shore to respond to this issue.

We should all be proud of our community, our Quincy Police Department and the Norfolk County Family Service Unit for creating a model for other communities to follow when dealing with domestic violence.

Seeks Host Families For French Students

Editor, The Quincy sun:

Seventeen-year-old Alain Calmet is arriving in Quincy on July 31 from France. What he may find is that no American family wants to share its home with him.

For the past two months, I, a coordinator for the American Institute for Foreign Study, have tried to find host families in Quincy and nearby communities for Alain and 13 other French students. At this late date 11 students still remain without families to host them during their month stay.

During their stay the students, ages 13-19, will take various sight-seeing trips in the area. They will come with spending money and insurance.

Host families are eligible for scholarships ranging between $100 and $400 for each student they host. Families that are unable to host a student for the entire month are still encouraged to apply.

For more information, call Katherine at 623-7789 or Norma at 235-2431. I and 17-year-old Alain and 11 other students are eagerly awaiting some response.

Leave Tax Cap Alone

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce believes that the provisions of the recently enacted tax cap should be left alone.

As voted by the people of the Commonwealth if state revenues exceed the growth in Massachusetts wages and salaries than those revenues are returned to the people on a proportional basis.

The governor's proposal of re-distributing the revenue in a weighted fashion toward those in the low-income brackets is admirable in its intent. However we see this one-time refund to be of minimal assistance and does not address the true needs of those in low-income brackets. What also concerns us is the manner in which the administration is attempting to circumvent the will of the people.

This tax cap was a[pproved] by the voters of the Commonwealth only [two years ago]. If the governor wishes changes the distribution provision of the cap s[hould] hasn't he asked for the opinions of the voters? We ask the legislature to defeat this proposal that effect says "I don't care how you voted, we know what's best for you." We ask the people of the commonwealth who voted for the tax cap to let the administration know that they disapprove of this attempt to change the provisions of the tax cap without their input. After all it is our money.

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We would like to publicly thank Pisces Tropical Fish Store for saving our valuable marine fish.

Marianne Peak Successor

Wilhelmina Harris To Retire As Adams National Historic Site Superintendent

The National Park Service (NPS) has chosen Marianne Potts Peak to succeed Wilhelmina Sellars Harris as superintendent of the Adams National Historic Site in Quincy.

Announcement was made by Herbert S. Cables, Jr., director of the NPS North Atlantic Region.

At 91, Mrs. Harris is the longest serving superintendent and the oldest in the National Park Service. She headed Adams NHS for 37 years. The first woman to work as an NPS superintendent, she has led a model career for the modern working mother. Awarded the highest honors from the Department of the Interior, Harris has had numerous articles and works published on the Adams family.

Peak served under Harris's leadership for 26 years. Beginning her career as the superintendent's secretary, she became deputy superintendent in 1982. Peak assumed managerial responsibility in the fields of administration, interpretation, preservation, curatorial management, maintenance, resource protection, operations and visitor services. She now supervises a staff of some 20 employees and administers an annual budget of $500,000.

"Marianne Peak brings a wealth of managerial expertise to the Adams superintendency," Cables said. "I know that she will add a fresh approach to the job while carrying on the traditions of her predecessor," he said.

Peak serves as a member of the Quincy Tourism Committee, Historic Sign Committee, Quincy Historical Society, Hingham Historical Society, Bay State Historical League, Abigail Adams Historical Society, and Massachusetts Historical Society. She is also on the Board of Directors of Quincy Junior College and Adjunct Teaching Staff for the college in the Department of Social Sciences.

This is the opportunity of a lifetime--to have earned the privilege to succeed Mrs. Harris, who is highly respected in the field of Adams history and who has carried on Adams tradition," Pead said. As her protege, I have benefited from her knowlege and link to Adams history.

"It is truly a privilege to be charged with the management of one of the nation's most important historic sites. I plan to carry out my responsibility of imparting Adams history while fulfilling the mission of the Park Service, that is, to foster civic pride, educational, cultural, and historical enrichment and most importantly to preserve this area for future generations so that they too might enjoy it."

The Adams National Historic Site consists of the two Adams Birthplaces on Franklin St., the Old house (occupied by four generations of Adamses from 1788 to 1927) and Stone Library on Adams St. The Captain Beale Estate and the United First Parish Congregational Church are also within the park.

WILHELMINA HARRIS has been a long-time familiar and popular figure at the Adams National Historic Site.

The Adams family donated their homes to the American public, and they are administered by the U.S. Department of the Interior, National Park Service. The family takes an active interest in the park, returning historic artifacts to the collection, attending functions and visiting throughout the year.

Charles Francis Adams speaking as President of the Adams Memorial Society expressed the "delight of the Adams family on the appointment of Marianne Peak as Superintendent of the Old House. After years of able and devoted service under Mrs. Harris, she has earned the respect and confidence of the Adamses."

Peak holds a bachelor's degree in Fine Arts from Emmanuel College, Boston, and a master's in Psychology from Eastern Nazarene College. The daughter of Mary Keblis Potts of East Weymouth and T. Allen Potts of North Weymouth, she resides in Hingham with her husband Philip G. Peak, Jr. Vice President, Commercial Banking and Investment, Guaranty First Trust Co., and their daughter Alexandra, 10 years of age.

He Wants Only Men As School Principals

July 22-28, 1929

58 Years Ago

Houghs Neck residents apparently lost out in the bid to have Miss Elizabeth Garrity, a teacher in the Quincy school system for 42 years, named principal of the newly enlarged Atherton Hough School.

The Quincy School Committee refused to reconsider its appointment of H. Forrest Wilson to the post and Committeeman Col. Warren E. Sweetser proposed a resolution that only men be named schoolmasters.

There were two other women principals of Quincy schools, Miss Margaret Sweeney of Gridley Bryant School and Miss Lucy Hennigar of Willard School.

CRIME RATE DOWN

Police Chief Ernest H. Bishop, speaking over Radio WNAC in Squantum, proudly announced that Quincy has less vice and liquor traffic than any city of its size in the country.

"We have had very few serious crimes in the last few years and it is a saying among the crooks that you had better keep away from Quincy," said Bishop.

"We claim that Quincy is freer of vice and liquor trafficking than any city of our size in the country and this claim is endorsed by federal officials."

MEN WITH TAILS?

Everyone was talking about the reports of men with tails brought back from the Phillipine Islands by Lt. William F. Malnati of 60 Bedford St., Quincy, who spent 13½ months with the U.S. Geodetic Survey in Luzon.

Malnati said he saw men with tails six to eight inches long but he denied it was evidence that man descended from monkeys.

He received support from Chalmer F. Rose of 837 Sea St., Houghs Neck, a former Marine, who said he saw pictures of the men with tails while serving with the Marines in the philippines in 1926.

Chicken Cooked Indoors

A Nice Change Of Pace

Maybe some of you are tired of eating hot dogs, hamburgers and whatever else you cooked out so far this summer and long for something different.

And even though you may have cooked chicken outside also, this recipe for chicken could be nice change of pace. Served with rotini or rigatoni, mastaciolli (or if you don't want to be bothered with tomato sauce, it also goes great with rice. I usually remove the skin from most of the chicken cooked in this manner, but that is a matter of choice. By the way; I recently had lunch at Finians and the hostess told me that she enjoys my chicken recipes the most because of her restricted diet. So this one's for you!

EASY GOURMET CHICKEN

2 large chicken breasts; split (preferably boneless) bay leaf
about ½ dozen large fresh mushrooms, cut in halves.
fresh parsley
1 small cut up onion
2 Tbsps oil
2 Tbsps margerine or butter
About half a jar of whole pimento peppers (cut in large pieces)
10 black olives cut in half
1 jar of artichoke hearts (small)
½ cup white cooking wine

In heated oil and butter, add the onions, bay leaf and parsley. Cook for a few minutes until blended. Add the chicken and saute until browned on both sides. Add the wine and cover and cook for about 15 more minutes. Add the pimento, olives and artichoke hearts and mushrooms and simmer for another 15 minutes or so, and then cook uncovered for the last few minutes until chicken is done. Serve with a favorite pasta, rice, potato or anything your heart desires.

Business Security

Part 1

How would you like to help a burglar break into your place of business and steal everything of value?

Sounds crazy? Don't be too sure. Quite a few business owners do just that ... though they don't realize they're doing it.

If you're not doing everything you can to make it hard for a burglar to get in ... if you're not making it likely he'll get caught if he does get in ... or if you're making your business too tempting a target, you might as well be the thief's accomplice.

Are you a potential accomplice? Here's one way to find out: Stop by your business at night, when it's closed. Look at it with a burglar's eyes. Case the joint.

Start across the street. Are there shadows to hide you as you try to get in? Would boxes stacked near the building provide cover? Is a delivery truck or company car parked near the side so you could use it as cover or as a ladder to get in a window or onto a roof.

Is there merchandise in the display window, where you could smash, grab and run? Can you see into the far corners of the display room, or could you work at your leisure, unseen by passersby?

Now take a walk around the building. Does the sidewalk grille lead to a basement loading entrance? Is there evidence of a burglar alarm - a door or window sticker or some visible wiring? Are hinges on the outside of the door, so you could remove them and lift the door out? What kind of a lock is on the door? Is there a glass panel you could break to reach inside and unlock the door? Check the door - is it even locked? (It's much easier to walk in than to break in.)

How about the basement or ground floor windows - could you gain access through them? Could you pull a van into the back alley to cart away loot? How about a skylight or large vents as a way to get in - or adjoining buildings?

You could find out all these things without going into your business ... probably without making anyone suspicious. If you came back during business hours you could do further checking on your locks and burglar alarm, see where the money is kept, find out when there's a lot of money on hand and where valuable merchandise is displayed.

There are some things a would-be burglar looks for. And they are things that you, as a business owner, just be aware of too ... unless you want to be his accomplice.

Security is an important part of business management ... just as important as inventory control and pricing, because it directly affects your balance sheet. A good security system may seem costly, but it's cheaper in the long run than risking being wiped out by a skilled burglar ... and that can happen to a small business.

How much time and money you spend on security will depend on a lot of variables: whether you're in an area with a high crime rate, whether your merchandise is especially appealing for its resale value, the layout and size of your shop, and other things. But regardless of how "safe" you think you are, you must spend some time and money on it; you can't afford to ignore it.

Next week: "How to put burglars out of business."

I would like to thank all of the people that stopped by the Crime Prevention booth at the Quincy Side-Walk Bazaar. It was a pleasure meeting and talking with you.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We all know people who always dream of what they will do TOMORROW and hence lose all their important TODAYS! Because "distance lends enchantment", many think the future holds the answer to their problems; yet they fail to realize that meeting today's responsibilities and opportunities with zest and dedication is the first rung on the ladder that leads to heights to which they aspire. We need always to remind ourselves that as important as the past and the future may be, the most important time for us to deal with is the present. TODAY... right now...many of us are passing through crises which will affect our whole future. Isn't it true that if we win triumphs today, especially over selfishness, envy and greed, we may be preparing ourselves for a future of immeasurable significance? Isn't it true that if we take care of the present the future should take care of itself?

We suggest you look for - and read - our thought next week in which we will comment on the beauty of time well spent. You will find it interesting. Look for it. Read it...

Cheney To Seek Re-election To Ward 1 City Council Seat

Councillor Michael J. Cheney announces that he will seek re-election to the Ward One City Council seat.

"I am pleased to announce that I will be a candidate for re-election to the Ward One City Council seat this November," said Cheney. "I have enjoyed working with the people of Ward 1 on a number of projects that have served to improve the quality of life for the residents of our neighborhoods."

MICHAEL CHENEY

Discussing his accomplishments, Councillor Cheney noted that the closing of the Palmer Pub was the most difficult. "It was clearly mandated by the people that the Palmer Pub must be closed. It took nearly two years to accomplish not only the closing of the pub, but encouraging a better use of the property. Today, it is evident that all of our efforts have been worthwhile. People in the vicinity of the Palmer Pub enjoy peaceful nights free from harassment."

Councillor Cheney also noted that there has been less vandalism in the area since the closing of the Palmer Pub.

In regard to Public Works projects, Cheney said, "Shortly after I was elected Ward 1 City Councillor, I realized the limited funds that were allocated to resurface our city streets. I brought this problem to the State Department of Public Works where I found $1.8 million in Chapter 90 street resurfacing funds. I brought this to the attention of the Commissioner of Public Works. Today, many of the streets in the city of Quincy have been resurfaced with this money." Councillor Cheney noted that the city had not spent any Chapter 90 money in the prior six years.

One other state program that Councillor Cheney said he has encouraged and utilized in the city is that of the Coastal Zone Management Grant Program, which offers coastal cities and towns fifty per cent matching funds for park and public access programs. Nearly $1 million in improvements will be made in Houghs Neck utilizing this program. Councillor Cheney noted that the newest park in Houghs Neck will be built without the utilization of city tax dollars. "I hope to utilize the same program for improvements in Adams Shore, Germantown and Merrymount in the future," stated Councillor Cheney.

"One of the most pressing issues that is still before us today is that of cleaning up Quincy Bay and Boston Harbor. This is a challenging time for the residents of the City of Quincy. We can finally see the light at the end of the tunnel. Within 10 years, we will see a significant improvement in the water quality of Quincy Bay. I look forward to taking my family to the beach where they can enjoy swimming in salt water free from fear that they will become ill from swimming in polluted water." Councillor Cheney noted, however, that the light is not over. The recent announcement by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority to expand the flows of sewerage to Nut Island by 60 million gallons a day would create a serious public health issue, he said. He vowed to stop any extension of the Southern Sewer District and to encourage the use of satellite treatment facilities for communities who wish to expand their sewer capacity.

"I have enjoyed representing the people of Ward 1 on the Quincy City Council and I wish to be re-elected so that I may complete the projects that are presently under way and continue to work hard on improving the quality of life for the residents of the City of Quincy," he said.

Councillor Cheney noted that he has served as chairman of the Quincy City Council Public Safety Committee, Public Transportation Committee and the Environmental Control Committee. He also served on the council president's Zoning Task Force Committee which was instrumental in recommending a number of measures to reduce density and control development in the City of Quincy. Many of these recommendations were adopted by the City Council for the protection of neighborhoods.

Family Support Service For Mental Health Patients

The South Shore Mental Health Center and the Quincy-based branch of the Center recently launched a Family Support Service (FSS) program designed to provide respite services to families of chronic mental health patients.

The program will have four types of service, the first of which allows one or two clients to live and integrate with a host family for up to three weeks.

Second, an in-home specialist can be scheduled to visit the client at home for several hours to allow the family some time away.

Third, the program provides outreach and support for the families. A family advocate will be hired to help families with problem solving and to serve as liaison between families and the provider system.

Finally, families may participate in lectures and workshops designed to help in areas of coping, problem solving and dealing with everyday issues.

Host families would receive a monetary stipend for accommodating clients. For more information call the South Shore Mental Health Center or the Quincy based branch of the center directly.

CAN FUNERAL DECISIONS BE MADE WISELY UNDER STRESS?

Not always - wish is why we recommend planning your own funeral.

Caught up in grief and stress, some people may be emotionally unable to cope with making funeral arrangements effectively. They may be tempted to proceed with more costly arrangements than they should. It should be noted that the psychological value of the funeral has no relationship to its costs.

Planning such arrangements may eliminate the possibility of such over spending. Planning can be accomplished in advance of need, in an atmosphere uncharged with the emotionally distressing circumstances of bereavement. For details of planning funerals, call us or stop by for literature.

Your questions and comments on this and other subjects are welcome in private or publicly through this column.

RENEE VARDARO, 21, of Brockton, is a pretty picture after being crowned Miss Quincy Bay of 1987 at the annual pageant held at Quincy Center Plaza.

FIVE FINALISTS in the Miss Quincy Bay Pageant were, from left, Lori Collela, 19, of Mansfield; Annette Godin, 23, Rockland; Erin Grogan, 18, Wollaston; Renee Vardaro, 21, Brockton, later crowned the winner; and Lauren Pearson, 17, South Weymouth.

Renee Vardaro:

Miss Quincy Bay Made Her Dream Come True

By KRISTINE STRENGE

Renee R. Vardaro, 21, strived for her dream and made it come true Friday night when she was crowned Miss Quincy Bay of 1987.

"I feel fantastic," she says. "I was kind of nervous, however. My commodore, Pat Pasquale made me feel more comfortable."

The pageant, which is the highlight of the annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Bazaar, drew an audience of over 1000 to Quincy Center Plaza.

It was co-sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and the Quincy Bay Race Week Association.

The runners-up were Lori L. Collela, 19, of Mansfield, Annette Godin, 23, of Rockland, Erin L. Grogan, 18, of Quincy and Lauren A. Pearson, 17, of Weymouth.

Sherry L. Padula, 19, of Weymouth was named Miss Photogenic by William Fitzgerald and Glen Caterer of Photo Quik, Quincy, the official pageant photographers.

As Miss Quincy Bay, Renee will reign over Quincy Bay Race Week, July 29 to Aug. 2 and also attend various yacht club functions.

She will receive a $1,000 scholarship to Quincy Junior College and the largest share of the over $2,500 in prizes which will be divided among the four runners-up.

Renee, of Brockton was encouraged to enter the pageant by co-worker, Phyllis Dreyer of Quincy who gave Renee an application.

"My mother, sister, Phillis and Aunt Rose have also been very supportive, sticking with me through thick and thin."

The five-foot green-eyed brunette is no stranger to beauty pageants. She has entered the Miss America Preliminary Pageant twice, winning third runner-up and has been in the Miss U.S.A. Preliminary Pageant in which she did not place.

"I found the other pageants to be helpful in my stage presence and my ability to answer questions along with my eight years of modeling experience."

Renee plans to enter the Miss Massachusetts Pageant in November.

The 25 contestants were judged in swimsuits, evening gowns and for poise.

After the competition was narrowed to five finalists a question was asked in which the girls were judged on their response.

The question: What was the most important trait or message that you have learned from your parents that you will carry with you throughout your life?

Renee's response: "The most important thing I've learned from my parents is to be honest, be myself and to always strive for my dreams."

After the pageant Renee and her family and friends attended a reception at the Metropolitan Yacht Club, Braintree.

Presently, Renee is employed at the Medical Information Bureau, Westwood as an Inforex operator. She also works part-time at LaFemmina Modeling Show as a modeling instructor.

Renee is enrolled in the Massasoit College liberal arts transfer program and plans to attend Quincy Junior College with the scholarship she won.

She also plans to pursue a career in television broadcasting as an anchorwoman.

"The pageant was a great experience for me because of the exposure, support and self confidence one gains when entering or winning a pageant," she said.

In May, Renee has plans to marry Bernard Cummings, of Brockton, a military police officer in the Marine Corps.

The other contestants were:

Natasha E. Anastasi, 16, of Quincy; Donna M. Berg, 19, of Quincy; Lisa M. Carrol, 23, of Hingham; Michelle L. Columbus, 16, of Quincy; Kellie Anne Davidson, 17, of Weymouth; Corinne M. Fleming, 17, of Weymouth; Donna J. Glynn, 18, of Quincy; Amy J. Grogan, 16, of Braintree; Deanne D. King, 18, of Weymouth; Pamela A. Murphy, 21, of Quincy; Aileen A. Morrisette Finishes With 14-4 Record

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Morrisette Legion baseball team completed its regular season Monday night with a 3-1 victory over Holbrook, finishing with a 14-4 record and clinching a Zone 6 playoff berth.

Only Morrisette, the only team to complete its season, and Milton (13-2) are assured of playoff spots. Braintree and Mass. Truck of Weymouth have the inside track on the other two berths. There are several makeup games to be played.

The playoffs are due to start Saturday with the first place team meeting the fourth place club and the second and third place teams playing in the best of three series. The winners will meet in a best of three series to determine the zone representative in the state tournament.

Ray Cattaneo, Morrisette's head coach for 17 years and the team's manager this year, earned his 250th victory last week. Ray turned the head coaching job over to Dave Perdios, one of his former players, but Cattaneo's duties haven't changed much.

Dan Overby got his second start and went four innings against Holbrook Monday night, allowing four hits, striking out two and walking three. Tim Brillo pitched one perfect inning and Larry Taglieri picked up the win, going the last two innings to improve his record to 8-1.

Morrisette scored a run in the first inning when Steve Minichiello and Dan Biagini singled and Minichiello scored on Rob McDonald's sacrifice fly. Holbrook tied in the third and it stayed that way until the sixth when Morrisette scored twice.

Minichiello reached on an error and went to third on Biagini's single to right. Biagini stole second and Minichiello scored the winning run on a wild pitch. Biagini scored on Mike Mullaney's single.

Biagini had two hits and Minichiello, Mullaney and Brillo one each.

In its previous game Morrisette got by Quincy, 4-3, in extra innings. Pitchers Wayne Chambers of Morrisette and Rob Higgins of Quincy were tough in the clutch. Higgins gave up 10 hits but struck out 11 and walked only two. Chambers gave up only three hits in 5 1/3 innings but was wild, giving up eight walks. He struck out eight. He gave way to Overby, who picked up his second win.

Morrisette scored in the third when Flavin singled, stole second, took third on a wild pitch and scored on Mullaney's single.

Quincy tied in the fourth when Bill Mulkern singled, Mike Toland sacrificed and when the bunt was misplayed, both runners were safe and Mulkern scored on a wild pitch.

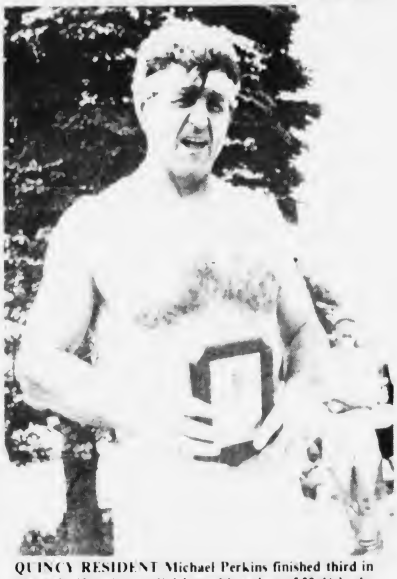
Morrisette went up, 3-1, in the fourth when Rob McDonald singled, Ricciuti singled, McDougal walked loading the bases and Flavin doubled scoring McDonald and Ricciuti.

Quincy tied it in the sixth when Nick Dragone walked for the third time and Peter Iufts hit a 400-foot homer over the centerfield fence at Adams Field.

Quincy had a chance to win it in the seventh but McDougal made a great throw to nip Mulkern at the plate as McDonald blocked the plate well.

Ron Fletcher walked in the eighth and Quincy, anticipating a bunt, sent the infield in on the pitch. But there was no bunt and Quincy had Fletcher picked off by 20 feet. Fletcher saw second base was not covered and took off. The throw went into left field and Fletcher continued on to third. Ricciuti lofted a fly which hit the right field foul line and Fletcher scored the winning run.

It marked Cattaneo's 250th Morrisette victory and he was given the game ball signed by all the players and coaches.



Ricciuti went 3-for-4. Minichiello and Flavin had two hits each and Mullaney, McDonald and Biagini one apiece.

In its previous game Morrisette defeated Canton, 6-0, as Taglieri turned in a pitching masterpiece, giving up three singles for the only Canton base runners. He struck out 11 and did not walk a batter. No runner reached second and the outfield didn't have a putout.

In the second Fletcher doubled in Ricciuti, who had singled. Morrisette added three in the fifth when McDougal was hit by a pitch, Mullaney singled and stole second and both scored on Minichiello's triple. Minichiello scored on Biagini's ground out.

Morrisette added two in the seventh when McDougal walked, Mullaney reached on an error, Biagini singled and Jim Ross walked with the bases loaded.

Minichiello, Ricciuti and Biagini had two hits each and Mullaney and Fletcher one apiece.

QUINCY RESIDENT Michael Perkins finished third in the male 40 and over division with a time of 20:46 in the New England Baptist Hospital's third annual Spring Run for Fun race. Approximately 150 other runners participated in the race which raised $1,000 for Mission Possible, an organization which sponsors youth programs in Mission Hill.

Koch Broad Meadows Awards Night July 28

The Broad Meadows District of the Koch Club Boy's Baseball and Girl's Softball Leagues will hold the 26th annual Parents and Awards Night Tuesday, July 28, at 6:30 p.m. at the Broad Meadows Middle School field, 50 Calvin Rd.

Rain date is Thursday, July 30.

Laminated certificates will be presented to each boy and girl who participated in the after supper recreation program and those with 100 percent attendance will be receiving a special recognition.

Anthony T. Delmonico, founder and director of the Broad Meadows Unit of the Koch Club, will direct the Awards Program assisted by Mrs. Gerry Delmonico and the coaches and umpires of the leagues.

The Broad Meadows District closes out the 37th year of the Koch Club's popular neighborhood recreation program. The North Quincy, Montclair and West Quincy Districts had completed their activity in the final week of June.

In addition to the recreation activity, the Broad Meadows District since 1964 has funded a $100 scholarship award to a boy and girl graduate of Quincy High School with a total of $4800 presented by Broad Meadows of the $13,000 presented by the Koch Club since 1959.

The Koch Club, in 1973, on the 25th anniversary of the organization established a permanent scholarship fund to be activated in 1998 on the 50th anniversary of the organization. The 25th anniversary events brought $3,000 for the project and the North Quincy and Broad Meadows Districts donated $1,000 each. The $5,000 original grant has increased the total to its present amount of $19,000 in the past 14 years from gifts and interest.

On the 30th anniversary of the Koch Club, a permanent Christmas charity fund was established with a $5,000 grant. The amount has increased to $11,000 in the past nine years and will be activated in 1998.

The Broad Meadows District commemorated its 25th anniversary in the spring with Delmonico, director, recognized for his efforts in founding and directing the numerous activities for thousands of youngsters.

On May 14, 1988 the Koch Club will celebrate its 40th anniversary as a community service organization.

Quincy Legion Hopes Slim For Playoff Berth

The Quincy Legion baseball team completes the regular season tonight (Thursday) against Randolph at 8:30 at Adams Field with its best record in years assured and still holding slim hopes for a playoff berth.

All teams with the exception of Morrisette, have games to make up and only Morrisette (14-4) and Milton (13-2) have clinched playoff spots.

Quincy (9-8), which has lost several one-run decisions, dropped a 6-5 heartbreaker to Milton Monday night, having the tying run on third base with no outs in the last inning but unable to score.

Quincy scored in the first on an error, a walk and Steve Happas' single. Milton tied in the bottom half on a home run. Quincy scored three runs in the fourth but Milton came back with five in the bottom half.

Quincy scored its last run in the fifth. Happas was the losing pitcher and was relived by Rob Higgins in the fourth. Happas had three singles and was struck in the face by a ground ball but stayed in the game. Bill Mulkern, Higgins and Jim Kearns had singles.

Sunday Quincy edged Mass. Truck of Weymouth, 7-6, in a makeup of a previous tie.

Jim Dennis pitched 6 2/3 innings, and was relieved by Bill Roche, who picked up the win. Quincy scored four runs in the fifth for a 4-0 lead, but Weymouth came back to tie it in the sixth.

Quincy won it with three runs in the top of the seventh when Dennis, Mulkern, Mike Toland, Peter Tufts and Kearns singled and Roche walked. Weymouth came back with two in the bottom half but Roche retired the linal batter on a fly to right field with the tying run on base.

In its previous game Quincy lost a 4-3 squeaker to Morrisette in extra innings. Higgins pitched fine ball, striking out eight and walking two. Tufts had a two-run homer over the lence at the 400-foot mark at Adams Field to tie the score in the sixth.

Tied after seven innings, Morrisette scored the winning run in the eighth on a walk to Ron Fletcher, a two-base error and a single that hit the right lield loul line by Chris Ricciuti. Quincy had a chance to win it in the seventh but Bill McDougal threw out Mulkern at the plate from center field on a single by Higgins.

Earlier Quincy lost to Braintree, 8-4, with the score 3-3 going into the top of the seventh. Pitcher Joe Taylor, who was tiring, was taken out for a pinch hitter in the sixth and he gave way to Happas, who gave up a triple, a double and two walks lor five runs.

Quincy came back with a run in the bottom half but it was far too little and too late.

Quincy scored in the first when Dennis reached on a fielders choice and Robertson tripled. Braintree tied it on two singles and an error and went ahead on two singles and a double in the fifth. Quincy tied it in the bottom of the fifth on a walk to Happas, a single by Dennis and a double by Mulkern. The other Quincy run in the seventh came when Roche doubled and Happas singled. Quincy had previously edged Braintree, 6-5, in a makeup game. Dennis was the winning pitcher, going all the way and giving up eight hits, striking out five and walking only one.

Donoghue Team Wins Broom Classic

Quincy's Paul Donoghue led his team to a 9-under-par 61 to capture the 4th annual Broom Classic golf tournament at President's Golf Course.

Donoghue captained his team in the Florida style tourney, using his long tee shots and accurate putting. Playing with Paul were George McCall, Dave Robinson and Quincy High's girls volleyball coach Jim Rendle.

The second place team of Don Smith, Rich Smith, Steve Buckley and Brian Jolly finished at 8-under. Their bid to force a playoff went astray when Don Smith lined out a birdie attempt on the 18th hole. In third place with a 7-under score of 63 was the team of Ged Phelan, Paul Cadigan, Roger Homan and Fred Murry.

The highlight of the tournament was the format which required golfers to wear costumes to the first tee. Best Costume winner was Al Bortolotti.

A total of 26 prizes were awarded by Broom Classic Tournament Director Brian Buckley. A total of 36 players participated.

Free Tennis Clinic July 31

Recreation Director Barry Welch, announces that the Quincy Recreation Department will be host for a special free one day tennis clinic featuring instructors from the New England Lawn Tennis Association (NELTA).

The clinic will be held on Friday, July 31, at the Montclair Park tennis courts on Holbrook Rd., North Quincy from 10 a.m. to noon.

Betsy Thurmond, a professional instructor with the NELTA, will be the head instructor and will bring other teaching professionals to assist in this special program. Members of the Quincy Recreation Department playground staff and tennis instructors Janice Sullivan and Mark Tenney will also assist.

The program is open to boys and girls age 6-16 years and participants can bring their own racquets or they will be provided. All participants should wear sneakers. Registration will be conducted on the day of the event at the tennis courts.

The NELTA instructors will be teaching from the new United States Tennis Association's Tennis in the Parks curriculum. This curriculum is designed to bring a solid base of skill development that is effective and rewarding and geared specifically to recreation department programs.

Welch stated that, "The tennis in the parks curriculum is new to the eastern United States. We at the Quincy Recreation Department are fortunate to participate in this pilot program. Betsy Thurmond and her staff has given instructor's clinics to all recreation leaders and it was very well received. We have placed a new emphasis on tennis this year because of the great carry over value the sport has. Skills learned at an early age can provide for a lifetime of enjoyment. Additionally it is an excellent sport that does not require large numbers of team members to practice or play. I encourage youngsters from beginner to advanced to attend and participate in the clinic on July 31."

Paul Flaherty Promoted To Project Leader

Paul Flaherty, of Houghs Neck, was recently promoted to the position of project leader in the programming department at Practice Management Systems, Inc. of Needham.

Welch said the competition, which is being made possible through the sponsorship of the Pepsi Cola Bottling Company of Milton in conjunction with the Quincy Recreation Department, will be held for District I Playgrounds at the Fenno St. Playground; District II Playgrounds at LaBrecque; District III Playgrounds at O'Rourke Playground and District IV Playgrounds at Flynn Playground on Elm St.

All competitions will begin at 10 a.m.

Open to boys and girls ages 9-10, the Pepsi NBA Hotshot competition tests youngsters' speed, dribbling, shooting and rebounding abilities. There are six age categories for competition: Boys 9-12, 13-15, 16-18; girls 9-12, 13-15, and 16-18.

The winner in each of the six categories of the district competition will advance to compete against other local winners for the Quincy Recreation Department championship. One winner from each of the six categories will advance to an area playoff to be held in Boston. The six winners of that round will play off during halftime of a Celtics game and the winner will receive an expense paid trip to the National Championships to represent New England in competition against the winners of the 22 other NBA cities. At that time the winners in each of the six categories will be crowned National Champion for his or her respective group.

Quincy Historical Society Plans Framingham, Sudbury Trip

The Quincy Historical Society will sponsor a trip Tuesday, Aug. 11 to Framingham and Sudbury.

The tour will include Garden-in-the-Woods in Framingham, the botanical garden of the New England Wild Flower Society. Its three miles of trails and 1,500 species of flowers, plants and shrubs have made the gardens nationally recognized as a center for native plant education, research, and conservation.

The group will visit nearby Danforth Museum for a guided tour of its collection which includes a noteworthy display of lithographs of plants and flowers.

Luncheon at Longfellow's Wayside Inn in South Sudbury will provide a choice of entrees. On the grounds of the famous inn, members of the group will have the opportunity to visit the Red School House of "Mary and her Little Lamb" fame. Built in 1798, the school was moved in 1926 by Henry Ford to its present location where it was restored. Also on the inn's grounds the Wayside Grist Mill, a reproduction of an 18th century mill built for Henry Ford in 1929, grinds flour and corn meal today. Flour and meal produced in the mill is used in the inn's kitchen and is sold in the Gift Shop as well.

The bus will leave the Historical Society promptly at 8:45 a.m. and return at approximately 5 p.m. The cost, which includes lunch, is $35 for members and $37 for non-members. Make reservations by calling the Historical Society office at 773-1144 by Monday, Aug. 3.

QUINCY RESIDENTS, Julie Flaherty, Valerie Feri and Beth Weixler recently participated in the fifth annual Frontiers in Science and Mathematics summer program at Worcester Polytechnic Institute. Here they watch a demonstration by Peter Christopher, associate professor of mathematics at WPI, of a spectrometer, a device that divides light into its component frequencies and displays them as a pattern of alternating light and dark lines.

Quincy Summer Theatre Group Fundraiser At Marina Bay

JM Productions and Quincy Community Summer Theatre will hold a party at the function tent at Marina Bay Friday, July 31 from 8 p.m. until midnight.

Tickets are $5, with all proceeds to benefit the group's summer production of the contemporary musical-comedy "Baby."

The amateur theater group was founded in 1984 by John McDonald of Quincy, and produces an annual summer musical featuring local residents and talent. This year marks the fourth production, supported, in part, by a grant from the Quincy Arts Council.

"Baby" will be performed Aug. 14, 15 and 21, 22 at North Quincy High School. Tickets are $6, and will be available at the door, or by calling 773-3957. Tickets for the party may be purchased at the door.

'Bicycle Rodeo' At Ward 2 Center

South Shore Buick Wins Highest Customer Service Award

South Shore Buick of Quincy recently won Buick Motor Division's highest customer service award for 1987.

The annual "Best In Class" award recognizes the Buick dealership with the highest record in customer service, repair and courteousness, according to officials.

South Shore Buick was chosen from among 120 dealers throughout New England. Only 58 dealers of 2,985 nationwide have received the award since Buick began presenting it in 1977.

"We're very excited about winning because everyone worked hard all year," said South Shore Buick co-owners Bob Costello and Bob FitzGerald. "The award gives us a feeling of accomplishment because it lets customers know that we really care about their problems."

South Shore Buick excelled in more than 150 categories in sales and service to earn the award, according to Buick Motors.

"Best In Class" is a standards-based performance improvement system that - unlike other auto industry awards - measures customer satisfaction in both the sales and service departments.

"Because it's so unique, the award has become one of the most prestigious designations in the industry," said Costello, who along with Bob FitzGerald purchased South Shore Buick in 1963.

Located at 50 Adams St. in Quincy, South Shore Buick has been serving the South Shore community for more than 80 years.

United Quincy Front To Fight Hub Incinerator

Mayor Flynn.

Sen. Paul Harold said that he met with Bulger Tuesday to ask him if Quincy is included in his recommendation of an incinerator site.

"He wouldn't confirm or deny it," said Harold. "He stressed that his alternative was merely a suggestion which the Mayor of Boston could accept or reject.

"He seemed to downplay his whole role.

"I told him there would be unified opposition to any incinerator plan in Quincy."

Harold said that Bulger is "playing his cards close to the vest."

"The only thing to do is oppose what we perceive to be a threat to the city, assume the worst and act accordingly," he said.

Other comments by those who attended the hour long meeting are:

Ron Zooleck, executive director, South Shore Chamber of Commerce: "The people at this meeting made a definitive statement that we're not going to be used as the dumping ground for Boston's trash, and will fight that wholeheartedly at every step."

City Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro: "We're all in accord, we're all on top of this thing, and I think that's the only way we can stop it, by staying together and working together."

City Council president Stephen McGrath: "Any type of a plan to utilize the shipyard will have to be approved by the Quincy City Council (which rezoned the property Planned Unit Development). Needless to say, we will not be approving any kind of incinerator."

City Councillor Thomas Nutley: "We want to wait for a while to see what Bulger is going to do, but we're going to emphasize one thing - we do not want an incinerator in Quincy and we will not have an incinerator in Quincy."

Rep. Robert Cerasoli: "I'll go out to the community to get signatures on a petition opposing any type of industrial use at the shipyard, and try to implore people to have a mixed use concept at the shipyard, such as low rise office development, condominium development, hotel and commercial development, as opposed to any kind of industrial development."

Public Works Commr. Paul Anderson: "I'm anticipating that the Mass. Water Resources Authority in the next week to 10 days will be announcing their candidate option sites for sludge disposal for the new Deer Island secondary plant as well as interim sludge disposal up until the new secondary plant is on line. I've been concerned that the authority has indicated an interest in the shipyard. I'm very concerned."

Also attending the meeting were Rep. Michael Morrissey, City Solicitor Joseph (Jay) MacRitchie, Kevin Costello, South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Rep. Thomas Brownell and his aide, Larry Chretien.

been the target for industrial use by many developers, including plans for a salvage yard and truck terminal. Now this will never happen, according to Sheets.

The "92 Club" which is on the property will be preserved, refinished on the outside, and the club will be allowed to use their location, indefinitely and at no cost to the club, added Sheets.

Councillor Sheets said the plan will be finalized as soon as the Conservation Commission gives its approval.

Beaches Swimmable

Water quality samples taken July 14, showed the city's 15 beaches to be swimmable, according to the Quincy Health Department.

The health department considers beach water samples of fecal coliform counts of less than 200 swimmable.

Counts of over 200 are unacceptable and unhealthy for swimming, according to the health department.

Shipyard Considered As Sewage Sludge Site

The vacant, 180-acre General Dynamics shipyard in Quincy is among sites in nine communities being considered for the long-term disposal of Boston area sewage sludge by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

Melanie Thomas said Tuesday the closed yard is being considered both as a transfer station and for sludge composting and burning.

Mayor Francis McCauley said he will analyze the list of sites and will be doing "a lot of work" looking at alternative sites.

The mayor said he wants to see the disposal site located outside of Quincy.

About the list of sites under consideration, McCauley said "I'm sure there will be one or more that would be better (than the shipyard)."

Other sites being considered are Walpole, Stoughton, Bedford, Ashland, Malden, Lynn, Wilmington, Deer Island and Spectacle Island in Boston Harbor.

Three locations in Walpole are on the list of options--two for landfills and a third for incineration.

The state authority now dumps 700,000 gallons of sludge daily into Boston Harbor. It is under a federal court order to find a more environmentally safe disposal method.

The authority plans to phase over sludge disposal to a private company from 1991 to 1995 and then start its own long-term disposal program.

The authority planned to announce the specific site options yesterday (Wednesday) for both long-term and interim disposal. Walpole town officials released the list of communities under consideration for the long-term disposal program Monday night.

After the authority staff presented the options to the board, it will continue studying them in detail.

The board will probably select one or more sites in mid-1988, said Thomas.

Police Chief Francis X. Finn is recuperating at home after undergoing successful surgery July 20 to clear passages in his carotid arteries.

Finn, 61, was released from Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston July 23, three days after the surgery. He is expected to be out at least five weeks.

Finn underwent quadruple bypass heart surgery in December 1982.

DeCristofaro Opposes Clean Harbor Facility

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro has informed the Braintree Civic Association of his opposition to the granting of a permanent license to operate the Clean Harbor Facility.

DeCristofaro said in a letter to the association:

"The storing and transportation of hazardous waste is entirely objectionable in an area that is adjacent to residences and in an area that is already impacted by industrial firms.

"The health and safety of people should be the number one concern. We in the Ward Two area of Quincy, which is adjacent to Braintree, share your concerns and hope this license will not be granted."

Conditions Improve At Parking Areas

Conditions at the Kinney Systems operated parking areas in Quincy have improved, according to Mayor Francis X. McCauley.

McCauley, who met recently with Bruce Young, regional supervisor for Kinney systems, said "things have improved and we will continue to monitor (the city-owned parking areas) very closely."

McCauley said the number of complaints have decreased and most of the graffiti has been cleaned up.

"They (Kinney Systems) have been working very hard to improve this situation," McCauley said.

The mayor said complaints still arise from unmanned booths, however.

McCauley Calls On GD To Give Workers 'Fair Shot' At Buyout

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Mayor Francis McCauley said Tuesday he hopes General Dynamics, who has hired a real estate consulting firm to put together a back-up plan to sell the vacant Fore River Shipyard, will continue to give the former shipyard workers buyout group a "fair shot" at buying the yard.

"I hope General Dynamics will give every consideration to the employee buyout bid," McCauley said.

Last week, General Dynamics hired Security Pacific Advisory Services of New York to draw up new marketing plans for the vacant 180-acre facility.

McCauley said he was contacted by Jim Miller, executive vice president at General Dynamics, and told that the consultant was hired because present bidders, including former shipyard workers, are having difficulty putting a financial package together.

The other potential buyers are Sid Grossman, former President of Grossman's Inc. and the Genesis Group of Houston.

"General Dynamics can't settle with any of these groups so they hired a consulting firm to look at a plan to possibly market the yard into smaller parcels and smaller purchases," McCauley said.

McCauley added that GD is willing to continue to talk to the three shipyard bidders.

Sen. Paul D. Harold (D-Quincy) said he is disappointed by the hiring of the consulting firm.

Pointing out that the Hingham shipyard was sold piece by piece, Harold said "It was sold piecemeal, and as a result it is not being used at its highest and best use and hasn't been an attractive development for years.

"The cut-up could minimize returns to the city, limit the number of jobs, and actually result in a conflicting use that in the total would not be acceptable to the community.

Chris Shields, a spokesman for GD, said the company hired the New York based firm as a "supplementary service" to its ongoing negotiations with the present bidders who seek to buy the yard in its entirety.

McCauley said if the yard is purchased by multiple groups, a recent rezoning of the shipyard from industrial to Planned Unit Development (PUD) insures the city from any unfavorable business or activity.

"The shipyard land was rezoned to protect it from any adverse operations. Quincy has control over the long term use of the yard," McCauley said.

McCauley added that any group that purchases the shipyard would need to acquire a special permit in order to do anything with the yard. The mayor said a permit would not be issued until a proposal is approved by the planning board and the city council and public hearings are conducted.

McCauley also said he hopes the future of the shipyard, closed since last summer, will be resolved as soon as possible.

Sheets Wants Stronger Law On Abandoned Cars

Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets says he will ask the City Council to strengthen the law providing for handling abandoned motor vehicles.

Abandoned cars are becoming a much greater problem in the city and the enforcement officer does not have the power and authority to deal with the growing problem, according to Sheets.

He said the enforcement officer does well with what law he has to work with, but circumstances have changed and the law must change.

More and more vacant lots are becoming dumping grounds for old cars, he said. There are fewer and fewer salvage yards to take these cars, and when a salvage yard takes a car the owner is no longer paid anything for the car, and in return must pay to have the car towed to the junk yard, Sheets said.

"Heavy penalties must be levied against anyone who abandons a car in this city," Councillor Sheets said.

He indicated he will work with the Police Department to draft an ordinance, as well as examine other policies in other cities and towns where abandoned cars have been a problem.

3 Fire Dept. Promotions

Mayor Francis McCauley announces three promotions within the Quincy Fire Department.

Lt. David C. Usher of 42 South Shore Dr., Holbrook, will be promoted to captain. Lt. Usher has been in the department since 1965.

Clinton F. Tierney II of 5 Willow St., Quincy and Joseph S. Verlicco of 37 Homer Rd., Quincy, will be promoted to lieutenants. Fire Fighters Tierney and Verlicco were both appointed to the Quincy Fire Department on May 2, 1970.

The swearing-in of the officers will be Monday, Aug. 3 at 10:30 a.m. in the mayor's office, third floor at City Hall.

The promotions are due to the retirements of Capt. Theodore Kressler and Lt. Patrick J. McAuley.

The effective date of these promotions will be Saturday, Aug. 8.

Water Meters To Test Quincy Bay

The City of Quincy Sewer and Water Department has purchased three water testing meters that will be used to frequently examine Quincy Bay's temperature, salinity and oxygen levels, according to Leo Kelly, chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee for the EPA Study of Quincy Bay.

Kelly said the Boston Harbor Monitoring Program, who are under the auspices of the Massachusetts Audubon Society, will use the equipment to frequently test Quincy Bay. The equipment, purchased for $2,400, is a temperature and salinity meter, an oxygen dissolve meter and a secchi disc.

Kelly stressed the importance of the meters since frequent and regular testing will provide more accurate readings.

"This is a very necessary program because it's ongoing and allows continued testing," Kelly said.

Kelly thanked Mayor Francis X. McCauley for his "quick response" on the matter. Kelly approached McCauley for the equipment funding after the Boston Harbor Monitoring Program appeared before a recent meeting of the Citizen's Advisory Committee.

The first test was performed Tuesday at Squantum Yacht Club, said Kelly. Testing could be conducted as frequently as once a day, he added.

Kelly said the Boston Harbor Monitoring Program will use the data collected and present it to the EPA as a history of the bay. Kelly also said testing would help determine the effects of the Deer Island treatment plant once it opens.

Kelly said this area of testing ties in with his committee's examination of lead and metal contents of the bay and their effects on marine life.

Presently, the Boston Harbor Monitoring Program tests and analyzes water near Quincy Bay, including Dorchester Bay.

Kelly said he hopes the program will expand further into other communities.

Wilhelmina: A Landmark

There are really two landmarks at 135 Adams St., Quincy.

One is the Adams National Historic Site -- the Adams Mansion -- which served as the summer White House to Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and was home to four generations of the illustrious Adams family.

The other is Wilhelmina Sellers Harris whose association with the house and the Adams family goes back 67 years and includes 37 years as superintendent of the historic site.

WILHELMINA

She first went to the Old House -- as it was affectionately known by the family -- in 1920 to become Brooks Adams' private secretary. The last member of the family to live there, he died in 1927.

After his death, she left, married Colonel Frank Harris and became the mother of three sons.

After the house became a National Historic Site in 1946, she returned and became its superintendent, the first woman ever to become a superintendent for the National Park Service.

Now 91, she will soon be leaving the house she has loved all these years. She is retiring.

A reception and open house for her and her successor, Marianne Peak of Hingham, who has been deputy superintendent since 1982, will be held Tuesday, Aug. 4 from 5 to 7 p.m.

Wilhelmina has given loving care to the old house and has kept it in a "lived in appearance."

As you walk through the beautiful rooms you get the feeling that John and Abigail are out for a walk and will be right back.

Those who really know her, will always feel that way about Wilhelmina.

IN HIS ANNOUNCEMENT that he will seek re-election as Ward 1 City Councillor, Michael Cheney left the door open for a possible run for the state representative seat Thomas Brownell is vacating to accept a Plymouth District Court judgeship.

CHENEY

But close observers don't think Cheney will make that run if a special election is called for January or February. It would be too close to this year's Quincy municipal election. If no special election is called, he might give consideration to running in next year's regular state election.

But he may pass it up then.

Observers think he and former Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly who has already said he will run for the Brownell seat, would get into a bloody and costly battle if both ran. They would split up that important Houghs Neck vote that usually sticks together. That would help another candidate from another area -- say Wollaston -- walk off with the prize.

KELLY

MICHAEL CONDON officially kicks off his campaign for City Councillor at-large tonight (Thursday) at a fundraiser at Amelia's, Marina Bay, Squantum from 6 to 9 p.m. Tickets are $10 and may be obtained at the door or by calling 770-3566 or 741-8544.

Condon, incidentally, has been out knocking on doors and doing the sign patrol on Neponset Bridge.

YOU MIGHT SAY that Tim Cahill, candidate for City Councillor at-large, has added a touch of art to political campaigning.

CAHILL

His sister-in-law, artist Guiliana Francesca, is holding an art show and reception tonight (Thursday) from 7 to 10:30 p.m. at Tim's Weymouth Handshakes Cafe, Stetson Place, Rte. 18, South Weymouth.

Guiliana, a Quincy resident, will be selling some of her paintings with a portion of each sale going to Cahill's campaign fund. Plus the proceeds from raffling off one of the paintings.

□

ENTRANCE OF Tom McDonald into the Ward 3 City Council field will liven up an already lively race.

McDONALD

McDonald, former state commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars is a Quincy native and lives on Vershire St. North Quincy. He has been active in the Bryan VFW Post of which he is a past commander and in worthy causes such as the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

He makes the fourth contender for the seat being vacated by John Lydon who is retiring. The other three: Larry Chretien, aide to Rep. Thomas Brownell, Howard MacKay who made an impressive run two years ago and William Reardon.

McDonald, MacKay and Reardon are all practically Montclair neighbors.

Harbor Monitoring Program Expanded

The Boston Harbor Monitoring Program expanded to Quincy Bay Tuesday with a ceremony at the Squantum Yacht Club on Quincy Shore Drive, Wollaston.

Started last October in Dorchester Bay, the Boston Harbor Monitoring Program is an effort to bolster the cause for the Boston Harbor clean-up. Filling an important information gap, the Monitoring Program is designed to:

- collect data about the condition of Boston Harbor,
- involve volunteers in a formal scientific program and improve their understanding of the state of the harbor,
- present data and regular status reports and on the state of the harbor to the public and to key agencies, including to the Environmental Protection Agency who is presently conducting a Quincy Bay marine life study.

Participating in the ceremony were Dr. Gerard A. Bertrand, president of the Massachusetts Audubon Society, and Mayor Frances McCauley.

The Boston Harbor Monitoring Program is a collaborative effort conducted by Massachusetts Audubon Society, the Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands, Massachusetts Bay Marine Studies Consortium, New England Aquarium, Southeastern University, Save the Harbor/Save the Bay, and the Boston Harbor Associates. The program aims to increase public awareness of harbor issues, improve scientific understanding, and advise harbor decision makers.

Children's Garden Park Opens At Lincoln Hancock School

A crowd of 200 adults and children gathered recently on the grounds of the Lincoln-Hancock Community School for the opening ceremonies of the Children's Garden Park, a new playground geared for children from pre-school to eight years of age.

Participating in the ribbon cutting and awards ceremony were Mayor Francis McCauley, Councillor Patricia Toland, Lincoln-Hancock Community School Assistant Principal Dorothy Greene, and South West Community Relations Committee Co-Chairperson, Diana Kinch. Their speeches stressed the importance of community involvement and cooperation.

Sculptor Edward Monti received a plaque from the South West Community Relations Committee for his donation of a granite turtle to the playground. He also received a citation from the children of Quincy for his work.

Tot-Lot Committee members received certificates of appreciation for their work over the past year.

Committee members are: Donna Ackerman, Ernest Aristide, Jenny Baker, Debra Beach, Gwendolyn Caldwell, Diana Kinch, Margaret Orlando, Cindy Silveira, Neighborhood Services Coordinator for Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, Albert Vaughn, Jan Tucker, Julie Cantelli, and Arthur Tucker.

The playground is complete with tunnels, swings, playhouse, suspended bridges, wooden vehicle, and bright colored steering wheels. It is the result of a year-long cooperative effort between the city of Quincy, including the City Council, Planning Department, Parks and Recreation Department, Police Department, School Committee and the South West Community Relations Committee and the Lincoln-Hancock Community School.

School principal, Dennis Carini was instrumental in involving the Lincoln-Hancock Parent Teachers Organization and Mothers Club.

The project was funded by a community development block grant and given support by Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets.

Richard Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, volunteered an installation crew headed by Paul Zambruno. Flowers for the park were donated by Almquist Flowerland and planted by Lincoln-Hancock fifth grade teacher Steve Cantelli.

The name of the playground, "The Children's Garden Park," was chosen by the Tot-Lot Committee from a number of entries. Each classroom submitted a prospective name to be considered.

Along with vandalism prevention seminars conducted by Quincy Police Officer Robert Hanna for members of the South West Community Relations Committee, "Park Pride" seminars were held for the school's children by their teachers to encourage each child to take care of their new playground for the benefit of all.

Youngsters Convince Mayor Of Need For New Playground

July 29-Aug 4, 1944

43 Years Ago

Mayor Charles A. Ross announced plans to convert five acres of city-owned land off Sea and Palmer Sts. into a new playground and baseball field.

The Mayor's disclosure came after a meeting with four youngsters from Germantown and Adams Shore, who convinced him of the difficulties arising out of sharing their pasture ball field with a herd of cows.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

THOUGHTS ON TIME ... Time wasted is existence; when used, it is life. It is your ability to know what is waste of time that enables you to use it correctly. Dreaming is no waste of time if you strive to make the dream come true ... Playing games is no waste of time if you find in them relaxation and delight. Dancing is no waste of time if you listen to the music and renew the harmony in your soul by keeping the rhythm ... Movie-going is no waste of time if it permits you to escape from yourself for a while. Talking is no waste of time if you think and evaluate before you speak ... Feasting is no waste of time when you do it with joy and do not overdo it ... Envy IS a waste of time! ... Revenge IS a waste of time! ... Envy retards; revenge weakens. TIME WASTED IS EXISTENCE: USED IS LIFE! ...

Squantum Church Members Petition Botha To Release Children Being Held

Worshippers at the First Church of Squantum Sunday were asked by their pastor, the Rev. Dr. Gene Langevin, to sign a petition to South African State President P.W. Botha, urging him and his government to release thousands of children presently being held by his regime.

More than 400 children are believed to be in detention in the Witwatersrand detention center alone and that is only one of many similar detention centers all over the country. There is no official publication of the names and number of children in detention. Even spoken opposition to these jailings is a crime according to South African law, said Dr. Langevin.

Children as young as seven years of age have been incarcerated by the Botha regime, he said. Parents are often not informed that their children have been detained or where they are being held. The children are totally isolated from the outside world and from any source of help.

Those detained have none of the protection afforded by civilized societies to young people, Dr. Langevin said. Children and adults are kept together in overcrowded cells; children are frequently abused, physically and sexually, while they are in detention. It is widely understood that such conditions of detention can devastate children psychologically as well as being an excruciating torment to their parents.

"What we want to say to the Botha government is that somebody knows, somebody cares for these poor children and their parents who are being abused," Dr. Langevin said. "And, most of all, that God knows, too."

At the time of the offering, the pastor was assisted by six young people of the Squantum church in collecting the signatures of the congregation. These young people were Chris Dixey, Mindi Hurd, Sarah Mildram, Deborah Stohlberg, Karen Reister and Andy Ogilvie. The signed petitions were then brought forward as part of the offering and placed on the altar at the front of the church altar at the front of the church.

Dr. Langevin's sermon this week was "Overcoming Stress."

Stewart Scott and Tore Wallin were the ushers. Hazel Mayne and May Lewis hosted the Fellowship Hour after the service.

During the summer, the Sunday worship services all begin at 9:30 a.m. Preachers for the rest of August include Doug Barnum Aug. 2; Craig Zachring Aug. 9; Tom Williamson Aug. 16; a group of young people Aug. 23; and Patti Langevin-Hurd Aug. 30. Visitors are welcome.

Teachers Collaborating To Strengthen Vo-Tech Curriculum

Academic and vocational teachers are collaborating this summer to ensure that the curriculum at Quincy Vocational-Technical School is strengthened and that all subjects are taught with relevancy toward each other.

"We are trying to achieve the most effective way of teaching academic subjects for a vocational school," explained Director Joseph A. Mazzarella, recently honored as one of five outstanding vocational educators in Massachusetts.

"We are developing a curriculum that will be relevant in the classroom and in the shop areas, a curriculum that introduces a way of learning to be utilized throughout life.

"The very first thing a student must be cognizant of when he or she arrives at a vocational school is that safety is of the [illegible] importance," explained [illegible] Boyle, a machine [illegible] instructor, who has been teaching at the school for [illegible] years.

"Machinery, if used in wrong way can be extremely dangerous; chemicals can be hazardous if not handled properly. So," emphasized Boyle, "there are different things to learn, and different methods of teaching in a vocational school, and we shall attempt this summer to integrate the academic and shop programs."

Boyle's colleague, John Sullivan, a science teacher who is also working on the curriculum plan, stressed the importance of making subjects such as mathematics central to the shop curriculum.

"Students learn how to read a ruler, they learn fractions and in their shop courses fractions are absolutely necessary; so is measuring thus there is an obvious connection between math and shop subjects," he explained.

Sullivan, who graduated from the University of Vermont, and holds a master's degree in education from Bridgewater State College, makes clear that subjects, whether they be academic or vocational cannot be taught in isolation.

"This is especially true," he noted, "in a rapidly changing technological world."

Landmark Closing Sunday

Special '50th' Farewell Activities At Winfield House

The Winfield House Restaurant, a Wollaston landmark for 50 years which will close its doors Sunday, Aug. 2, is conducting anniversary activities which include specially priced chicken dinners.

Next week, there will be a public sale of restaurant merchandise.

According to Mrs. Lena Strout, proprietor, tonight (Thursday) to Saturday, Aug. 1, starting at 4 p.m., chicken dinners will be served for $9 to the first diner, and free to the second diner.

The sale is reminiscent of one held at the restaurant nearly 50 years ago when the first chicken dinner was 65 cents, and the second one 10 cents, said Mrs. Strout.

Next week, merchandise from the restaurant ranging from dishes to tables to pieces of the bar will be sold.

Hours will be Wednesday, Aug. 12 to Friday, Aug. 14, 4 p.m. to 9 p.m., and Saturday, Aug. 15, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Mrs. Strout said that a number of regular customers have expressed interest in purchasing a small part of the restaurant as a souvenir.

According to her son, Loren Strout, all items will be sold on a first come, first serve basis and only in supplies on hand.

All sales will be final.

"We are holding this special sale instead of an auction because of the many customers that have requested it," said Strout.

"Items such as glasses, dishes, silverware, tables, chairs, menus, and other items will be available, and each will have a 50th anniversary label affixed to it for collections purposes," he said.

Quincy Hospital Offers Advice On Dealing With Medical Emergencies

- Pre-plan at home to ensure that all members of your family know the 911 emergency number, or an alternative emergency number. The number for the Quincy area is 911. Have the local Poison Control Center telephone number (232-2120) posted in a conspicuous location where everyone can find it. Post the name and location of the hospital near the telephone.
- If you do require emergency medical care, bring along the right papers, if possible. You will need to register, providing the staff with your name, address, doctor's name, and the name of your health insurance provider, so you will want to have your identification card and insurance number with you.
- Try to have someone transport or accompany you to the emergency room, or meet you there. This person will be helpful in informing the staff of any noticeable change in your condition, making calls for you, answering questions, and assisting you in getting home.
- Generally, companions and family members are not allowed into the treatment areas. However, there may be times when it is beneficial to have a relative or friend present to answer questions and take down information for you on your follow-up care or medications.
- Expect to wait in the Emergency Room. There are often delays in this area, as patients with critical problems are taken first. Additionally, tests and X-rays may need to be taken, and it may be necessary for the staff to monitor your condition for a period of time.
- Patients are evaluated as they enter the Emergency Area, through a system known as "triage," whereby a member of the nursing staff will evaluate your condition and put you into one of the following categories: 1) life-or limb-threatening emergencies, such as blocked air passages, profuse bleeding, severe internal injury, heart attack, or rapidly-falling blood pressure, 2) conditions that could be life-threatening, and should be treated as expeditiously as possible, such as head injury or abdominal pain, 3) all other cases.
- The Emergency Department does not provide for follow-up care, but does provide patients with instructions on required follow-up treatment for their condition. They will refer you to your own physician or assist you to select a physician for follow-up care.
- The Emergency Room charges a flat fee for its services, in addition to specific charges for such things as blood work, supplies, and X-rays that may be necessary. In addition, the physician will submit to the patient a separate bill for his services. Most major insurance carriers cover emergency room treatment, however, each case is judged by the insurance carriers on an individual basis. Carriers may elect to pay only a portion of your charges, or nothing at all, if their determination is that emergency room care was not required.
- If you are covered under a health maintenance organization (HMO), clearance from that program may be needed before you are treated. This clearance means that the Emergency Room staff will place a call to the HMO, and tell the representative that you need emergency treatment. HMO's, most often, do not approve treatment for their clients, for conditions which are less than critical.
- Quincy City Hospital provides Emergency Room treatment, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, to meet the needs of the community. If you need additional information on emergency services at Quincy City Hospital please contact the Office of Community Relations at 773-6100, ext. 4016.

Brownell Opposes Plans To Increase Sewage Flow To Nut Island

Rep. Thomas Brownell (D-Quincy) has written a letter to the board of directors of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority expressing strong disagreemenbt with their plans to increase from 300 million gallons per day (mgd) to 360 mgd the allowable flow of sewage into the Nut Island treatmen. plant.

Brownell supported earlier assertions of other Quincy officials by stating that "the Authority has proclaimed Nut Island's capacity as now being 360 mgd for the singular purpose of justifying the Neponset Valley Sewer Relief project and the Framingham-Wellesley Extension Sewer Replacement Project."

Brownell added, "I believe that increasing flow at this time to Nut Island is a flagrant violation of the Clean Water Act. Furthermore, I will soon be proposing legislation to cap the allowable flow to Nut Island. As you know, such legislation would force the Authority to build satellite treatment plants and or to adopt effective flow reduction measures."

In his letter, Brownell also called for a meeting between Quincy officials, Secretary of Environmental Affairs James Hoyte, and the MWRA's New Hoyte, and the MWRA's new Executive Director Paul Levy.

Make Quincy 'Off Limits' To Boston Trash, Says Cahill

Right now two potential sites in this city are being considered as locations for a new disposal facility to handle waste from Boston, according to Cahill.

Both Moon Island and the vacant General Dynamics Shipyard are targeted, but as far as I'm concerned, the entire city of Quincy is 'off limits' to Boston trash," Cahill said.

"I'm opposed to a Boston disposal facility in Quincy for several reasons, primarily because I'm concerned about the possible health hazards," he said.

"In its course of operation such a waste handling facility, as is planned, emits methane gases and dioxin into the environment. In light of current efforts to clean up Wollaston Beach and Quincy Bay, it would be a giant step backwards as far as the ecology of this city is concerned, if such a facility is given the O.K.," said Cahill.

"I'm also taking a stand against this project for the plain and simple reason that Quincy has its own waste handling problem waiting to be dealt with. Currently, it is costing us more than $2 million annually to dispose of our own trash, so it's critical that we take action today to insure that, in the future, we don't find ourselves looking at the same dilemma Boston is now facing. In the event that a waste disposal plant for Boston is built here, it would give the impression to other communities that Quincy is willing to concede that its role in this state is nothing more than a "weigh station" for the Commonwealth's refuse, whether it's incinerated on our land, or dumped into our bay.

"In one sense, however, it is beneficial that this issue arose when it did because it compels us all to shift our focus onto the truly important question of how can we keep Quincy's resources alive, and the city clean. To date, there's been an excess of senseless argument over topics such as whether to impose restrictions on the size of political posters as a means for beautifying the city.

"While I agree that too large signs can be an eyesore during the election months, our efforts should be directed to the problems which must be resolved now because of the serious nature of potential consequences. The land, air, and water in Quincy, unlike political posters, are finite resources."

Business Security

Part 2

How to put burglars out of business:

You can do a number of things to "put burglars out of business" -- specifically, your business. They fall into four general categories: 1) Making your business uninviting to a burglar; 2) Making it hard for him to get inside; 3) Making it hard for him to find or remove valuable items; 4) Making it likely he'll get caught if he does get inside.

- Making Your Business Uninviting:

Good lighting, both inside and outside, is probably the single most effective and inexpensive deterrent to burglary. Lighting destroys the cover of darkness burglars prefer to work in. Outside lights, the sodium vapor type is best, should cover all points of entry, alleys and passageways, especially those in the back. Inside lights are particularly important around the safe and cash register.

Valuable merchandise should be illuminated too, but try to keep it out of display windows at night. Arrange your stock so that a burglar working in a far corner of the shop could be seen by someone walking by. If you have a burglar alarm, make it obvious, put a decal on the door or window, or make it visible from outside. Don't provide other kinds of cover for a burglar, stacked boxes, a vehicle parked close to the building, ladders, and so on.

- Making It Hard To Get Inside:

Exterior doors should be heavy and solid -- not hollow. Wooden doors should be metal-lined to resist sawing and drilling. Glass panels should be protected against being kicked or knocked out. Side and back entrances should also have metal bars as wide as the inside of the door that can be dropped into place at closing. Hinge pins on doors should be installed inside so that they cannot be removed by a thief.

A deadbolt lock is best for the doors. There are two main types. One (single cylinder) requires a key to open form the outside but can be opened with a knob from the inside. It is effective if the door is strong and there's no nearby glass that could be broken to get to the knob. The other type (double cylinder) requires a key to open from both outside and inside. This is effective if the door is not so strong or there's breakable glass near it. But it also can be a fire hazard if it's kept locked during business hours. Make sure your local codes permit this type of lock before installing one.

Avoid springlatch locks that can be opened by using a knife blade, a thin piece of metal or a plastic strip.

Window security is just as important as door security. Break resistant glass is best, expecially for display windows. Rear and side windows should be protected by grillwork (iron bars) or by heavy duty screen (No 9 guage interior wire guards), also useful on doors with glass panels. The grillwork or screen should be bolted through the building. Locks are useful on some types of windows; check with a good locksmith.

Don't overlook other ways a burglar might get inside your business - skylights, ventilators, sidewalk grilles, loading docks, old coal chute openings and others. Take steps to make these burglar resistant also.

And don't forget that some thieves don't even have to break in: They walk in while you're open, then hide in a rest room, closet or similar hiding place until after closing time. So check all potential hiding places before closing up.

If you store some of your stock outside, it should be well lighted and enclosed by a fence, high, sturdy and topped with barbed wire (otherwise it's too easy to climb over or poke a hole through).

McCauley Tells Bulger, Flynn Quincy Doesn't Want Trash

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Mayor Francis McCauley has written a letter to Senate President William M. Bulger and forwarded a copy to Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn stating Quincy's opposition to any proposal that would send Boston's trash to any Quincy location.

The mayor said he has yet to receive a reply from either Bulger or Flynn.

"I expressed in my letter that Quincy is very concerned and strongly opposed to any plan that would bring Boston's trash to Quincy," McCauley said.

Last week, Quincy was sited as a possible location for the construction of an incinerator after Bulger derailed Boston's plan to build a trash to energy incinerator in South Bay.

Bulger's refusal to elaborate on his own "irresistible choice" for a trash plant fueled speculation that he was considering several sites, including Moon Island and the closed Quincy shipyard.

McCauley said there is "less and less" chance that Bulger's plans include Quincy but added there is "nothing definitive" at this time.

"No one knows what is on his (Bulger's) mind," the mayor said.

McCauley added that Bulger is not expected to make his suggestion known until September.

Smoking Areas Limited At Hospital Effective Aug. 1

The Quincy city Hospital Board of Managers has unanimously approved a policy limiting smoking areas throughout the hospital.

The hospital feels that, as a health care institution, QCH has a responsibility to protect employees, patients and visitors from known hazardous substances. Its employees, as health care professionals, will serve as role models in the prevention of disease. Tobacco smoke is a known hazard to non-smokers who are exposed to "second-hand" smoke. Smoking also presents a serious fire hazard.

For employees and physicians, the new policy reads "No hospital employee may smoke while on duty. Employees may smoke only on their own free time, and then only in those areas clearly designated as "smoking" areas. These areas include designated area of the cafeteria; coffee shop, and employee lounge located in the basement of the administration building. All prospective employees will be informed of this policy during their first interview."

For patients and visitors, "No smoking is allowed in patient rooms. Patients and their visitors may smoke only in: the designated area of the cafeteria; the coffee shop, and the Hunting-3 Conference Room" where support group meetings are held.

Therefore, it is the policy of QCH that smoking is not permitted anywhere in the hospital except in clearly designated "smoking" areas. Tobacco products are not sold in the hospital.

Administration would like to thank the hospital's Safety Committee for their untiring efforts in drafting the hospital's policy. They ask the hospital staff, our patients and visitors for their cooperation and assistance in implementing this enforced policy.

For the convenience of the hospital staff, QCH is offering free "Smoking Cessation" programs which have proven to be highly successful. These programs are also offered to the general public at a reduced fee. For further information, please call 773-6100 ext. 3056.

Blood Pressure Screenings At Quincy Hospital

Quincy City Hospital will conduct a free blood pressure screening for the general public Tuesday, Aug. 18, in the Ambulatory Care Department from 1:30 to 3 p.m.

The screenings, performed by nursing staff, will enable the individual to keep track of his blood pressure, and be aware of dangerous elevations in the pressure. Persons in need of referral to a physician, will be advised to do so.

The screenings, which will take place on the first and third Tuesday of each month, are free of charge.

German Potato Salad

High In Calories But Worth It

Anyone who knows me or who reads this column knows I am a calorie conscious person. (Which is why one of my friends, Alpha, labeled me as "the most vain woman she knows!") However, for the past 10 days, while in Europe visiting our daughter Suzy who lives in Germany with her husband who is in the service, my diet went to pot (sometimes).

One of her friends invited us all over for dinner, and served the most delicious German potato salad. I asked Laura to give me the recipe so I could share it with all of you. It is rather high in calories but worth it when you taste this tasty dish. And it isn't something you'd make every day so don't worry about the extra calories. I didn't. After all, I was on vacation and with all the walking one does while sightseeing, plus running for buses, trains and cabs, I happily did not gain a pound even with the potato salad. Here is the recipe.

LAURA'S GERMAN POTOTO SALAD
3-4 Lbs of potatoes
½ cup chicken stock
(or boullion if you don't have stock)
1 medium sized onion (cut up)
3 eggs (hard boiled)
¼ Lb of ham (cut up in small pieces)
½ Lb of bacon and the grease

Fry the bacon and set aside. Keep the grease. Boil the potatoes. Cut up in small pieces. Pour the chicken stock or bouillion over the potatoes. Cut the bacon up in small pieces and blend including the grease, into the potatoes. Then add all other ingredients. Serve it at room temperature. The night Laura served it, she barbequed some bratwurst to go with it. It is a delicious German sausage, but this potato salad goes with everything (except a thin waistline)! Aufuidsan!

Marie D'Olimpio is the author of "Simply Italian-And Then Some," a collection of her own recipes. Copies of the book are available at That's Italian, Franklin St., South Quincy; Previte's Market, Sumner St., Quincy Point and Samoset Pharmacy, Samoset Ave., Merrymount.

A 50th Anniversary Salute

50th Anniversary Year

Large Turnout Expected For QBRW

By TOM SULLIVAN

A larger than usual number of boats are expected to compete in the 50th anniversary Quincy Bay Race Week now underway.

The racing, which opened Wednesday will continue through Sunday.

"I feel sure we will have the greatest number of boats in some time," said Sal Gallinaro, Quincy Bay Race Week Association president and a member of Town River Yacht Club.

"There have been lulls through the years when the number of boats dropped, but things have started to pick up again during the past few years and I look for an excellent turnout of boats this year."

In 1970 a record total of 1,870 boats took part in the competition.

The Quincy Bay Race Week Association was formed in 1937 with the Quincy, Squantum and Wollaston Yacht Clubs the original members.

The first Race Week began July 31, 1938, when 29 classes of boats competed in the racing program which ran through Aug. 4.

The regatta was so successful that plans were made immediately for a bigger Race Week the following year.

Later the Town River, Wessagussett, Braintree, South Shore and Metropolitan Yacht Clubs joined and those eight clubs currently make up the Race Week Association.

Marblehead Race Week had been the main attraction in interclub sailboat racing for years and Quincy Bay Race Week has grown steadily until it now challenges Marblehead as the most popular race week in the area.

The association's first president was Commodore Edward P. Shaw of Wollaston, vice president was Roy McPherson, past commodore of Quincy Yacht Club and the executive board consisted of Edward J. Gallagher, John Oliver, Horatio Holland, Frank Hendry, Manual Prada and John Burroughs. Mayor Thomas S. Burgin served as honorary chairman of the board.

This year's other officers are vice president Bill Wilder of Wollaston, treasurer Jack White of Squantum and secretary Ted Johnson of Quincy.

"Juniors are the backbone of Race Week," Gallinaro said. "There were no junior sailing programs when Race Week was in its infancy. Now all clubs have outstanding junior programs. At Town River we have an excellent junior program with more than 80 young people involved. We try to keep the kids interested all year around. As they get older, they stay interested and go into bigger boats and that's how Race Week keeps growing."

In the early days of Race Week wooden boats were used and youngsters got into sailing by serving a kind of apprenticeship. Wooden boats needed some attention, like bailing, scraping or painting.

Interested young people who frequented the shore usually offered their services and on occasion the boat owner would invite his helper to go out in the boat and maybe crew for the skipper. If the youngster made a good impression on the skipper he was recommended to other skippers who might be seeking a crew.

Now the junior sailing programs are flourishing and may continue to do so, but the next step is of major concern.

The juniors usually start out in turnabouts, duplins or national 10s and the next step is up to lasers, 420s and hustlers, all of which demand financial considerations.

All clubs in the association donate and participate in the racing. Any money raised during the year is spent in one year, most going for trophies.

"One of the highlights of Race Week is the ever-growing Marine Parade on the last day of racing," Gallinaro said. "Last year was the biggest parade in history with 201 decorated boats, of which 130 were from Town River, which celebrated its 75th anniversary last year. I expect even more boats this year marking the 50th anniversary of Race Week."

To keep Race Week in the forefront every year, the association enters a float on Quincy's Christmas Parade. Last year the association won the Mayor's Trophy.

"The weather is always a major concern during Race Week," Gallinaro said. "Races can be cancelled because of no wind and also because of too much wind. And you have to guard against unexpected squalls and other hazards.

"If we ever have five bad days, a year's work is ruined, because as soon as we get through with the races and trophy night, we start plans for the next year. It is a 12-month deal."

Last year Race Week endured some tense moments from the weather but, except for the Friday inside line racing being postponed, things went smoothly and two inside line races Saturday permitted completion of the five-race series.

The final day of racing co-hosted by Squantum and Metropolitan Clubs, using Squantum's facilities, drew one of the largest crowds in recent years.

Sailors Vie For Coveted Trophies

Several handsome and coveted trophies will be competed for by hundreds of sailors - men, women, boys and girls - during next week's 50th anniversary edition of Quincy Bay Race Week.

The Capt. James Berwick Finlay Memorial Trophy: Presented to the Quincy Yacht Club in 1948 by Albert W. Finlay, his father, for competition during Race Week. Presented in loving memory of a son who during his lifetime did much to advance the sport of yachting on Massachusetts Bay. The trophy is presented annually to the yachtsman considered to have made the most outstanding record or to have performed some single act of sportsmanship during Race Week.

The Fred Hunt Memorial Trophy: A perpetual trophy presented annually since 1966 by the Patriot Ledger in memory of the man who served the newspaper for more than three decades as a yachting writer and its yachting editor. A deep water sailor and a racing enthusiast, Hunt played a major role in the success and growth of Quincy Bay Race Week and the sport itself.

This trophy is awarded annually to a person who had demonstrated a high degree of sportsmanship and a willingness to help others in the advancement of the yacht racing sport and who has contributed to the success of Race Week. The trophy is held until the succeeding Race Week by the home club of the winner who is awarded a keeper trophy for his permanent possession.

The Reynolds Memorial Trophy: A perpetual trophy presented to the QBRWA in 1966 by the family of John Reynolds, an ardent supporter of and skipper in the Day Sailor Class until his untimely death in 1965.

The trophy is to be awarded annually to the Race Week winner in the Hustler Class and is held by him until Race Week of the succeeding year when it is returned to the association. An engraved keeper trophy is awarded to the winner for his permanent possession.

The Coke Trophy: Presented by the Coca-Cola Company to stimulate interest in overall competition.

The 1300 Trophy: Presented to the QBRWA by the Metropolitan Yacht Club. The trophy is awarded annually to the Race Week winner according to the deed of gift. The winner is presented an engraved keeper trophy for his permanent possession.

Commodore Charles Wing Memorial Trophy: Presented to the QBRWA by his friends and family as a perpetual trophy to be awarded annually to the winner in the Red Fleet on Town River Yacht Club's Day of Race Week.

City of Boston Bermuda Cup: This beautiful and historic silver punch bowl has been in the custody of the Quincy Y.C. for over 50 years. It was presented by the City of Boston around 1905 for a yacht race from Boston to Bermuda. This race was never held and in 1911 the city again put the cup up for an ocean race to be held on Labor Day 1911 to become the permanent possession of the winner. The race was won by Hollis Burgess, Q.Y.C. member in his sloop Marie L.

Mr. Burgess generously made the Quincy Y.C. trustee of the cup which was to be placed in annual competition as a perpetual trophy. In 1968 the Q.Y.C. presented the trophy to the QBRWA for Race Week competition. This valuable trophy is to be presented to the annual winner to be held by him until the succeeding Race Week. The winner is to be presented a suitably engraved keeper trophy for his permanent possession.

Harry Warner Memorial Trophy: Presented to the QBRWA in 1968 by the Warner family and the Town River Y.C. as a perpetual trophy to be raced for by cruising type trimarians. It is to be annually engraved and is to be held by the winner until the succeeding Race Week. A suitably engraved keeper trophy is to be presented the winner for his permanent possession.

Morrisette Bombs Mass. Truck To Stay Alive

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Morrisette and Mass. Truck (Weymouth) Legion baseball teams were scheduled to meet Tuesday night in the third and deciding game of their Zone 6 playoff semifinal series.

Milton and Braintree also split in their first two games and were to meet Tuesday night to decide the series.

The winner of the semifinal series will meet in a best of three series to decide the zone representative in the state tournament.

Morrisette, which finished second to Milton during the regular season, escaped elimination Monday night when it rolled over Mass. Truck, 10-3, after losing the series opener Sunday, 6-1.

Morrisette received five strong innings of pitching from Wayne Chambers Monday night as he allowed only one hit, struck out six and walked five. Tim Brillo pitched the final two innings.

Meanwhile, Morrisette pounded out 13 hits to win going away.

Morrisette exploded for six runs in the second inning when it sent 10 men to the plate.

Chris Ricciuti started it off with a triple. Billy McDougal walked and Eddie Flavin singled home Ricciuti. Chambers singled to center scoring McDougal and Steve Minichiello singled to drive in Flavin. Dan Biagini drove in two with a long triple. Rob McDonald walked and Ron Fletcher drove in Biagini with a sacrifice fly.

Morrisette added a run in the third when McDougal and Flavin singled and McDougal scored on a fielders choice.

The winners scored three times in the fourth when Biagini reached on an error, Fletcher tripled, McDougal singled and Flavin doubled.

Flavin went 3-for-4 including a double and had two RBI. McDougal went 3-for-3 with a walk, a stolen base, an RBI and three runs scored. Biagini had a double and triple and two RBI. Chambers drove in two runs, Minichiello had an RBI with a single, Fletcher drove in two with a triple and sacrifice fly and Mike Mullaney had a single.

Sunday Mass. Truck's Mike Marini defeated Morrisette for the third time this season, giving up only three hits, striking out two and walking three. He also had two hits, including a run-scoring triple.

Larry Taglieri, Morrisette's top pitcher, ran into problems, although not all were his fault, in the third, fourth and fifth innings.

Morrisette led, 1-0, on Minichiello's triple and Biagini's sacrifice fly in the first. Mullaney singled to start the inning but was thrown out trying to steal.

Mass. Truck tied it in the third. Greg Ondrick singled and when Taglieri threw to first, the ball went off Ricciuti's glove and Ondrick went to third. He scored on a Brian Lynch single.

In the fourth, with one out, Mass. Truck took the lead with a two-base error resulting in a run. In the fifth a controversial balk was called on Taglieri with runners on first and third and two outs, scoring the third run. This appeared to upset Taglieri and he lost some of his stuff the rest of the way.

Taglieri (8-2) had his strikeout pitch working as he struck out 11 and walked only one. However, he gave up a career-high 15 hits, including many infield hits.

Mass. Truck played errorless ball and the infield made several great plays, especially first baseman Jay Miller.

The officers are:

Speaker at the meeting was City Planning Director, Richard Meade who explained the federal government Tourism Study Grant of $15,000 which was arranged through the efforts of Mayor Francis McCauley, Assistant Planning Director, Angelito Santos, Loren Strout and Meade.

Strout spoke of the accomplishments of the association over the past five years and of future plans to increase tourism in the city.

Among the future plans is the introduction of a trolley bus system to be in operation in 1988. The trolley system would encourage tourists to park where they are staying or in public parking areas and see Quincy by trolley to cut back the traffic flow on busy streets.

A committee which was formed to study the Quincy Historic Trail has resulted in a new map to be included in the new brochure. The new brochure of Quincy's Historic Trail is historically correct and can be updated every year.

The committee has also suggested that new signs which are easier to read be erected along the Historic Trail.

The Quincy Tourism Association, Inc. has been in operation for five years without financial help from the city of Quincy.

WEEK OF: July 30

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK
You're assertive and enthusiastic, and your positive nature earns you admiration from various quarters. You're less than pleased when you don't get your own way. Teamwork is the theme of the next 12 months. A key partnership may be launched by early to mid-1988.

AQUARIUS — January 21 - February 19
The month ends on a romantically upbeat note, and early August sees you embarking on a pet project. Travel experiences are hectic and rewarding, offering opportunities for interesting distractions.

PISCES — February 20 - March 20
Week offers favorable opportunities for bargain hunting and bartering. New interests are also spotlighted, perhaps related to health and fitness. Yoga and tap dancing are among the possibilities.

ARIES — March 21 - April 20
Aries takes a supporting role this week, helping friends and relatives achieve their dreams. Socially, this may prove the liveliest week of the summer -- you're a busy host, a popular guest.

I desire to be with you in eternal glory. Thank You for Your mercy towards me and all who are dear to me. Must be said three days in succession, after the three days favor or grace will be attained, even if it appears to be of difficult nature. Reikard Issues Reminder On Condo-Conversion

Jane Reikard, executive secretary of the Rent Grievance Board, reminds both landlords-owners and tenants that there is a condo-conversion law in effect in Massachusetts and applies to cities and towns where there is no local ordinance in place, including Quincy.

Reikard said it appears that some owners either do not know this law, passed Nov. 30, 1983, or they are not adhering to the terms of it. She added that she hopes that the owners are not willfully trying to circumvent the law and thereby denying the tenants their rights.

According to Reikard, there are very strict rules on how an owner notifies the occupants that the unit is being converted to condos and strict rules on the tenants' right following notice of the conversion.

Reikard said tenants:

- have the first right of refusal to buy their units.
- have a notice period to quit of one year to two years depending on age and circumstances.
- get moving expenses paid by the owner.

Furthermore, Reikard said rent increases are limited to 10 per cent or the amount of the increase in the Federal Consumer Price index from the previous year of conversion.

Examples of questionable procedures taking place in Quincy are:

1. Changing a four-family to a three-family, therefore circumventing the condo-conversion law which does not apply to a building with three units or less.

2. Changing the use of the building without complying with the zoning ordinance changes.

3. No proper notice to tenants as stated in the condo law.

4. Using a building that was built for condo purposes as rentals first and then converting those rental units to condo units and not offering the tenants their rights under the condo law.

5. Allowing units to stand idle for a year without notification to tenants as to what their status is. Meanwhile, tenants all over Quincy are looking for housing and homeless people are wandering the streets while these units stand idle.

6. Original owners not notifying investment buyers of units of the tenants' rights under the condo law, thereby creating problems and confusion for both tenants and investors.

Reikard said there are penalties of fine or imprisonment for not adhering to the condo law.

Any tenants or landlord owners who do not know the condo-conversion law of 1983 can call the Rent Grievance Board at 773-1380 ext. 327.

30 Still Without Homes After Sea St. Fire

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

At least 30 people, forced from their apartments after a fire gutted an apartment building at 151 Sea St. in Merrymount in June, are still without permanent homes, according to Lee Cram, coordinator for a church-based relief fund.

The fire is now under investigation by the state Fire Marshal's office.

According to Cram, 75 people were left homeless after fire caused an estimated $200,000 damage to the five-story building June 19.

Cram, who is coordinating the disbursement of a relief fund set up by Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, said at least 30 people have not found new homes.

She said $5,000 has been raised in relief funds.

While former tenants tried to relocate, Franklin Simon, owner of the building, has tried to dispose of the possessions they have left behind, said Jane Reikard, executive director of the Rent Grievance Board.

According to Reikard, who has been trying to help tenants find new living quarters, Simon notified about 35 tenants at a group meeting that they had until July 31 to remove their belongings or consider them abandoned.

On July 31, the tenants obtained nine temporary court orders to stop Simon from disposing possessions they could not take with them.

The temporary restraining order was issued pending a court hearing today (Thursday) in Quincy District Court.

Reikard said Judge Lewis Whitman issued the order after he was told by the tenant's spokesman that many of the fire victims had been unable to find a new home and had no place to store their possessions.

"These people are burned out victims, scattered far and wide," she said.

Reikard said some homeless tenants are living in hotels, motels, with relatives or in cars.

"They have no place to put these things," Reikard said.

She said a judge will decide today (Thursday) whether the order was just temporary, if it will continue or if a compromise has been reached.

Cram said relocation efforts have been hampered because there is no established emergency fire relief program in Quincy.

"When a large fire happens and many people are left homeless, the city has a responsibility to their citizens to have someone come in and open a (relief) facility," Cram said.

Cram, who applauded the relief efforts of the Red Cross, said fire victims need one central place to assemble after a fire to help them recover.

She said such a place would help the dispersion of information and would give victims support.

Churches, public officials and public institutions should be accessible so that fire victims "know where to go," in the event of large fire leaving people homeless, Cram said.

She said many Sea St. victims are "depressed, have medical problems and or family problems."

"As time goes on, it becomes harder and harder to pull them together and disperse information to them," she said.

Since the fire condemned the 46-unit structure, a group of former tenants has been meeting with representatives of the city, state and social service agencies to learn about available programs for temporary housing and replacement of food, clothing and furniture.

The group has been trying to contact other former tenants who have scattered since the fire.

Cram said tenants representing 14 units have not been heard from since the day of the fire.

Cram said the group wants to make sure that all former occupants know about their eligibility to participate in relief programs available for fire victims.

Former tenants may call her at 472-4198 for any information.

To make matters even worse for the former tenants, there has been "extensive vandalism" in the apartment building since it was condemned the day of the fire, said Carolle Varnerin, spokesperson for the tenant's group.

Varnerin said she and her group were told by building superintendent Joe Antonowicz that their belongings would be protected and that the building would be secured.

The building was protected by police for the first 36 to 48 hours after the fire but then went unprotected, according to Varnerin.

"Many things have been stolen," she said.

Padlocks were put on apartment doors that had personal property inside but were later "ripped off," she said.

"Many things have been reported missing. Every time I went back (to my apartment) something new was missing," Varnerin said, who lived with her husband in a motel for four weeks after the fire.

A second fire struck the apartment building July 25 and gutted an apartment unit that was spared from extensive damage in the original fire.

That fire was caused by arson, said Varnerin.

She added that she is worried that some former tenants, who she has been unable to reach, think their belongings and valuables are being protected, unaware of the existing situation.

The first fire is now under investigation by the state Fire Marshal's office.

Fire Chief Carl Valenti said the fire, which apparently started in the cellar, was "extremely hard" to fight because inadequate ventilation drove the heat back toward firefighters.

The fire involved the ceiling and floor of the first floor, extended to the partitions of the first and second floors and was stopped at the third floor.

Donations for the families, at least half of which have children, may be sent to the 151 Sea St. Relief Fund, Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, 227 Sea St., Quincy, MA 02169. Father James Curtin is pastor.

Donations can also be sent to the Quincy Savings Bank, 1200 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169, c/o James Chicoine.

McCauley Names Shipyard Site Task Force

Mayor Francis X. McCauley announces he has established the Quincy Point General Dynamics Site Task Force to look into the disposition of the site.

The committee is the result of the recommendation made by Rep. Robert A. Cerasoli at a meeting of city officials several weeks ago.

McCauley accepted the suggestions of Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro and Rep. Cerasoli for members to be appointed to the task force.

Those appointed to serve on this committee are:

Delores McCray, 7 Lawrence St., Quincy; Robert Allison, 28 Whiton Ave., Quincy; George Douglas, 18 Lawn Ave., Quincy, Barbara Morris, 47 Washington Court, Quincy; Joseph Hajjar, Jr., East Howard St., Wollaston; Donna O'Sullivan, 59 Hayward St., Braintree, Cerasoli and DeCristofaro.

McCauley said the shipbuilder's union sent him the names of two former workers who wanted to be on the committee and he forwarded these names to DeCristofaro and Cerasoli.

"They weren't included on the final list," McCauley said.

According to McCauley, Cerasoli and DeCristofaro have "a better idea on who would be good for the panel."

McCauley said the committee would work as a "monitoring unit" and meet with the General Dynamics management.

The mayor said the group is concerned with the long-term use of the vacant yard.

He added the committee would voice community concerns to potential shipyard buyers.

The group will meet in the very near future, McCauley said.

Remick's Closes But Name Will Remain

Remick's a downtown Quincy landmark for over 90 years, closed Saturday but the store's name apparently will remain here.

Daniel Shechtman of New York, owner of the department store, said he has granted the use of the Remick's name at the Hancock St. building.

"The name of Remick's belongs to the city of Quincy," Shechtman said, who added he authorized the use of the name at no cost. The arrangement also saves the expense of removing Remick's signs from the building, he said.

A&S Development Co. of Quincy, which purchased the building for $1.6 million last December, plans to refurbish the structure and build offices and retail condominiums

Alfred Remick founded the store in 1896. Shechtman and associates bought the store from Frank Remick, the founder's son and father of actress Lee Remick, in 1979.

Since its founding, Remick's enjoyed a reputation for quality and personal service.

During its history, the store was a leader among Quincy retailers.

Mayoral Debate Live On Channel 3 Sept. 17

Quincy residents will be able to view a one-hour mayoral debate between incumbent Mayor Francis McCauley and challenger, Councillor Joseph LaRaia live on Channel 3 Thursday, Sept. 17 at 8 p.m.

Both candidates said they welcomed the opportunity.

"I am looking forward to participating in the television debate," said McCauley. "The viewing public will see the candidates discuss the issues."

LaRaia said, "This debate gives the public an opportunity to listen and make a judgement on the candidates. I'm looking forward to it."

Categories of questions include: development/zoning, education, city finances, harbor pollution and clean up.

The format will include an opening and closing statement by the candidates, several rounds of questions and time for rebuttal.

Panelists include representatives from The Quincy Sun, WJDA and The Patriot Ledger.

Bob Gohl of Quincy Sun Ch. 8 will be the producer.

McCauley On Mend

Mayor Francis McCauley is on the mend and has resumed his door-to-door campaigning after suffering a broken right wrist and laceration while on the campaign trail.

McCauley tripped over a dog while campaigning door-to-door in North Quincy with his son Robert, 29.

"I am doing pretty well now," McCauley said Tuesday.

The mayor said the accident occured when he was glancing at a voting list and he stumbled over a dog tied to a tree.

McCauley said he lost his balance and fell to the sidewalk, injuring his right hand and wrist as he tried to cushion his fall.

Robert McCauley, a bank mortgage officer, drove the mayor to Quincy City Hospital where doctors treated the laceration and put a cast on from his hand to his elbow.

McCauley declined to identify the dog's owner.

McCauley, who is seeking a fourth term, is being challenged by City Councillor Joseph LaRaia.

Concerned About 'Houstonization'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a Quincy resident, I believe the upcoming mayoral election will be a referendum on urban development issues facing the City of Presidents as we head toward the 90s and into the next century.

In his first three terms, I have not heard Mayor Frank McCauley discuss the establishment of a sound rational policy on growth. Does Quincy have a comprehensive master plan for economic development? How does our present conservative Republican mayor stand on such a master plan and how will his opponent City Councillor Joseph LaRaia differ from him on this vital issue?

I am concerned about the Houstonization of Quincy. Seemingly endless overdevelopment in this city can do far more damage than too little growth. Condo plan after condo plan is proposed, approved and constructed. How much thought is going into the question of basic services which now must be given residents of newly-built condominium projects? How many additional residents can Quincy afford before the capacity to serve them is overloaded? Can Quincy increase its population up to a 100,000 and still maintain the same level of expected city services, or will services need to be curtailed, or tax revenue raised?

Quincy has grown much over the last few years but has the mayor grown with it? At a candidates night two years ago, Mayor McCauley was reported to have said he favored the problems surrounding overdevelopment rather than the problems surrounding a recession. Does he still support that 1985 viewpoint? And where does former mayor and City Councillor Joe LaRaia stand on this view of Quincy?

The question of a sensible urban development policy must be the next major concern to be debated and resolved by Quincy at this critical crossroad. Either, it can go the route of cities like Nashua, N.H. and San Francisco and plan growth rationally, or it can be swallowed up by its own economic revitalization hype.

Quincy has always been a city of single-and two-family homes but this tradition is suddenly under fire from high rise condominiums and luxury apartments and Quincy is becoming a city of State Street Souths, Presidents Places and Marina Points.

I respectfully disagree with the McCauley Administration summation that the quality of life of Quincy residents has been improved. Are working-class and lower-middle income folks better off today than they were in 1981?

I will be supporting the efforts for a new mayoral administration because I believe it is time for a change at City Hall. Six years is long enough and it is now time to get Quincy really moving again for all her people.

'Last Call' For Candidates

Deadline for taking out nomination papers is 5 p.m. After that you'll have to wait until 1989.

Deadline for filing nomination papers is next Tuesday, Aug. 11. But if you don't take them out by tomorrow you can't file any Aug. 11.

Right now, it looks like the only primary contests will be in Wards 3 and 5.

GILLIS

City Clerk John Gillis estimates the preliminary election in Wards 3 and 5 will cost between $16,000 and $18,000.

A citywide preliminary election would run about $44,000, he says.

It appears -- at this writing -- there will be no primary action for mayor, city council at-large and school committee.

But, the mayoral, council at-large and school committee races are only one candidate each away from a preliminary election.

It's highly unlikely that a third candidate will get into the mayoral ring with incumbent Francis McCauley and challenger Joseph LaRaia.

Still a slight possibility for a preliminary runoff is the council at-large field where there are six candidates for three seats.

Two of the seats of course are wide open: the one being vacated by LaRaia to run for mayor and the other by Richard Koch, Jr. who has moved to the Cape.

The six candidates: City Council President Steve McGrath who is giving up the Ward 5 seat to run at-large; seeking her fourth term, incumbent Patricia Toland, Tim Cahill, Michael Condon, Ron Iacobucci and Tom Koch.

McDUFF

There are also now six candidates for School Committee. Latest to take out nomination papers is John McDuff, Jr., head of the Quincy Animal League.

McDuff, however, says if a seventh school committee candidate comes along, he would step out so there wouldn't have to be a city-wide preliminary election. He would do that to save the city the cost of the preliminary election, he says.

The other school committee candidates who have nomination papers out are: incumbents Frank Anselmo, Steve Durkin and Christopher Kennedy and contenders Margaret Welby Ravmond of Bay View St., and Robert Jarnis of Warren Ave.

Sure primaries are in Wards 3 and 5 where both seats are open.

Four candidates are after the Ward 3 seat being vacated by John Lydon who is retiring from the city political arena. The four are: Lawrence Chretien, Howard MacKay who ran two years ago, Thomas McDonald and William Reardon.

In Ward 5, five candidates are seeking the seat Steve McGrath is leaving to run at-large. The five: Kevin Burke of Willow Ave.; Sabina Kavanagh, Quincy Shore Dr.; John Keenan, Lincoln Ave.; Charles Phelan, Jr. Kemper St. and David Tilley, Jr., Sachem St.

As of this writing the only ward councillor with competition is Ward 4's James Sheets. Philip Baldassini of Copeland St. has nomination papers out to challenge him. But it would take a third candidate to bring about a preliminary election.

Ward 1's Michael Cheney, and Ward 2's Ted DeCristofaro have free rides as of now. Neither has a challenger.

FOR OLLIE: Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North has some Quincy supporters which shouldn't be too much of a surprise. He's got them around the country.

RILEY

Riley sent a $100 check to the Oliver North Defense Fund with a note: "Keep up the good work, we're all proud of you. Best wishes."

Riley, incidentally, is former 1st Lt. George Riley, USMC.

Those Marines stick together.

And, while Frank Anselmo was filing his nomination papers for re-election to the School Committee, he said he had also sent a $100 check to North. Anselmo is an old Army man, World War I vintage.

James (Pete) Ricciuti, former Quincy Public Works Commissioner and executive secretary to Mayor McIntyre, reportedly also sent a nice contribution to North.

GOHL

Don won the shipboard singing contest with a medley of George M Cohan Yankee Doodle numbers. And, he and Helen waltzed off with the dance contest honors to -- a waltz, of course.

Don won a necktie and a deck of cards in case he wanted to take up riverboat gambling. And he and Helen were presented with a bottle of champagne to sip by candlelight.

NQ Alumni Theatre Car Wash Saturday

Cost per car is $3.

Special Thanks From Division 8-4 At Broad Meadows

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The year 1986-87 had been a year of "School Pride" for all of us at Broad Meadows Middle School in Quincy. As members of the graduating class of eighth graders, we want to take a moment and publicly express our pride at having been students at such a great school.

This past year, as many of you know, our school was featured on Channel 5's "Chronicle" Program because of our anti-drug music video, "Just Say No: Make Your Voice Be Heard."

We want to thank all the people who made the video possible: our teachers, administration and staff, Broad Meadows PTO, Ed Fiddler (Director of Community Television for American Cablesystems of Quincy) and his staff, Brian Smith of the Quincy School Video Dept., Boston musician Tony Pennist who wrote the "Just Say No" song for us, the Boston Arts Group, WCVB-TV, and all the celebrities who made a special appearance in the video. It was an experience we'll never forget!

Broad Meadows is an active school. We had teachers who really cared about our needs and who got involved in our activities. We also had a great administration with Mr. Eugene Creedon as our Principal and Miss Laura DiTullio as our Assistant Principal. They were always there for us and made sure that we got the best education that we could get.

Besides the music video, this past year was full of other great memories such as the Broad Meadows Youth Theatre productions, the Chorus and Band, the Louisa May Alcott Festival, the auditions sponsored by the Mass. Arts Collaborative, the Career Day, the Book Fair, the "Black Tie" Premiere Night of our music video, the special visits by our Mayor, Francis X. McCauley, the teacher/student video workshops, the Honors Night, the special visitors, Jay O'Callahan, Julie Thacker, and Carl Winderl (they came to teach writing), the visit from the children of Haiti, all our sports events, the Arts Partnership, and so much more!!

We shall miss all our teachers very much and we want them to know how important they were in our lives. To Mr. Creedon, Miss DiTullio and the teachers, we say thanks for preparing us to be the best that we can be as we move on now to the high schools. Special thanks also to the community of Quincy and most important, thanks to our parents.

As we move on to high school, we wish to thank once again all those who touched our lives and to say how proud we are to be members of the 1987 graduating class of Broad Meadows Middle School.

Former Quincy Author Presents Israel Reference Book To Crane Library

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

When Esther Mann Snyder was a young girl growing up in Quincy, she was one of the Thomas Crane Public Library's best customers.

Now a resident of Israel, she recently returned the favor by donating a book she has written to the Quincy library.

"Israel, a Bibliography," is a selected, appotated bibliography covering all aspects of life in Israel. A total of 330 pages, the book has over 1000 entries and sells for about $50.

"It's a reference book," said Mrs. Snyder, daughter of Rabbi and Mrs. Jacob Mann of Quincy, who is on a two-month visit to this country. She is also the daughter of the late Mrs. Leah Mann.

It was very enjoyable to give a book to the Quincy library," said Mrs. Snyder who made the presentation to library director Warren Watson.

It will be placed in a collection of books written by Quincy people, she said.

Watson also plans to purchase a second edition for the reference collection, according to Mrs. Snyder, a Quincy High School graduate.

She is knowledgeable about the book's subject, Mrs. Snyder started "from scratch" the Bar-Ilan University Law Faculty Library in Israel in 1970.

She is chief librarian of the law library which holds close to 60,000 volumes and serves a student body and faculty of almost 400 including advanced degrees.

"I like the university setting," said Mrs. Snyder, who met and married in Israel her husband, Kenneth, an American from Philadelphia who works in computers. They have two children, Lea, 13, and Sharona, 6, who have dual citizenship and are bilingual.

The family lives in a condominium apartment in the Tel Aviv area.

Mrs. Snyder said she enjoys living in Israel.

"I'm a Zionist and believe that Jews should live in Israel," said Mrs. Snyder.

"My parents were born in Israel, and it's like going back to my roots.

"My immediate family is in the United States, but I have aunts, uncles and cousins in Israel.

"The Manns are an old Jerusalem family."

Though sometimes a war-torn country, that aspect of Israeli life has not personally touched her, said Mrs. Snyder.

The men do have to serve in the army, until age 55, she noted, and her husband her reserve duty one month a year.

A country of 4 million people in an area roughly the size of New Jersey, Israel is religiously more fulfilling for a Jew, according to Mrs. Snyder.

"Everything is closed on the Jewish holidays," she said.

She likened the climate to that of California. "It is hot and dry in the summer, and cool and wet in the winters," she said.

Workdays are Sunday to Friday, according to Mrs. Snyder. The children go to school six days a week, but the hours are only 8 a.m. to 1 or 2 p.m., she said.

Some businesses close during the middle of the day because of the heat, said Mrs. Snyder.

Among the things she misses are hot fudge sundaes, she said, and leisurely Sunday mornings reading the newspapers.

When she visits the United States about once every four or five years, she said she is struck by the "massiveness and bountifulness" of the United States.

During this visit, she and her family have visited Disneyworld, Fla., New York, Washington, D.C. and Chicago.

Trips are also planned to Canada and Philadelphia.

But then it's back to Israel.

That's what she considers her home now.

"ISRAEL, A BIBLIOGRAPHY," written by former Quincy resident Esther Mann Snyder, was presented by her to Thomas Crane Public Library director Warren Watson.

Real Estate Inventory Starts

The City of Quincy has contracted a Real Estate Research Consultants, Inc. (R.R.C.) to undertake a complete data collection of all real estate in Quincy.

On Tuesday, RRC began a city-wide data collection effort in Houghs Neck, Adams Shore and Merrymount. It will continue by ward in sequence.

The two-year program is expected to be completed by Jan. 1, 1989.

All data collectors will have a picture identification card signed by an accessor and will undertake a complete measuring and listing of each property in Quincy.

This data collection, when possible, will be performed in specific neighborhoods. Prior to entering a neighborhood, RRC will make public those neighborhoods which the data collectors will visit.

This information will be recorded with the Board of Assessors, the Police Department, or both.

The Board of Assessors and Real Estate Research Consultants, Inc. will appreciate the cooperation of all taxpayers in the data collection effort.

A property inspection is very brief and insures reliable data on each property.

Inspections will include additions, demolitions, improvements, sheds, pools, porches, decks, garages, basements and attics.

Walk For Life Aug. 19

The walk will go through Quincy on its 14th day, Wednesday, August 19.

The Walk will begin on August 6, Hiroshima Day, at the Peace Pagoda in Leverett, MA and end on Labor Day, September 7, in Groton, Conn., where Trident nuclear submarines are built.

The purpose of the Walk is to clarify the relationship of the world's arms race to the many forms of oppression and injustice afflicting people in their everyday lives.

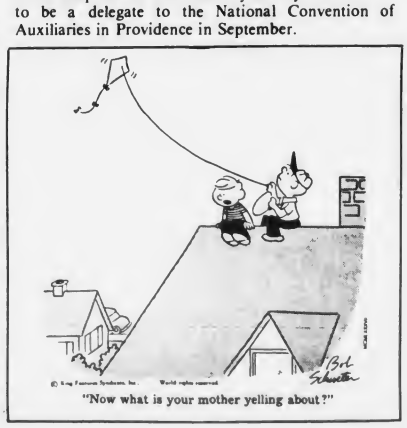
Tension Mounts As Sacco-Vanzetti Execution Nears

Aug. 5-11 1927 60 Years Ago

Tension gripped Quincy and other Greater Boston communities as the execution date drew near for Nicolo Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, radicals who were convicted of murder in the 1920 slayings of a paymaster and guard in South Braintree.

Quincy Police Chief Ernest H. Bishop ordered extra guards posted around the powder magazine at Sheep Rock in West Quincy, and the watch was doubled on the aircraft carrier Lexington, which was abuilding at the Fore River Shipyard.



Members of the Granite Cutters International Association struck for one day to protest the exceptions and their president, Constanzo Pagnano, sent a telegram to Gov. Alvin T. Fuller asking clemency for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Martin Rico of the Sacco Defense Committee and Artura Giovanetti, a New York newspaper publisher, addressed a mass meeting of granite cutters at Malnati Hall in South Quincy, Rico speaking in English and Giovanetti in Italian.

Quincy Police denied persistent rumors that 1,000 sticks of dynamite had been stolen from Robert E. Teasdale's magazine but they posted uniformed men at the main gate of the Boston Sewage System in Squantum at the request of Boston authorities.

Hospital Offers Swimming Safety Advice

Every year thousands of children die in drowning accidents, and many more suffer from the physical and emotional effects of near-drowning incidents.

Drowning is one of the major causes of death for children under the age of four, yet it is preventable.

- Never leave a child alone in or near a pool or body of water...including the bath tub.
- Young children should never be considered water-safe, despite their swimming skills.
- Access to a pool should be limited by locked doors or gates.
- Children should be taught good swimming safety rules.
- Do not let children rely on floaters, inflatable arm bands or inner tubes to prevent accidents.
- Keep toys, especially tricycles, away from docks and pools.
- Do not allow anyone regardless of age, to swim alone.
- During social functions, assign an adult to oversee the swimming activities.
- Do not permit children to scream for help, playfully. This may cause confusion when, and if, a real emergency situation arises.
- Do not allow a child to swim immediately after eating.
- Do not allow swimming during electrical storms.
- When boating, always make sure all passengers wear approved life vests.
- Never drink alcoholic beverages while participating in water sports.
- Always keep rescue equipment in a specific and easily-obtainable location.
- Never allow children to play with rescue equipment.
- People who own pools should be trained in Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation. A CPR instruction poster should be kept at poolside.
- A cordless telephone in the area will allow phone calls without leaving children at the pool area without supervision.

Many parents are enrolling their children in "water adjustment" and "water baby" classes to help with the acceptance of water, and to provide their baby with "survival" type reactions in deep water. The American Society of Pediatrics has provided the following recommendations.

- If parents wish to enroll their infant in a water adjustment class, it should be on a one-to-one basis with a parent or other responsible adult. Group swimming instruction should be reserved for children more than three years of age.
- Instruction should be carried out by trained personnel in properly-maintained pools.
- Infants with medical problems should be cleared by their physicians before registering for classes.

When a child has drowned or nearly-drowned, a thousand "should-haves--race through the minds of the individuals involved. While hindsight is "20-20" prevention is the key.

Quincy City Hospital offers a program of instruction designed to save the lives of infants and children, and specifically oriented to parents and persons who work with children. This highly-successful program, which is approved by the Executive Office of Human Services for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, is held as a six-hour workshop at the Hospital, during evening hours. The participants are instructed in techniques of Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation (CPR), recognition and treatment of common childhood injuries, general first aid, preventative measures, and more.

Additional information on the Infant Saver Child Saver Program is available by caling the Hospital at 773-6100, Extension 3017.

MARY JANKINS (right) of Shelton Rd., Quincy, quit smoking in July at a Freedom From Smoking At Work program, conducted by the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association. More Quincy Companies Restricting Smoking At Work

A trend is accelerating in companies located in Quincy, according to the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association.

More companies are developing policies to protect nonsmokers at work and encouraging smokers to quit their habit.

Superior Brands, the Quincy Mental Health Center, and the Quincy offices of State Street Bank and Trust Company have recently issued policies that restrict smoking at work.

All of them have also sponsored a seven-session Freedom From Smoking clinic, conducted by the Lung Association, for their employees who smoke.

State Street Bank sponsored three series of the clinic to accommodate the demand among smokers who wanted help.

Later this summer, the Massachusetts Department of Education in Quincy will sponsor a Lung Association clinic for their staff. A new policy issued for all state employees restricts places where smokers can light up at work.

At Quincy Mental Health Center, Mary Jankins of Shelton Rd., Quincy, said, "I quit because I wanted to be a model for my grandchildren." Although she had tried to quit smoking several times before, "This time I was really ready," she said.

"Everyone I know gave me so much support, and the reinforcement in the group made it easier than I ever expected," she said. "I reward herself for becoming a nonsmoker, she used the money she would save from buying cigarettes and spent on a clothes shopping trip.

"I love my new clothes," she said.

Other companies who want to help promote a nonsmoking workstyle can contact the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association at 2 Spring St., Walpole, MA 02081. The phone number is 668-6729.

The association has a consultation service to help companies develop and implement a smoking policy in addition to a variety of quit-smoking programs for employees.

Business Security
Part 3

How to put burglars out of business, the rest of the story.

Last week we discussed how to make your business uninviting to a burglar and how to make it hard for him to get inside. This week we will continue to discuss methods of discouraging burglars.

- Make it hard to find or remove valuable items

Safes and cash registers should be clearly visible from the street. Leave the cash register drawer open and empty after business hours. The safe should be of good quality and firmly anchored. Lock your check protector and blank checks in the safe. Avoid haing large amounts of cash on the premises. Make bank deposits at varying times during the day.

If good lighting doesn't scare off a burglar, it will make it harder for him to go undetected while he's working inside or outside the building. If possible, hide or lock in the safe high-value items (such as expensive rings or watches) that would be especially attractive to a thief.

- Make it likely the thief will get caught.

Consider installing a burglar alarm system. They range from the simple, inexpensive type that merely makes a noise in the building to the complex, expensive and silent type that's tied into a police station or security agency. What kind you need depends on several factors - how likely it is that a thief would be detected without one, how far you are from a police station, how the systems cost compares with the cost of the goods to be protected.

Get a system that either monitors itself or can be easily checked to make sure it's in good operating condition. Shop carefully and buy from a reputable company. If you have a good alarm system, you'll probably get a discount on your business insurance premium.

In lieu of (or in addition to) an alarm system you may want to hire a security guard or security service to patrol your business at night. If now, make sure someone (either you or one of your employees) is responsible for checking security of the business before closing time.

Record all serial numbers of large-denomination bills. Also, a small amount of marked "bait" money may help police trace a thief. Try to keep a good inventory of your stock, including serial numbers of valuable goods, theft prone items and equipment. This will help police trace stolen goods and help you in filing an insurance claim.

If you do become a burglary victim, cooperate with the police in every way you can, including pressing charges if they catch a suspect and have evidence to convict him.

L ocks for doors should be the deadbolt type. Doors should be heavy and solid. Protect windows with grillwork or heavy-duty screen.

O penings other than doors and windows-skylights, ventilators, should be protected. Fences should be high, sturdy and topped with barbed wire.

C over is something you don't want burglars to have. Adequate lighting - both inside and outside - a must. Don't stack boxes or leave a vehicle parked next to the building.

K eep valuable items out of display windows at night. Hide them or lock them up in a safe.

I nsurance on your business is something you mustn't be without. How good your security is has a bearing on your premium.

T rip up a thief by installing an effective alarm system, leaving cash register drawer open and empty, anchor safes firmly, record serial numbers of large bills.

U nderstand the importance of checking out potential employees before hiring, make one person responsible for checking security before closing.

P rotect your business and others by working to improve the effectiveness of Crime Prevention in your community.

MBTA Extends THE RIDE To Quincy

The MBTA Board of Directors has approved a contract to extend The Ride, the Authority's paratransit van service for persons with disabilities, to Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth and Milton.

"Based on our commitment to provide quality transportation throughout the MBTA system to passengers with special needs, I am pleased that RIDE service will be available in these four additional communities," MBTA General Manager James F. O'Leary said. "We will continue to work toward making THE RIDE available in all of the communities in the T district."

Provision of The Ride in the four South Shore communities will be carried out through a brokerage operation administered by Transportation Management Services, Inc. (TMSI) of Cambridge. This firm has considerable experience in design, implementation and operation of specialized transportation services and brokerage operations.

Highlights of the brokerage service duties assigned to TMSI include negotiation of contracts, coordination of services, scheduling, vehicle inspection, and driver sensitivity training. In essence, TMSI will serve as the coordinator of the MBTA's South Shore paratransit services.

TMSI will coordinate and negotiate contracts with three firms which will actually operate the service: Transportation Networks, Inc. of Brockton (Quincy service); Braintree Veterans Taxi, Inc. of Braintree (Braintree service); and South Shore Coordinated Transportation, Inc. of Norwell (SSCOOT - Weymouth and Milton service)

Total cost for services to the MBTA will not exceed $332,188 per year.

Since 1977, the Authority has provided specialized transportation services (THE RIDE) to the transportation handicapped population in the greater Boston area. This door-to-door, demand-responsive service now operates in 15 "core" communities and nine cities and towns in the Northwest area.

Information on this new service, and other MBTA services for persons with special needs, may be obtained by calling the MBTA's Office for Special Needs at 722-5123, TTY: 722-5415.

Man Dies In Police Station Cell

A man who was placed in protective custody for intoxication Monday afternoon died five hours later in a cell at the police station, according to police.

John Beggy, 38, whose last known address was 16 Commonwealth Ave., Boston, was found dead in the cell just after 2 p.m., police said.

Capt. David F. Rowell said an autopsy revealed Beggy had a fractured skull and that he died from complications arising from the injury.

According to Rowell, Beggy was picked up by police just after 9 a.m. Monday when a man flagged down patrol officers in front of the Woodward School on Hancock St. Rowell said Beggy was lying in the street with his head on the sidewalk.

The officers called an ambulance for Beggy, who was intoxicated, Rowell said. The officers managed to get Beggy on his feet and found a bottle of vodka in his pocket, Rowell said.

"He was clearly intoxicated, but there were no indications he was hurt," Rowell said. "They asked him if he had been drinking and he said 'quite a bit' or something to that effect."

Because Beggy did not appear to be hurt, the officers sent the ambulance away and took him to the police station and placed him in protective custody.

Rowell said Beggy was put in a cell and the officer on duty checked on him periodically.

Just after 2 p.m., the officer on duty noticed Beggy had vomited, Rowell said. When he went into the cell to check on him, he found Beggy dead.

An autopsy was performed Monday night but a complete cause of death was not known. Rowell said he did not know what caused Beggy's head injury or when the injury had occurred.

The officers who came in contact with Beggy had no indication that he was hurt, Rowell stressed.

"There were no signs of visible injury," Rowell said. "The officers had no reason to believe there was a problem other than his being intoxicated."

Beggy's death is being investigated by Quincy police and the district attorney's office. Rowell said he did not know when the investigation would be completed.

On Sept. 3, a 27-year-old Quincy Point man arrested after a car accident died in a cell after passing out and choking on his vomit.

PARTICIPANTS in the fifth annual Frontiers in Science and Mathematics summer program at Worcester Polytechnic Institute included Quincy residents Richard Coletta, Deanne Desantis and Sharon Goodman who watch a demonstration by Thomas Keil, professor of physics at WPI, of a spectrometer, a device that devides light into its component frequencies and displays them as a pattern of alternating light and dark lines, known as spectral lines.

N. Quincy Used Cars License Request Withdrawn

By JANE ARENA

At the Quincy License Board meeting Tuesday Scott Holbrook, doing business as Fitzbrook, Inc., 771 East Squantum St., withdrew without prejudice a request for a Motor II license to sell used cars from the lot of the gas station and repair shop at the location.

Holbrook explained that he had no plans to advertise the used cars, but that he wanted only to service his own Squantum customers. He also stressed that there would only be a small quantity of cars on the lot at any given time.

A neighbor of the establishment, Sally Wainwright of 179 Landsdown St., praised the shop but told the board that she objects to the license application because she does not want a used car business in the suburban neighborhood.

Former City Solicitor Douglas Randall, also a neighbor of the establishment, told the board that he too objects to the application. He said that the zoning by-laws which govern the area prohibit the sale of used cars at the location.

Randall also said that the shop has been doing major car repairs and that the by-laws prohibit this activity as well. He said that only minor car repairs are allowed at the site, according to the zoning by-laws.

Randall also told the board that he had counted 35 cars parked at the site on the morning of the hearing and said that this too was illegal according to the by-laws.

Randall said that he had tried to get something done about this situation when he was City Councillor 30 years ago.

The zoning by-laws have been in effect since 1943 and, because the gas station was opened in 1951, (under a different owner), there is no nonconforming right which would allow the gas station to sell used cars at the site.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It is a shame that we rarely read of examples of goodness in man and nations! Yet goodness does exist even though it is not often publicized.

Philanthropy exists all around us. Money, clothes, shelter and food are supplied by people to people every day. Granted, sometimes it isn't enough. There will always be greater need. But it IS being done. Goodness does exist ...

Churches of all denominations have vast networks of dedicated missionaries. Philanthropic foundations, formed by people for people, provide billions annually for the betterment of mankind both here and abroad. The American people - business corporations and individuals - have shown an unselfishness which is without parallel anywhere else in the world. Today they are not merely helping fellow citizens who are in need, but are sending millions overseas in private donations.

No, the world isn't all bad; the people aren't all bad. There is a lot of goodness, in spite of bad headlines ... It is true that the goodness in men will continue to encourage and sponser a respect for the dignity of man - always ...

Sheila McIntyre Not A Candidate For State Representative

Mrs. Sheila McIntyre will not be a candidate for state representative in the special election that is expected to be called early next year.

The wife of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre left the door open, however, to "the challenge of serving Quincy in a public position" in the future.

Rep. Thomas Brownell will be vacating his State House seat to accept an appointment by Governor Michael Dukakis as associate justice of Plymouth District Court.

In her statement, Mrs. McIntyre said:

"Many old friends and new acquaintances have urged me to consider being a candidate for State Representative from the Second Norfolk District. The McIntyre family has been committed to public service for many decades, and I am a part of that commitment and so I have discussed this with my children and friends.

"The people of Quincy have been good to our family, and I want to continue to serve our City and its residents. At this time, however, my personal, family, and charitable responsibilities are quite demanding of my time and must be my priority for the coming year. Therefore, I will not be a candidate for State Representative.

"The challenge of serving Quincy in a public position continues to influence me and should the opportunity occur in the future, I look forward to it with enthusiasm and dedication."

American Cablesystems Simplifies Channel Line-Up

Citing convenience and simplification, vice president John King said:

"American's commitment has always been, first and foremost, excellent service to our customers. With these changes, we are responding to their comments regarding channel positioning. In addition, our research shows a higher degree of satisfaction and ease of use when the broadcast stations are grouped conveniently on their channel, with the more popular cable channels nearby.

"The changes entail placing network and independent stations on their actual on-air designation number where channel capacity allows it. The cable networks deemed most valuable by our customers were then placed among the broadcast networks. Premium services will now be clustered in the mid-band area generating attention to the entire spectrum of cable service offerings."

During the first week in August, each American system is notifying their customers through the mail with a new channel card describing the changes. Extensive newspaper advertising, billing statement messages, and character generated announcements will continue to remind customers of the change. The September bills will also include two new remote control stickers.

"Naturally we expect some questions about the channel changes," King said. "Extensive training has been conducted for all of our customer service and technical staff, and we are confident that these changes will make cable viewing more convenient and user friendly for all of our subscribers."

City Should Improve Tourism Trade, Cahill Says

At a recent coffee hour at the Pagnano Towers seniors facility in Quincy Point, Tim Cahill, a candidate for councillor-at-large, spoke of the "important role that tourism can and should play in the rebirth of Quincy Square."

He said that "over a million tourists visit the city of Boston annually, with many travelling south past Quincy on their way to Plymouth or to Cape Cod, very few of which ever bother to stop in Quincy to explore our rich historical tradition."

Cahill proposed three steps that if taken would, he said, improve this situation so that merchants, store owners, and residents of Quincy could benefit from the vast amounts of money generated from a tourist based economy.

"The first step," he said, "concerns signage siting historical landmarks both leading to the city and within the city itself. There is a need for signs on the expressway both north and south of Quincy that acknowledge Quincy's rich history. It is equally important to clearly mark an Historic Trail within the city limits so that tourists can easily travel from one site to another.

"The second step would be to locate and staff a tourist center that would serve as a central location for all the city's tourist and historical activities. This visitors center could also help to centralize and coordinate the many different tourist and historic associations throughout Quincy. The center could also house visual displays of the rich history of the city as well as serve as a starting point for all city wide tours."

"The third and most difficult step would be to improve the appearance of Quincy Square so that it serves as a vital link between the birthplaces of two presidents and their final resting place. The look and feel of Quincy Square should be less modern and more rustic and historic.

"Developers and property owners should be encouraged to restore their properties to their original facade, or build new ones that reflect the historic quality of their surroundings. Store owners and merchants should be encouraged to take down the neon signs and replace them with a more traditional type.

"And finally the city, with assistance from the state and federal government, should work to make an historic trail that runs through Quincy Square an attractive place for shoppers, tourists, and senior citizens."

Gillis Commends Winfield House

During Tuesday's meeting at City Hall, John Gillis, chairman of the City License Board, made it a point to commend Mrs. Lena Strout, proprietor of The Winfield House Restaurant, Wollaston, which closed its doors Sunday after 50 years.

Gillis called Mrs. Strout "a solid citizen," and "a great lady," and said that in all its years of operation, the board and the city never had any trouble with The Winfield House.

We're Glad You Asked!

SHOULD THE CASKET BE OPENED OR CLOSED?

This question can only be answered by the family, never by the fineral director.

There are several options available to the family. The casket can be open during the hours of visitation and closed during the final rites or it can remain open during the final rites. It can also remain closed at all times.

The customs of the family's faith and the influence of their clergyman's thoughts may help determine what is to be done.

Modern psychologists tell us viewing the deceased helps the family to accept the fact of death, especially when it may have been sudden or unexpected. If, however, the appearance of the deceased cannot be made acceptable; viewing may possibly be harmful.

The family's own wishes on the desired procedure will always be the guideline for the fineral director at our firm. We respect the family's wishes on all particulars of the funeral services as we try our very best to provide a truly personal and meaningful service.

Mets Win Triple A Crown

The Mets wrapped up an outstanding season last week when they defeated the Yankees, 8-6, to win the Quincy Triple A Baseball League championship.

Marie Gallagher, coach of the Mets, had the last laugh on her husband, Mike, who coached the Yankees.

The Mets trailed by three runs in the first inning, but Matt Miller tripled and Sean Kenerson singled to get the ball rolling for the Mets.

Auperlee pitched a no-hitter and struck out 73 during the season. He also played well at third base.

O'Donnell and Mahoney shared the left field duties and came through with some big hits, while Coletti and Keohane played well in right field. Coletti had a big year hitting and Keohane played strong defense.

Klemp and Hourin sparkled in center field and made some outstanding catches.

At shortstop Picardi turned in several spectacular plays. Kenerson, a utility infielder, helped at all positions, making fine plays at shortstop and first base. He also carried a hot bat late in the season.

Welch played both infield and outfield and did a fine job.

Chan pitched a fine game against the Tigers as the Mets rallied to win with Ricupero getting a save. Miller had a base-clearing triple, Earle had two doubles and a single and drove in the winning run in the bottom of the eighth.

Granite City Finishes With 18-4 Record

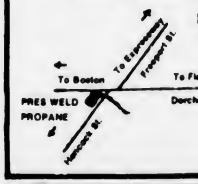
Granite City Electric, the Babe Ruth League National League champion, defeated Quincy Police, 4-2, and Local 1139, 16-4, to finish up with an 18-4 record.

Granite City has drawn a first round bye in the playoffs and Local 1139 will meet the winner of a Morrisette-Police game. The winner of that game will face Granite City in a best of three series to decide the National League representative in the city championship series.

American League champion Houghs Neck also drew a first round bye and awaits a series with the Elks-Golden Print winner.

Dave Gamsby (8-0) pitched eight-hit ball for Granite City against the Police, striking out five and walking three. Jeff Calvert's two-run homer in the first inning accounted for the Police runs.

Granite City pounded out 12 hits with Tony Anderlionis having a triple and double, Erik DeBoer a double and two singles, Wayne Sit two singles, Andy Colleary a double and Gamsby, Angelo Kyranis, Mike Picariello and Jim Munroe a single each. Vin Anderlionis, Corey Haddad and Eddie Costello played well.



For the Police Calvert had three hits, Jason Vega and Brian Doherty two apiece and Ralph Bevilacqua one. Shortstop Sean Cafferty, outfielders Jim Keneavy and Peter White and first baseman Jason Vega played well defensively.

Granite City had little trouble with Local 1139 and, as the game had no effect on the final standings, Local 1139, looking forward to the playoffs, rested some of its key players after the first few innings.

John Shea had two doubles, Pat Gallagher a double and single and Scott Hohmann and Steve Kohler a single each for Local 1139. Southpaw Scotty Dunn started pitching for Local 1139 and showed unusual poise for a 13-year-older Steve Sumpter did a fine job catching him.

Granite City had 15 hits as Gamsby went 4-for-5. Colleary had three line drive hits, a triple, double and single; Tony Anderlionis three singles, Deboer a double and single, 13-year-old Eddie Costello two singles and Kyranis a single. Costello played well in center field and Kyranis was solid behind the plate. Sit, Andy Veneziano and Dave Jolley also played strong defense.

QBRW's 50th Year 'Just Perfect'

By TOM SULLIVAN

The 50th anniversary edition of Quincy Bay Race Week enjoyed the best weather conditions in years and the only races cancelled were the inside races on the final day.

"Everything was just perfect and we couldn't have asked for any better conditions," said QBRWA president Sal Gallinaro. "The winds were just perfect, especially in the first four days.

"Some of the young people complained about us cancelling the inside racing on the final day, but the wind came up too quickly and it got too choppy. It was just too rough and we didn't want to take any chances with the young people and their smaller boats."

The largest number of boats in some time took part and, according to Gallinaro, there were excellent races all week. He mentioned the fine work of the patrol boats all week.

Seven skippers who competed in the first Race Week in 1938 were involved last week. Harry Carleton, who last year ended Joe Carven's five-year reign as Hustler champion and who won again last week; Bob Desmond, Carven, Bud Welsh, Doug Randall, Louise Hey Randall and Carl Wicklund all competed.

"The annual Marine parade was one of the most colorful in years," said Gallinaro. "There weren't quite as many boats as we hoped for, but there were some beautifully decorated boats."

As usual, the Town River Yacht Club had the most boats and Braintree was second.

The Germantown Yacht Club, an all-female club, took first prize for the best decorated boat.

There was one somber incident which cast a pall over the week's activities when Al Jago, fleet captain and a life member of the Squantum Yacht Club, former fleet captain of the Massachusetts Bay Yacht Clubs Association, and an active member for many years of the Race Week Association, died on Thursday after collapsing on a float at the Quincy Yacht Club.

"Al was one of our most active Race Week participants, and he will be sorely missed," said Gallinaro.

Gallinaro also paid tribute to Ray Regan, who has stepped down as chairman of the outside line committee after 18 years.

"Ray and his committee have done a tremendous job for us," he said. "Ray will be missed and he leaves big shoes to fill."

Also retiring after many years as Marine parade marshal is Al Shaughnessy.

"Al did an excellent job and he deserves a lot of credit for our successful parades," Gallinaro said.

Phelan Advocates Master Plan For City

Speaking at a neighborhood tea at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul O'Shea of 15 Bass St., Charles J. Phelan, Jr., candidate for Ward 5 City Councillor, advocated the drafting and adoption of a city master plan.

Phelan said:

"A master plan is a written document which furnishes a snapshot of the city in its present condition. It contains information on all aspects of city planning, such as population, economic activity, land use, traffic flow, public facilities and city resources.

"Most importantly, the plan contains a set of goals and objectives developed by the citizens in conjunction with the City Council and the Planning Board through extensive public hearings and citizen proposals. Based upon the information gathered and the goals and objectives set by the citizens, the plan indicates how the city will develop and projects what it will look like in the future."

Phelan then explained the benefits of having a master plan.

"The plan acts as a first line of defense against unwanted development by putting all developers on notice that their proposals will not be accepted unless they conform with the goals and objectives of the plan. Thus, a developer can use the plan to estimate the probable outcome of a particular proposal. This may prevent unwanted proposals from ever being presented to the Planning Board.

"Because the plan is comprehensive, it assures that zoning and subdivision ordinances, the legal tools by which the plan is given effect, are promulgated in an integrated fashion. This prevents different types of land-use regulations which act upon the same piece of land from creating differing uses. In addition, the plan also acts as a buffer between the Zoning Board of Appeals and special interest groups seeking variances that would undermine the effect of these ordinances."

In addition, Phelan said that to be effective, a master plan should be updated periodically. As a result, zoning and subdivision ordinances would also have to be updated to assure that they continued to give effect to the plan.

"The work of the City Council President's Task Force on Zoning was the first comprehensive review of zoning ordinances in over 16 years. In order to be an effective tool in controlling development, these ordinances must be reviewed more frequently. A master plan would create the impetus for such a periodic review."

Phelan indicated that the most important benefit of a master plan is its indirect legal effect.

"If we as citizens are to protect our neighborhoods from overdevelopment, we must be assured that our zoning ordinances can withstand the legal attacks of wealthy developers. When zoning and other land-use regulations are made in furtherance of the goals and objectives of a master plan, they are better able to withstand such attacks."

Phelan said that the indirect legal effect of a master plan has become increasingly important in light of the recent Supreme Court decisions on zoning.

Phelan said: "Although Nollan and First Lutheran were limited decisions, they signal that the rules with respect to zoning are changing. These cases indicate that the courts will more strictly scrutinize zoning ordinances to make sure that they are linked to a specific planning goal or objective. A master plan provides the link necessary to survive this higher level of scrutiny. Therefore, the probability of a developer successfully attacking a zoning ordinance that is based upon a comprehensive master plan is considerably diminished."

Phelan concluded:

"The recent zoning changes adopted by the City Council will certainly help in the fight against the overdevelopment of our neighborhoods. However, these changes should be coupled with a master plan to assure that they are reviewed periodically and that their effect is not diminished by the issuance of other land-use ordinances, the granting of nonconforming variances, or legal attacks by developers."

A lifelong resident of Wollaston, Phelan said he would like to see Wollaston remain a neighborhood of families.

He has previously spoken out against the proposed zoning D change which would have allowed for the construction of 10 story buildings in the Wollaston area.

Phelan feels that a master plan would be effective in controlling development and preventing proposals such as zoning D.

Braintree Wins Playoffs

Morrisette Eliminated By Mass. Truck, 4-2

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Morrisette Legion baseball season came to a disappointing end last week when it dropped a heartbreaking 4-2 eight inning decision to Mass. Truck of Weymouth in the rubber game of their semifinal playoff series.

Braintree, which finished fourth in the regular season, pulled a big surprise by winning the playoffs and qualifying for the state tournament. Braintree shocked first place Milton and eliminated Mass. Truck to make the states.

Morrisette apparently had the game with Mass. Truck wrapped up as it led, 2-1, with two outs and the bases empty in the Weymouth seventh.

Dan Overby, who had pitched outstanding ball, walked the first batter and then came the shocker for Morrisette. Bill O'Connell hit a looping fly ball to left and Eddie Flavin just missed making a shoe string catch. The ball was jarred loose and in an attempt to catch the runner at third, the throw was wild and the tying run scored. Larry Taglieri relieved Overby and got the last out.

The best Morrisette could do in the bottom half was a walk to Billy McDougal, who was erased on a double play.

Another error set up the go ahead run for Mass. Truck in the eighth inning. With one out Mike Marini topped a slow grounder to third and beat it out. He stole second and took third when the throw was wild. Chris Allen singled to drive in the winning run and the winners added an insurance run on a wild pitch and a single.

Morrisette, who had chased Weymouth pitcher Tom Spano early the previous night as it won, 10-3, to even the series, had trouble with him in the rubber game as he pitched four-hit ball. Ron Fletcher had two including a triple, Mike Mullaney had a double and Rob McDonald a single.

With Weymouth leading, 1-0, Morrisette tied it up in the fourth when McDonald reached on an error and Fletcher tripled.

Morrisette took the lead in the sixth when Mullaney walked, was sacrificed to second by Steve Minichiello, moved to third on Dan Biagini's fly ball and scored when McDonald got an infield single.

First year head coach Dave Perdios and assistant Bob Biagini, both former Morrisette players, did an excellent job under the guidance of manager Ray Cattaneo, who had coached the team for the past 17 years. Morrisette finished at 14-4 and finished second to Milton (16-2).

Morrisette will have 12 players returning next year and will lose only four. Leaving will be pitcher Taglieri, who in his three years had a 20-7 record with an ERA of under 2.00; Minichiello, a speedy outfielder, who led the team in runs scored with 20; first baseman Chris Ricciuti, who had several big hits, and reserve outfielder Greg Chambers.

Returning will be pitchers Wayne Chambers (4-2), Dan Overby, who was hampered by arm problems for a good part of the season and who finished at 2-0, and Tim Brillo, who showed promise in his brief appearances.

Also coming back will be catcher McDonald, who had 19 RBI and hit two long home runs, and shortstop Biagini, who led the team in most offensive categories with a .386 average, 27 hits, 10 for extra bases and 21 RBI.

Also second baseman Mullaney, who hit .321 as the leadoff batter; third baseman Fletcher, who had six extra base hits and led the team with 13 walks; infielders Bob Cinquegrano and Jim Ross; outfielders McDougal, who was the second leading batter at .365; and Eddie Flavin, who missed the first half of the season, and backup catcher Matt Donovan.

A tip of the hat goes to athletic officer Frank Osborne, who completed his 30th year serving the team in various capacities. His tireless efforts during the season and in the off-season, putting together an ad book program and arranging for the annual dinner for the squad helps make the Morrisette baseball program one of the best in the state.

Also doing a fine job was scorer Berger Ryan, who keeps the team statistics and handles the publicity.

2 Quincy Girls In Junior Olympic Games

Two Quincy girls, Claire McCarthy, a student at Central Middle School, and Diane Kelly, a student at St. Mary's School, West Quincy, are among six members of the Swogian Swim Club of Norwell who will compete in the annual Junior Olympic Games to be held in Syracuse, N.Y., next week.

The others are Laura Furman and Heather Casassa of Scituate, Jill Matie of Hanover and Dawn Mehan of Cohasset.

The six girls qualified at the synchronized meet in New Britain, Conn. They are coached by Betty Turner of West Bridgewater and Betty McMullan of Norwell.

Third Storyteller Program At Main Library

Lee Min Mo will be the featured storyteller at the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Center, Tuesday, Aug. 11 at 7 p.m.

This is the third storytelling program in a four-part series funded by the Quincy Arts Council.

Mo is a professional storyteller and artist. She was born in China and, as a child, lived in many parts of the world. Her resume notes that "her craft comes from a long standing family history; her mother still has countless tales to pass on. Stories have been passed down from her great grandma, uncles, aunts...from one generation to another." She transports her listeners into a different world with her dramatic and creative storytelling.

LEE MIN MO

Mo's repertoire consists of tales from the Orient and includes fables and tales of varying lengths and moods. "The Strange Screen" is an old Japanese tale about art and spirits and their transforming powers, whereas "The Mirror" is a silly short tale from long ago China.

Mo wants to share her tales with an audience of children age five and older and adults. The final program in the series will be on Aug. 25 when George Capaccio is the featured storyteller.

Over $14 Million In New Deposits At Hibernia Bank

South Shore residents may not have seen Vanna White at Hibernia Savings Bank's "Wheel of Fortune," but may have walked away feeling like a winning contestant.

On July 18, Mayor Francis X. McCauley cut the ceremonial ribbon to officially open Hibernia's new operations center and retail banking facility at 731 Hancock St., Wollaston. To promote the branch's grand opening, Hibernia offered customers who deposited at least $1,000 into a one-year term certificate a chance to spin an antique roulette wheel which determined the interest for the account. Rates on the wheel ranged from a minimum of eight per cent to a maximum of 20 per cent, possibly the highest rate ever paid on a term certificate.

During much of the promotional period, which ended Aug. 1, the lobby of the bank was crowded with new customers cheering one another on as each took a spin at the wheel.

What has all the hoopla meant for the bank? According to Vice President Wayne Blaisdell, the branch's new deposits totaled over $14 million after only 11 business days.

"This was far ahead of our projections for the branch," said Blaisdell. "I think people wanted our high interest rates as well as the chance to have some fun opening a new account. We wanted to do a different and unique promotion, and I think we succeeded.

JIM HENNESSEY (right) of Quincy won a 15 percent interest rate on his one-year term certificate playing Hibernia Savings Bank's "wheel of fortune" which determined an interest rate of between 8 and 20 percent during the grand opening celebration at Hibernia's new operations center, 731 Hancock St., Wollaston. At left is Hibernia Vice-President Wayne Blaisdell.

"Banking has become a very competitive industry. It is our intention to compete effectively in our marketplace both through interest rates and the types of services and products we offer."

Hibernia Savings Bank, founded in 1912, is a state-chartered, federally insured thrift institution which offers a wide range of deposit and loan products at competitive rates. These include savings accounts, money market accounts, commercial and consumer mortgages, and consumer loans. Additional offices are located at 263 Washington St., Boston, and 51 Commercial St., Braintree.

McCauley: Quincy, Boston, Winthrop Should Not Be Sludge Site

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Quincy, along with Boston and Winthrop, should not be considered as a possible sludge disposal site by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, Mayor Francis McCauley said Tuesday.

"Quincy, Boston and Winthrop have suffered enough from Boston Harbor's sewage and it's about time someone else should have to deal with this problem," McCauley said.

Last week, the MWRA announced 12 possible sites for the treated sewage, or sludge, generated by the cleanup of Boston Harbor.

The closed Fore River General Dynamics shipyard in Quincy was among those sites. The Quincy site is being considered for composting, burning or transferring the sludge to another disposal location.

The authority is under court order to cease dumping sludge from the existing Deer Island treatment plant by 1991.

According to McCauley, about 43 communities have contributed to the sewage and pollution problems in Boston Harbor. McCauley said the disposal site should be located in an area that "has wide open space" and is sparsely populated.

McCauley appeared on David Finnegan's television talk show Saturday night with Melanie Thomas of the MWRA and discussed the sludge disposal site situation.

"My position is that sludge has to be disposed but I believe the site should not be in Quincy," McCauley said. The mayor added that both he and Thomas agreed that Quincy has "suffered enough" from the sewage and treatment plant pollution in Boston Harbor.

If Quincy were named as the final site for the sludge disposal plant, McCauley said he would organize support against the siting, much like 1985 when support was organized to block a new treatment plant from being located on Quincy's Nut Island.

"We proved there was a better site then and we would do the same again," McCauley said.

If that attempt failed, McCauley said the issue woud be "fought in the state legislature." McCauley said the final option would be a lawsuit where the issue would be decided in court.

"We hope to present a case that will support our intention that there is a better site than Quincy.

"We want to protect the quality of life in Quincy," the mayor said.

Final decisions on the sludge disposal sites are not expected until mid-1988.

The final siting decision will have to be approved by the state Department of Environmental Quality and Engineering and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The authority's other preliminary selections for sludge management facilities are:

- Boston: Deer and Spectacle Islands in Boston Harbor, for composting and burning sludge.
- Lynn: near the Lynn Sewage Treatment Plant, for composting, burning or transferring the sludge to another disposal to another disposal location.
- Stoughton: off Route 139, one mile south of the Canton line, for composting or burning.
- Walpole: off Washington St. near the Norwood line, adjacent to MCI-Cedar Junction, or south of Route 109 off Medfield line, for composting, burning or disposal in a landfill.
- Wilmington: near Andover line off Route 125, for composting or burning.
- Ashland: northwest of Route 135 near Hopkinton border, for disposal of burned sludge in a landfill.
- Bedford: southwest of Route 3, east of Springs Rd., for disposal of burned sludge in a landfill.
- Malden/Revere: in quarry off Route 1 north of Salem St., for disposal of burned sludge in a landfill.

City To Collect Interest On Overdue Water Bills

The bad news is that the city will soon start collecting interest on overdue water bills.

But the good news is that residents with overdue water bills prior to June 30, can still pay them by August 31 with no interest charge.

According to Treasurer Dana Childs, the city did not collect overdue interest in the past because it did not have the resources.

But now with the computer system, it does have the ability, according to Childs.

Childs said that water bills dated prior to June 30, and not paid by the end of August, will be placed as a lien on the first half 1988 real estate tax bill due to be sent Oct. 2.

A 14 per cent lien charge will be added to the outstanding balance, he said.

No payments will be accepted between Sept. 1 and the issuance of the real estate tax bills, according to Childs.

Water bills dated after June 30 and not paid within the 30 days as required by law will be subject to a $1 demand fee and a 14 per cent per annum interest charge from the due date, Childs said.

ACTRESS JUNE LOCKHART, well-known for her role as Timmy's mother in the classic television series "Lassie," visited Quincy last week promoting the Purina Pets for People program. Shown with Lockhart is John McDuff, president of the Quincy Animal League, who presented her the golden Paw Award, and Mayor Francis McCauley, who presented Lockhart with an honorary citizen of Quincy certificate.

June Lockhart Visits:

Pets Good For Your Health And Security Says 'Lassie's Mother'

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Millions know her for her famous screen, stage and television roles but June Lockhart now stars in a new role and tours the country looking for supporting co-stars.

Lockhart, perhaps best known for playing Timmy's mother in the television classic "Lassie," visited Quincy Aug. 7 during her most recent tour promoting the Purina Pets for People program.

Purina Pets for People pairs qualifying senior citizens with homeless dogs and cats free of charge. The program makes the benefits of pet ownership accessible to persons 60 years of age and older by covering the adoption fee, initial veterinary care and a Purina pet-care starter kit.

The program also helps seniors select pets that are compatible with their lifestyles.

The Animal Rescue League of Boston coordinates the program in the Boston area.

Lockhart, in an interview at Mayor Francis McCauley's office in the new city hall, said owning a pet has many rewards, including health benefits.

"Medical research has found that having a pet to give some attention to and some affection to is really very soothing and very good for senior citizens, particularly those who come to be reclusive.

"If you have a dog you must walk it, you must get out. Of course if it's a cat, you have to be an athlete to change a cat (litter) box," Lockhart said.

The acclaimed actress added that owning and caring for a pet can lower blood pressure, reduce stress, and aid in the recovery from illness.

"A sense of security can come with it, too," Lockhart said.

For many seniors, a pet replaces loneliness with companionship, and apathy with a reason to keep busy and maintain a daily routine. For some, it promotes contact with others by providing a source of conversation and an avenue for new friendships.

Since the program began in 1985, there have been 1000 placements or "marriages" in the northeast area and 6,000 nationwide, Lockhart said.

There are over 100 shelters in 90 cities that participate, she said.

Lockhart said any area senior citizen who is thinking about adopting a pet should write or stop by the Animal Resource League in Boston for an application. Additional information can be obtained by writing the Purina Pets for People Program, Checkerboard Square, 61, St. Louis, MO 63164.

Any person at least 60 years of age can apply. Local shelters evaluate adoption applications on their ability to provide a pet with safe comfortable accommodations, regular exercise, a healthy diet and routine veterinary care.

In addition to promoting the adoption program, Lockhart also spoke on other topics, including the use of animals for medical research and the aggressive behavior of some pit bull terriers.

Concerning animals and medical research, she said "I think there has been some very good research done with it but it's something I haven't been involved in."

Regarding the recent attacks made by some pit bulls, she said she is "very concerned" about this situation.

"In California, I think they are going to find that for the most part, the pit bulls are owned by people who are either running crack houses or selling drugs.

"They've found them to be very aggressive watch dogs," she said.

During her stop in Quincy, Mayor McCauley presented Lockhart with an honorary citizen citation, and John McDuff, president of the Quincy Animal League, presented the Golden Paw Award to the delighted actress.

A copy of "Historic Quincy," a historic guide published by The Quincy Sun, was also given to Lockhart by McCauley.

Lockhart, who has two stars on Hollywood Boulevard's Walk of Fame, made her film debut at age eight in the Metropolitan Opera production of "Peter Ibbetson."

At 12, she played young Belinda Cratchet in the original motion picture version of "A Christmas Carol" and shared the billing with her parents, Gene and Kathleen Lockhart.

Following her Emmy-nominated role in Lassie," Lockhart starred in the hit series "Lost in Space" and "Petticoat Junction."

More recently, she has had featured roles in theatrical and television productions, including "Magnum, P.I." and "Knots Landing."

After her Quincy visit, Lockhart headed for New York and the next leg of her cross-country tour.

And although her work with the Purina Pets for People program will not win her an Emmy, it has definitely won her the hearts of many senior citizens.

Drug Testing In Ratified Police Contract

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

A substance abuse testing plan will be included in a three-year contract with the city ratified recently by the Quincy Police Betterment Association.

It is the first time that the city has included such a plan in negotiations with city unions, according to Personnel Director David Smith.

Drug testing language will be proposed in all contracts with city unions, Smith said.

"In light of circumstances in today's society, this is something the city felt is needed and should be included," said Smith.

The police patrolmen's association was the first union to reach a contract agreement with the city.

A consensus will be reached within 90 days on the specifics of a substance abuse testing plan, according to Smith. The police plan will be used as a model for negotiations with other unions, he said.

"We did a rough draft at the table, now we are clearing it up so it is acceptable to everybody," he said.

Smith said the concept will not be punitive.

Drug tests will be performed on persons suspected of abusing substances, Smith said.

Though still not finalized, plans call for someone found guilty of a first time offense to be disciplined, but the discipline will be held in abeyance if the individual seeks help, according to Smith.

More severe disciplinary action will be taken against second time offenders, Smith said.

Persons can refuse to be tested, he said, but will be subject to disciplinary action.

Smith said that Quincy has not encountered many substance abuse problems.

The topic of substance abuse testing was one of the "hotter" items discussed during the 60 days of negotiations with the police patrolmen's union, he said.

"It's a very difficult topic to address," said Smith.

According to Mayor Francis McCauley, the city's three year wage agreement with the police union calls for a 3 per cent raise July 1, 1987, a 2 per cent raise June 30, 1988, and 6 per cent increases Jan. 1, 1989 and Jan. 1, 1990.

The cost to the city over the next three years will be about $600,000, McCauley said.

According to Smith, the increases are similar to that of the last three-year contract with the police union.

The city will also be continuing discussion with the union on an appropriate definition and description of light duty for inclusion in the next contract agreement, McCauley added.

The mayor said he hopes to reach contract agreements with the other city unions in the next few weeks.

The teachers' union contract expires at the end of August, McCauley said, and the city hopes to reach a contract agreement by the time school reopens Sept. 9.

LT. NORMAND GOYETTE was recently sworn into his new rank by City Clerk John Gillis during ceremonies at City Hall. From left, are Gillis, Greg Goyette, Kevin Goyette, Mrs. Carolyn Goyette, Mayor Francis McCauley and Lt. Goyette.

City Moves Against Delinquent Taxpayers

According to Treasurer Dana Childs, those listed in the paid advertisement have 14 days to pay before the city takes its next step.

"Hopefully, some of the delinquent taxpayers wil pay their bills before we take a tax title on the property," Childs said.

That is the first step in forclosing on the property, according to Childs.

The treasurer said that this year's list is about two-thirds less than last year's.

He attributed that to more diligent efforts to collect taxes.

"We've tried to step up efforts on collecting all taxes," Childs said.

City To Receive Election $10,562

Quincy will receive a total of $10,562.30 to offset increased costs for coverage of extended voting hours for the March 8, 1988 presidential primary, according to State Auditor A. Joseph DeNucci.

"A 1983 law setting standardized polling hours statewide from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. means that many of the commonwealth's citizens will have additional time to vote," DeNucci said.

"It also means the cost of polling has increased for cities and towns."

It is the responsibility of the Auditor's Division of Local Mandates to ensure that cities and towns are reimbursed for any expenses incurred from legislative mandates.

All but one of Massachusetts' 351 cities and towns will share in a total of $374,344.69.

The town of Lincoln will again use volunteer poll workers and will incur no costs.

Lydon For State Rep.?

But observers think he is still close at ringside and might just hop back in.

LYDON

Not for the Ward 3 City Council seat. But for the state representative seat Rep. Thomas Brownell will be vacating to accept appointment as an associate justice at Plymouth District Court.

BROWNELL

"I'm just thinking about it" he says. "Nothing firm."

Observers think Lydon had his radar out tracking Brownell's appointment.

If he didn't, the timing of his surprise announcement he would not seek re-election and the announcement that Brownell was nominated by Gov. Michael Dukakis for a judgeship had to be one of the big coincidences of the year.

At the Monday, June 29 City Council meeting Lydon, who had officially announced his candidacy for re-election in April, announced he was not going to run after all.

On Tuesday, June 30, Brownell was informed by Dukakis he was nominating him for the judgeship. And, Brownell accepted.

There are even those who think Lydon knew Brownell was getting a black robe before Brownell knew it.

Lydon smiles at that.

He says he had heard the speculation that he knew "something was up" when he announced he would not seek re-election.

But, he doesn't say he really knew it -- or didn't.

Lydon says he would have to give the state representative seat some more thought.

"There are some good friends ...," he says.

He means some of those thinking of running for the Brownell seat are good friends of his and he would have to take that into consideration.

Among those friends are former Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly who says he will run for the seat; present Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney and Councillor at-large Patricia Toland, both of whom have indicated interest.

Sheila McIntyre's decision not to run for the Brownell seat would be a plus for Toland if she should run. It eliminates some serious vote splitting.

If Kelly and Cheney both run, it would split crucial Houghs Neck votes and possibly give Toland the advantage. Indications, however, are that Cheney will run only for re-election in Ward 1.

Lydon has served eight terms as Ward 3 City Councillor. When he announced he was taking himself out of the race he said he now finds "no challenge" in government.

"Government for me," he said, "has become dour -- it is overly concerned with regulation and has forced us into the role of regulators. I have never perceived myself in this type of role.

"In short, government is no longer a challenge -- the source of achievement it once was."

What government was he referring to?

"City government," he says.

Well then, could he find a challenge in state government?

"Oh, I think so."

MAYOR FRANCIS McCAULEY is still out knocking on doors despite the fractured wrist he suffered in that dog incident in North Quincy July 30.

McCAULEY

But he's doing things a little differently. He's decided not to carry a voters listing with him. Just campaign flyers.

Seems that His Honor was looking at the voters list as he walked from one house to the next. He walked into the yard, still looking at the listing, and stepped on a dog that was tied to a tree.

Worse, still, the dog was asleep and pretty startled. The dog started after him. McCauley was back peddling and tripped, falling and fracturing his right wrist. He also cut his hand as he tried to brace his fall.

"The woman who owned the dog was nice about it," he says. "She took me into the house and cleaned my hand. She thought the dog had attacked me but I told her it wasn't the dog's fault. It was mine.

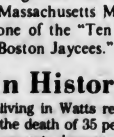
He recalls another incident in 1977 when he was campaigning for city councillor at-large.

He was carrying a voter list then, along with flyers, and hit his head on a door awning on Brooks Ave. That required seven stitches.

"Dogs and things like that are an occupational hazard," he shrugs although he goes out of his way to keep clear of dogs.

And just to be sure he does, he's now carrying only flyers with him and leaving the voters list in his office.



He has spent a lot of time in Wards 3, 4 and 6 and says: "by Labor Day I will have covered a good chunk of the city."

Reaction from residents he has called on?

"It's been a positive response," he says.

Cheney Suggests Spectacle Island For Sludge Facility

Ward 1 Councillor Michael Cheney has written to the chairman of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority Board of Directors recommending that a facility for composting of sludge be located on Spectacle Island, Boston Harbor.

In a letter to James Hoyte, Cheney stated six reasons to support his recommendation.

They included land area required, implementability, effects on neighbors, environmental impacts, transportation, history of the island and future use.

The MWRA recently announced 12 possible sites for sludge disposal, including the closed General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard.

Mayor Francis McCauley and other officials have opposed the siting in Quincy. A final siting decision is not expected until mid-1988.

According to the MWRA, 80 acres of land will be needed for a composting facility, Cheney stated. Spectacle Island contains 97 acres zoned for industrial use, he said.

Implementation would be faster than at any other location mentioned because the island is not being used for any purpose at this time, Cheney said.

A composting facility could be constructed so as not to interfere with the aesthetic beauty of Boston Harbor, according to Cheney who also downplayed any odor or noise problems.

Cheney said that constructing a facility on Spectacle Island would solve two environmental problems.

The first would be the treatment of sludge, according to Cheney.

The second would be stopping any further contamination of the harbor from leachate emanating from Spectacle Island which contains 35 acres of a former landfill site, he said.

Constructing a facility on Spectacle Island should require a proper capping of the site, said Cheney.

The transfer of residuals would be accomplished through barging from Deer Island and Nut Island, he said.

Quincy's Yesterdays

It Was Protest Time

Aug. 12-18
1954
33 Years Ago

Quincy folk were of a mind to protest.

More than 75 residents of the Wollaston Beach area met in the Wollaston Unitarian Church Hall to register disapproval of a license granted to Darwin Molino of Somerville and his brother, Mario, of 25 Winthrop Ave., Wollaston to open a Kiddieland amusement park at 825 Quincy Shore Boulevard.

On the motion of Councillor Alfred G. Helfrich, the City Council passed a resolution in opposition to a bid by Winfield L. Strout for a license to build and operate a motel at 845 Hancock St., across from Veterans Memorial Stadium. Strout ran the Winfield House Restaurant.

And the protests of nearby residents raised such a storm that the State Department of Public Works abandoned plans for a rest area off 654 Willard St., where tourists could park their cars and enjoy their picnic lunches at outdoor tables.

Tomato Basil Sauce Over Pasta

Terrific Light Summer Dish

If you're growing tomatoes in your garden this year, this tomato basil sauce over pasta is a terrific light summer dish.

During our recent European trip, we visited a friend of my daughter Rita's in a place called Daniente (about an hour away from Milan in Italy.) Etto, who lives in a breathtaking villa overlooking Lake Maggiore, enjoys cooking and virtually threw me out of the kitchen and said it was "his time to cook." I gladly toured the grounds of the villa while he prepared this tasty sauce. Fresh tomatoes are in full bloom in supermarkets. Here is the recipe. Etto used fresh basil which is sometimes hard to get here, but some of the markets carry it.

ETTO'S
CREAMY ITALIAN BASIL SAUCE
2 Lbs of plum tomatoes (very ripe) fresh basil (a good sized bunch chopped very fine)
2 cloves of garlic
olive oil (about ¼ cup)
2 Tbsps of butter
1 pint of heavy cream
Salt and Pepper

Cut up the tomatoes and chop the basil and garlic. In hot oil and butter, saute the garlic, tomatoes and basil and cook until tomatoes are blended and softened. Add salt and pepper to taste and then the heavy cream. Stir until well mixed and hot. Pour over rotinis or masticiolli or your favorite small pasta. We had it with a great big antipasto and that famous hard crusted bread.

Chow!

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

D Scott Deware

Robert Louis Stevenson once said: "There is so much good in the worst of us, and so much bad in the best of us, that it behooves all of us not to talk about the rest of us." We're sure you have all heard this much quoted saying. You probably have also heard: "If you can't say anything nice about somebody, don't say anything at all." There is much wisdom in this advice because much damage can be done by gossip - unintentionally or intentionally.

So much of what we hear about somebody is usually exaggerated. To repeat it only adds further exaggeration. Mark Twain once said that "A lie can travel around the world while the truth is still lacing up its boots."

Isn't it true that if we fill our minds and our time with constructive thoughts and endeavors there will be little time to busy our minds with the failings of other human beings? Isn't it true that BUSY MINDS don't have time to be BUSY BODIES? ...

520 Low Income Families Here To Benefit From Farmers' Market Coupon

Some 520 low-income Quincy families, along with at least a dozen local farmers, will benefit from the return of the Massachusetts Farmers' Market Coupon Program this summer to the Quincy Farmers' Market.

Thirteen farmers' markets statewide will be participating in the coupon program, which was launched a year ago by the state Department of Food and Agriculture in an effort to bolster sales at farmer's markets, while bringing fresh, nutritious fruits and vegetables to inner-city residents of the state.

More than $110,000 in private and public funds have been set aside for the program this year - at least six times the amount raised for last year's pilot project. All counted, more than 15,000 low-income Massachusetts households, as well as some 200 Bay State farmers, stand to benefit from this year's program.

Most of the coupons are distributed in the 13 target communities to families who qualify for assistance through the existing Supplemental Program for Women, Infants and Children (WIC), a federal program administered in Massachusetts by the state Department of Public Health. In three communities, the coupons are given to senior citizens through local elderly-assistance agencies.

Each recipient gets $10 worth of the bright green, serial-numbered coupons, which are redeemable throughout the season at a specified farmers' market in their area. The coupons can be used to purchase fresh produce only, and this produce must be grown in Massachusetts and sold by the growing farmer.

The Farmers' Market Coupon program is administered by the Department of Food and Agriculture and the Massachusetts Federation of Farmers' Markets, with special assistance from the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP) of the University of Massachusetts Cooperative Extension.

State Food and Agriculture Commissioner August Schumacher Jr., who developed the coupon program, said farmers involved in last year's pilot project saw a 25 per cent rise in sales from coupon redemptions. Many of those customers would return to the markets, even after their coupons had run out, he said.

Of the more than $110,000 budgeted for the state program this year, $68,000 was provided by the Massachusetts Legislature, $20,000 was donated by a private Oregon foundation which also contributed funds last year, and another $20,000 was set aside in the Department of Food and Agriculture's own budget. Various foundations and individual communities also have donated funds.

The Quincy Farmers' Market is held on Fridays from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Hancock Street Parking Lot, in back of the South Shore Bank in Quincy Center.

Quincy-Milton Cancer Unit Holds Fair

A three-day health fair was conducted recently by the Quincy-Milton division of the American Cancer Society. Organized by Public Education Chairwoman Margaret Wilson, the event featured four cancer education screening programs.

An estimated 300 people were in attendance.

The first day's program involved lung cancer screening and education. Peggy Madden, area president, administered lung-carbon monoxide level testing and introduced the lung machine to individuals unaware of the appearances of affected lungs. An estimated 200 people were tested. Of these 200, two individuals were nonsmokers as a result of the same carbon monoxide test administered one year earlier.

The second day, Helen O'Rourke of the "Reach to Recovery" program provided breast cancer mammogram education. She reached an estimated 100 people at the fair, further promoting mammography information to a target population of women in their 30s.

Oral cancer screenings were the big draw the third day, attracting an estimated 250 people. Doctor Richard Whitman and students of Boston University Goldman School of Graduate Dentistry provided oral cancer screenings and dental hygiene education for three and one-half hours. Proctor and Gamble Company donated "Crest" toothpaste and "Crest Oral Hygiene Kit" samples which were handed out to all participants in the screenings.

Located across from the oral cancer screening program was the cancer-reducing, nutrition-education program. The Health Development Corporation of Boston, and Quincy City Hospital combined efforts to educate the public on the benefits of a high-fiber, low-cholesterol diet. Health Educator Terri Ivanoss provided a computerized nutrition screening. In addition to determining the status of an individual's diet, the computerized program provided dietary guidelines and suggestions. A dietician from Quincy City Hospital was available to access each individual's computerized profile and suggest various high-fiber, low-cholesterol meals.

The health fair, provided at a free service, was sponsored by the American Cancer Society, the Boston Fitness Club, and the National Fire Protection Association.

For more information on health fairs, contact Margaret Wilson at 583-8515.

Phelan Files Nomination Papers

Charles J. Phelan, Jr. filed his nomination papers with the City Clerk and became an official candidate for Ward 5 City Councillor.

Phelan's nomination papers were signed by over 500 residents of Ward 5.

Phelan, 30, of 26 Kemper St., is a lifelong resident of Ward 5. He announced his candidacy for Ward 5 City Councillor at a campaign fund-raiser May 1.

In his announcement speech, Phelan said that Quincy should be committed to remaining a city of neighborhoods and families.

He also said that the future of Wollaston should not depend upon residential development, but upon the ability to attract families to live and raise children in the neighborhoods.

To those ends, over the past few months, Phelan has spoken out against the proposed zoning D change which would have allowed for the construction of 10-story buildings in the Wollaston area.

He has also advocated the adoption of a master plan to allow residents to control development and preserve their neighborhoods.

16 Tutors Receive Awards At Library

A Tutor Recognition Night was held recently at the Thomas Crane Public Library to recognize the volunteer efforts which have been given to Quincy's literacy program over the past year.

Sixteen tutors, all of whom have worked for over a year, received recognition awards.

They are:

Ellen Connors, Jean Dunn, Ginny Ford, Nancy Magee, Kay Noonan, Pat Sointu, George Bennett, Anita Bronstein, Marie Cappadona, Charles Karas, Linda McSheffrey, Patti Murray, Gertrude Powers, Joan Ramsay, Hyman Slavet and Valarie Burrows Stradley.

Special awards were also given to Library Director Warren E. Watson for his support for the literacy program in the library and to pastor A.H. Wismar of the Wollaston Lutheran Church who was instrumental in developing programs working with the Asian community.

Since the New Reader Project began in October 1985 over 6200 hours of service have been donated by volunteers to help both adult basic readers and people for whom English is a second language.

Re-affirm Commitment Toward Quality Education Cahill Says

Tim Cahill, candidate for Councillor-at-Large, spoke of the need to reaffirm a commitment towards quality education in the city, at a series of coffee hours at senior citizen complexes throughout the city.

"Our first priority," he said, "should be to establish a policy that would keep all elementary and middle schools open. I feel that enough schools have been closed.

"It is impossible to concentrate on quality education when the threat of school closings hang over both teachers and students.

"And in order to be fiscally responsible, we cannot speak of closing schools today in order to save on some operating expenses, while the need for more classroom space looms in the future.

"We must learn from the painful lessons of the town of Plymouth: that building and staffing a new school at any level is an extremely costly venture.

"Our second priority," Cahill said, "should be to see that all of our schools are properly maintained.

"I feel that the biggest obstacle towards improving morale is a deteriorating building. It gives everyone, students, teachers, and parents, a feeling of neglect when a building is 'run-down' and nothing is done to improve it.

"It also diminishes the amount of pride that students feel toward their schools."

"Pride in the schools can also be restored" stated Cahill, "by putting more emphasis on extra-curricular activities that ultimately keep children interested in going to school.

"It seems that athletics, music, art and languages are the first things cut out of a budget when communities become fiscally responsible.

"Yet by cutting out those valuable services to our children and students, we are actually paying a much higher cost down the road.

"Speaking personally, I can tell you that as a former junior and senior high school wrestler, my education would have been vastly different had I not had the opportunity afforded me through athletics."

"And finally," said Cahill, "we as government must seek out and form a lasting alliance with the business community, involving them in the struggle to achieve quality public education.

"As a member of that community, I will use any influence I have to get business behind the Quincy Public Schools so that we can move ahead without relying solely on tax dollars to improve our school system."

Responsible Babysitter Course At Quincy Hospital

Responsible babysitting is a serious business.

The skills, of successful babysitting enable the babysitter to temporarily replace the parents in the care of their children. The babysitter must know what is expected of him or her in the care of the children, and how to deal with unexpected emergency situations.

Quincy City Hospital offers a program for young adults, aged 11 and older, designed to prepare them to become qualified and responsible babysitters. Through instruction in such topics as nutrition, first aid, entertainment, child growth and development, home safety, infant and child care, and basic responsibilities of a babysitter, the students work toward certification.

Following six weeks of instruction, an examination is taken, and the students are presented with certificates of qualification. Parental permission is required for this course, and it is hoped that parents will take an active role in reinforcing the skills learned in the classes, and in discussing the health and safety topics with the students.

A new session of the course will begin at the hospital on Wednesday, Sept. 16. Information on the program, and a registration form, may be obtained by contacting Nancy Frame at the hospital, at 773-6100 ext. 3119, in the Pediatrics Department. A nominal fee is charged for the course. Registration is limited to ensure adequate instruction.

The hospital staff also reminds parents of the following information, which should always be available to the babysitter:

- Where the parents can be reached, with telephone number.
- When the parents can be expected to return.
- Special instructions regarding food, clothing, medications, bedtimes, and baths.
- A conspicuously-posted list of telephone numbers for police and fire emergency, ambulance service, physician, and the Poison Control Center (232-2120).

The babysitter is advised to remember the following tips for responsible babysitting:

- Keep all doors locked.
- Children should never be left alone, even for a minute.
- Keep in mind the dangers to children of matches, gasoline, the stove, deep water, poisons, falls, etc.
- Know the locations of all exits in the home (stairs, doors, fire escape, windows); fire extinguishers, and phones, in case of an emergency.
- Be serious about the job - No visitors or personal phone calls.
- Encourage the child's parents to leave written instructions.
- Relay messages accurately - write them down.
- Know the address and telephone number of the residence where you are babysitting.
- Know the correct way to answer the telephone when you are babysitting alone.
- Remember to call the Poison Control Center first in case of accidental poisoning.

Knowing how to handle an emergency is the next best thing to preventing one!

Work Underway On Church Steeple

Work began recently to straighten and restore the Quincy Point Congregational Church steeple. The steeple is about 10 inches out of plumb because the base on which it rests has settled over the years.

Mr. Carl Soderstrom, chairman of the board of trustees for the church, engaged the services of Walter McKinnon as engineering consultant and Herb Fulton as contractor for the project.

The project includes restoration of the steeple to its original appearance, the gilding of the weathervane and the lighting of the steeple at night as well as straightening the steeple.

The church embarked on a $70,000 fundraising campaign to which nearly 200 church families and friends of the church have contributed. To date, over $55,000 has been raised and the church is confident that the goal will be reached.

The Quincy Point Congregational Church will be celebrating its 150th anniversary beginning in September and the festivities will last throughout the church year. In September the celebration will begin with the rededication of the restored church steeple.

WEEK OF: August 13

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK
You're something of a contradiction. You have a strong yet gentle personality, and while you excel in a leadership role, you're not the bossy type. The year ahead finds you making a key decision that relates to career or education. Give as much consideration to the matter as you can.

AQUARIUS — January 21 - February 19
Being observant of trends in career can lead to advancement during this period. Watch tendency to volunteer too frequently. Older relative is much better humored.

PISCES — February 20 - March 20
Following up on hunches can pay off during this week. Intuition is quite sharp. It's important to verify information before planning your next move. Partner is more decisive.

ARIES — March 21 - April 20
Partner's tensions ease up, meaning your own life is becoming more relaxed. Good week for planning surprises, pampering a friend, and catching up on work-related reading.

TAURUS — April 21 - May 22
Delay may prove a blessing in disguise. Mechanical repairs require thorough attention. Friction on the job won't go away by itself. Romance situation remains upbeat.

GEMINI — May 23 - June 21
Friendship situation improves noticeably, thanks to your positive thinking. You're usually quite perceptive, but this week watch out for a tendency to read too much into harmless occurrences.

CANCER — June 22 - July 22
You have a sure way with words, this is an outstanding time for writing reports, speaking to a group of people, or penning a love sonnet. Don't hesitate to issue health-related reminders.

LEO — July 23 - August 22
Close friends of the opposite sex help make this an unexpectedly entertaining week. Leftover chores must be tended to before you launch a major project. Travel and culture blend well.

VIRGO — August 23 - September 22
A colorful week that finds you mingling with a diverse group of individuals and involved in some exciting assignments. Your exceptionally generous mood surprises friends.

LIBRA — September 23 - October 22
Self-indulgent streak surfaces and you may have to "reward" yourself for sticking with a diet. Peace returns to domestic scene. Delegating tasks is not worth the trouble.

SCORPIO — October 23 - November 21
Going after a goal is especially rewarding now that a key obstacle has been removed. New friend's generosity may make you uncomfortable. Home is a hub of activity.

SAGITTARIUS — November 22 - December 22
You win plaudits for your public speaking abilities. In friendship and romance, a less mysterious approach betters the relationship. New interest has a profitable angle.

CAPRICORN — December 23 - January 20
Curiosity works to your advantage -- this is a good week for carrying out investigations and asking questions. Current financial picture may be slightly more promising.

Brian Buckley of the Youth Commission thanked all those who assisted in making the race such a success. "What makes the Home Run such a great event is the community support," Buckley said. "Without the efforts of Sherry Mele, Jean Healy and all the people of the Wollaston Credit Union, quite frankly we wouldn't have a race.

Their efforts along with the many volunteers and assistance of the Recreation Dept., Park Dept., School Dept., Quincy Police, Bay State Ambulance, MDC Police, the Quincy Sun and Quincy Cable displays a true teamwork. And through that team effort we are able to help those less fortunate than us," Buckley concluded.

The Mount Wins Manet League Crown

The Mount, which finished first in the regular season, defeated the Quincy Nets, 47-38, in the playoff finals, capping an 11-1 season and winning the championship of the Quincy Manet Men's Basketball League.

Paul Donahue provided the early offensive spark with some fine outside shooting as both teams played unusually tight.

Mark Millane, as he has all season, led the Mount with 23 points on a variety of tough inside moves and accurate foul shooting. Wink Phelan and Jim Kelly were strong defensively and rebounding. The Nets, who had handed the Mount its only loss, couldn't sustain their usual potent offense and were led by Steve Belcastro's 10 points.

Members of the championship team were Millane, Donahue, Kelly, Brian Buckley, Fred Murray, Rick Rodzick and the four Phelan brothers, Wink, Jim, John and captain Ged. Gerry Mulvey of the Granite Rail was team sponsor.

Members of the Nets were Ed Carroll, Al Wolfe, Joe Deanne, Belcastro, Kurt O'Sullivan, Brian McCarthy, Joe Shields, Neil Beberman, Bill Burke and Captain Brian Cox.

Kevin Brogioli and Bill Murphy led the winners with 30 and 26 points respectively, while Marty Connolly scored 29 and Mark Jaehnig 20 for the Jaehnig team.

The final regular season standings: Mount, 9-1; Timmins and Nets, 6-4; Jaehnig Club, 5-5; Elm Street, 3-7; Clean Machine, 1-9.

Donahue Signs With Green Bay Packers

Quincy's Brian Donahue last week signed with the Green Bay Packers of the NFL as a free agent and presently is taking part in the Packers' training camp in Wisconsin.

Donahue, a 295-pound defensive lineman, last year signed with the New York Jets as a free agent but left training camp due to personal problems.

Donahue, a graduate of Abp. Williams High, admits to a history of drug abuse and said he started experimenting with drugs in high school. However, he has been clean for more than a year and he and his brother, Jack, another former drug abuser, formed the Heavenly High Youth Ministries, an anti-drug organization and the two devote their summers to discussing and describing the evils and dangers of drugs and alcohol.

Brian had been in contact with several NFL teams and he feels his background in drugs played a prominent role in his not being signed by any of them.

"You just don't know what goes on behind the scenes," he said. "Officials of one team will talk to another and I think they are afraid to take a chance with me."

Jack accompanied Brian to the Packers' training camp and spent last week and this week with him.

Morrisette Baseball Banquet Sept. 4

Morrisette Legion Post will hold its annual banquet for the baseball team on Friday night, Sept. 4, at 7:30 at the post headquarters.

Mike McCormick, a former Morrisette outfielder, will be the guest speaker. Awards will be made to the players.

Donation is $10 per person. The banquet is open to the public and Morrisette officials hope several Morrisette players from the 1940s, '50s and '60s will attend.

Anyone wishing a ticket is asked to call athletic officer Frank Osborne at 773-5436 or John Doucette at 471-0730. Returns must be made to Osborne at 98 Gilbert St., Quincy 02169 on or before Aug. 28. Checks should be made out to Morrisette Baseball.

The Morrisette team, seeking its 24th Zone 6 championship, enjoyed one of its best seasons this year, finishing with a 14-4 record and was second to Milton (16-2). However, Morrisette was defeated by Mass. Truck of Weymouth in three games in the zone playoffs.

Braintree, which finished fourth and barely qualified for the playoffs, surprised by winning it all and qualifying for the state tournament, where it lost to undefeated Zone 9 champion New Bedford in two straight games.

A highlight of the season saw Ray Cattaneo, who was the team's head coach for the past 17 years and who this year acted as manager and advisor to first-year coach Dave Perdios, attaining his 250th victory.

Perdios and assistant coach Bob Biagini, both former Morrisette players, did an excellent job this season and, with 12 of 16 players returning next season, they will have the nucleus of another strong squad.

Foley Sweeps Playoffs For City Championship

Foley started by defeating Boston Gear, 9-4, as pitcher Serge Wassiliew gave up only two hits and struck out 12 in the first five innings. Robbie Guarnieri had three hits and Wassiliew, John Gladu and Terry Manning two each.

Foley then out-slugged Houghs Neck Legion, on Gladu's two-run homer in the sixth inning. John Svagdis made two key defensive plays.

Foley edged Bryan Post, 2-1, in a fine pitching duel between Wassiliew and Bryan's Sean Donovan. Each had 11 strikeouts and three walks. Wassiliew pitched a one-hitter and Donovan three-hitter. Wassiliew, Scott Kohler and Manning had Foley's hits and Dave Cooper had the lone hit for Bryan Post.

Foley then defeated Bryan again, 9-4, to clinch the city championship, on timely hitting by Guarnieri, Wassiliew, Gladu, Kohler, Andy Renny and Brad Watkins. Manning pitched all the way for Foley, while Donovan made a game effort to keep Bryan in the game.

Dudek Optimistic He Will Make Broncos

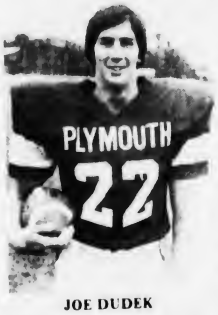
By TOM SULLIVAN

Former North Quincy High and Plymouth State College sensation Joe Dudek, who spent last fall with the Denver Broncos of the National Football League while on injured reserve, has high hopes of making the squad as a running back this season.

Dudek, who impressed during training camp, may have helped his cause last Sunday when he saw action in the pre-season exhibition game against the Los Angeles Rams in Wembley, England.

Joe saw action with the special teams and also carried the ball a few times. His longest run was seven yards.

Last fall he earned an AFC championship ring and he feels his shoulder injury was a blessing in disguise.



"If it wasn't for the injury, they probably would have let me go," he said.

Dudek is fully recovered from his injury, has put on weight (he now weighs 194), and has added speed. He feels he has a legitimate chance to make the team.

"I feel I'm ready for a job," he said.

Last fall he spent most of his rookie year playing the role of an opposing running back in practice and getting a chance to prove he belonged.

Dudek, who led North Quincy to wins over Quincy in

JOE DUDEK

1980 (three touchdowns) and 1981 (the only touchdown of the game on a 55-yard run), broke the NCAA touchdown record previously held by the great Walter Payton, while leading Plymouth State College to four straight New England Conference titles.

He was disappointed at not being drafted by an NFL team but opted to sign with the Broncos as a free agent rather than go into the USFL, which has since disbanded.

When Dudek arrived in Denver in May of 1986, he received a royal welcome. All three of Denver's network television affiliates responded to his arrival with mini-cams and microphones. He was spotlighted on all the TV newscasts that night.

He wound up on the cover of Sports Illustrated last year and was the magazine's darkhorse choice for the Heisman Trophy.

"The story planted in my head the idea that I could play in the NFL," Dudek said. "It really helped me. Instead of going in as a small running back from a small school, everybody knew me. It made me feel I belonged, that I wasn't just another number, although I took some kidding for it. The fans really rooted for me and helped me get through the long days. The fans even knew me on injured reserve. It was a good feeling."

Dudek made national television during the Broncos' victory over the Cleveland Browns in the AFC championship game. He was the guy on the sidelines with the clipboard recording the plays the Broncos decided to run and having the time of his life.

"It was strange being part of it," he said.

At the Super Bowl he was in the stands as a spectator.

"Not bad for a first year," he said. "I've seen it all, all that the NFL has to offer."

Next fall Dudek hopes to do a little more and be an active player for the Broncos.

Millane Takes First Step Toward Olympics

Michelle Millane, one of the finest athletes to come out of North Quincy High School, for some time has dreamed of making the 1988 Olympics in her specialty, the discus.

Michelle, who broke all records at North Quincy and Northeastern University, had high hopes of representing the U.S. in South Korea and her first step in that direction came recently when she competed in the Olympic Festival at Duke University. She was one of only two athletes representing the eastern U.S. invited to the festival.

Michelle's personal best in the discus is 166-6 but in her festival appearance last Saturday her best was a disappointing 148-7 as she finished eighth.

The winner, Laura DeSnoo of San Diego, had an outstanding toss of 188-5 and runnerup Kelly Landry of Gainesville, Fla., was close behind at 188-0.

Millane, who got her start with the Quincy Track Club under coach Geoff Hennessy, when she was nine, hopes to participate in the Olympic trials next year in Indianapolis.

"My goal right now is to be at the Olympic trials," she said. "Being in the Olympic Festival, I think, was a step in the right direction."

Hennessy, who saw her running behind her brother Mark (one of North Quincy High's and Eastern Nazarene College's top basketball players), decided to take her out to the track and try her out in different events.

She became a part of the Quincy Track Club in 1975 and proceeded to sparkle in the discus and shot put. While with the QTC, Michelle competed in the Arco Jesse Owens championships in Los Angeles and in the AAU nationals in Miami where she took the silver medal in the discus and the bronze in the shot put.

A 1982 graduate of North Quincy, she was a six-time Patriot Ledger all-scholastic, three-time New England champion in the discus and two-time champion in the shot put.

She continued to shine at Northeastern University from which she received a track scholarship. She competed in the discus, javelin and shot put as well as various competitions on the national level.

She majored in nursing at Northeastern and in the summer of 1986 she did a nursing internship in Ireland through Northeastern. While in Dublin, she competed in the National championships as a representative of Ireland and came in second.

"They really wanted me," she said. "They told me to claim heritage within at least three generations and I could compete. My grandfather was born in Ireland so they let me take part. I'm going back this summer, now that my nursing boards are over, to see 12 countries. This time it's for a vacation."

Michelle took second place in the ECAC discus championships while at Northeastern and seventh in the Penn Relays.

"It comes as no surprise to me that she was invited to the Olympic Festival," Hennessy said. "It is something she has planned for and it is a well-deserved honor. She did a remarkable job for me with the Quincy Track Club."

Her high school coach, Lou Tozzi, echoed Hennessy's sentiments. "Michelle was one of the finest athletes I coached," he said. "She was a very hard worker and a most dedicated athlete. She has had a tremendous career and she deserved to be in the Olympic Festival. I hope she can make the Olympic trials."

McCauley Wants Quincy Off Sludge Facility List

Mayor Francis McCauley has written to James Hoyte, chairman of the Mass. Water Resources Authority (MWRA) urging the MWRA board of directors to remove the city of Quincy from the list of possible sites for the disposal of sludge generated at the Deer Island Sewage Treatment Plant.

McCauley noted that the MWRA has named the General Dynamics Shipyard as one of 12 possible sites for the disposal of sludge.

The sale of the shipyard could be adversely affected by the prospect of the siting of an incinerator or composting facility for the sludge disposal on shipyard property, McCauley said.

The mayor stated that coastal communities such as Quincy and Winthrop have suffered with the sewage problems and the pollution of their bays and harbors for many years.

"Quincy has suffered long enough, it is time that the inland communities that have been a part of the problem for many years, become part of the solution," Mayor McCauley declared.

The Mayor urged Chairman Hoyte and the MWRA Board to remove Quincy from the list immediately and concentrate on the selection of one or more sites from among the inland communities on the list.

"The city of Quincy is ready to fight another battle to protect our environment," Mayor McCauley said.

He noted that in the last two years, city, state and federal officials along with citizens groups, waged successful battles to keep the new sewage treatment plant out of Quincy Bay, and to prevent the locating of the Deer Island House of Correction on Moon Island.

3 Quincy Beaches Unhealthy For Swimming

Three of Quincy's 15 beaches were considered unacceptable and unhealthy for swimming, according to water samples taken Aug. 4 by the Quincy Health Department.

Counts of over 200 are unacceptable and unhealthy for swimming, according to the health department.

Counts at Avalon showed 1100, 270 at Chickatawbut Road and 400 at Nickerson Beach.

Police Union Cites One-Man Patrol Car Problem

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The head of the Quincy Police Betterment Association said there is a safety problem with the new one-man patrol car system because of poor communication on the radio system.

But the acting chief of the department said the new patrol system is working well, and downplayed any communications problems caused in part by construction at the station.

The system was put into effect July 15. It was recommended in a report of the department last year.

"When you are out there alone, your two-way radio is your partner," said Richard Crespi, head of the police union.

"But the radio system is not up to par. Communication is

A woman police officer, who asked not to be identified, said that a fight broke out at a local establishment where she was on detail over the weekend, and she radioed for backup.

Though she did receive assistance, there was a problem with her call being transmitted on what she called an "antiquated" system

"I called for help, but no one knew," she said. "By chance, someone in the office at the station recognized my voice, knew where I was and sent help."

Acting Chief Paul Nestor, who is filling in while Chief Francis Finn recuperates from surgery, said he would investigate her complaint.

Nestor maintained that the one-man patrol car system is being carefully monitored and has worked well so far.

He said some complaints about the communication system were made at a labor management meeting.

"We are working on the situation," said Nestor. "The main problem is in the base station, and we're working on correcting that

"The superintendent of communications, Ed Lynch, feels that when the base station situation is corrected, there shouldn't be any problem whatsoever."

Nestor also said that some problems were caused by piles being driven into the ground near the communication tower.

The piles are for the foundation of the new building, part of the city's nearly $9 million renovation and addition to the station

"We're moving up the priorities in the radio part of the bond issue for the work," said Nestor. "We should have an answer in a week."

A quarter million dollars is earmarked for the base station to improve communications, according to Nestor.

"We hope the money will be moved along When that happens, there should be no problem with the radio station whatsoever."

Keenan Wants Ward 5 Traffic Problems Immediately Addressed

John F. Keenan, Ward 5 candidate for City Council, has written to the mayor, calling on the city to immediately begin addressing the traffic situation in the Wollaston Ward 5 area.

Keenan asked that Mayor Francis McCauley bring the Ward 5 situation to the attention of the traffic engineer, once one is appointed. "The Ward 5 traffic problem is in need of immediate attention," Keenan wrote, "and it should be the first item on the new traffic engineer's agenda."

"With Hancock St., Newport Ave., Quincy Shore Drive, and Beale St. all within Ward 5, the area bears the brunt of the city's traffic. When these streets get backed up, as they do too frequently, the traffic detours through the neighborhoods, disturbs them, and poses a hazard to pedestrians, both young and elderly alike.

"The trouble spots are obvious," Keenan stated. "One is the use of Clay St. by motorists looking to beat the Hancock St. lights, and others include the Elm Ave. and Hancock St. intersection, the Beale St. and Hancock St. intersection, the Newport Ave. and Beale St. intersection, and the use by motorists of sidestreets all through the ward as escape routes."

"The current traffic equipment in the Ward 5 area is outdated and inadequate," he said. "For instance, there is only one light at the Hancock St. and Beach St. intersection visible to motorists coming up Beach St. and Beale St. Intersections throughout the area need updated lighting, better synchronization, and improved pedestrian systems."

"To ensure the safety of the pedestrians in the Wollaston area, to preserve our neighborhoods, and to improve the traffic situation of the entire city, the Ward 5 traffic problems have to be solved immediately," Keenan stated.

EXTRA! Quincy Sun Car Care Guide

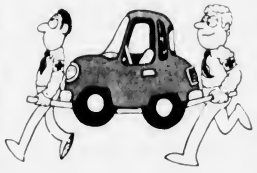
Healthy shocks, struts offer protection against bumps, jolts

Your car's shock absorbers or struts do a lot more than cushion you from the bumps and jolts of the road, they also provide ride control prevention.

When shocks and struts wear out, your car's steering can be impaired, allowing the car to drift dangerously into turns and sway around corners, and other suspension parts can be damaged by excessive bottoming or topping out.

Yet, many car owners aren't aware that their shocks or struts are worn and in need of replacement, because they wear out gradually over time.

In addition to the telltale signs of irregular or premature tire wear, poor handling, vehicle drift and sway and bottoming-out, there is a simple bounce test you can perform to see if your shocks or struts need to be replaced.



Position yourself directly over the wheel by the front fender or rear of the vehicle and press down as hard as you can. Release quickly and observe the vehicle body.

If the shocks or struts are functioning properly, the vehicle should bounce only once or twice before returning to a level position. If the vehicle oscillates more than this, it could mean your shocks or struts need replacing.

When replacing worn shocks or struts, the ride control experts at Gabriel recommend the new gas-charged products which offer an extra dimension of control and ride stability.

Gas charging produces a shock or strut that is more responsive to the road, providing a mild booster spring effect that greatly reduces body sway and virtually eliminates bottoming-out on severe impact. Gas charged shocks and struts also provide quicker, more responsive handling, even under the most demanding driving conditions.

New gas charged shocks or struts could be the solution you're looking for to improve the ride and driveability of your car and offer the protection you need against whatever curves, jolts or bumps the highway throws your way.

FUEL FORMULAS SAVE ON MAINTENANCE COSTS

Using gasoline additives has always been a matter of faith rather than certainty — we pour the additives in and hope that all runs smoothly! But now there is a proven way to eliminate the guesswork and save on costly maintenance as well.

The Quantum System of fuel formulas is designed to match the correct product with the specific problem that needs to be prevented or corrected, allowing for a much more concentrated and powerful performance than would otherwise be available.

The four Quantum formulas and their uses are:

- Quantum FP, to solve the problems of poor performance due to clogged fuel injectors with one simple treatment;
- Quantum OI, to improve octane, thereby stopping "knocks" and "pings" and increasing power;
- Quantum VS, to prevent valve wear-down in cars designed for leaded gasoline but now unable to get gasoline with enough lead;
- Quantum VS + OI, which combines two Quantum formulas, to replace lead as a valve wear-preventer and as an octane improver.

Available wherever auto supplies are sold, all four Quantum fuel formulas are unconditionally guaranteed by the Gold Eagle Company of Chicago, Illinois, currently celebrating their 55th year of quality.

TRUMPETS SOUNDED as the crowning touches were placed on 300 Crown Colony Drive at a recent topping off ceremony in West Quincy. A five-foot by eight-foot crown was hoisted to the top of the five-story, 125,000 square foot office building as the last steel beam was put in place. The first of three new office buildings planned for Crown Colony Place -- located at the intersection of Routes 3, 128 and the Southeast Expressway -- 300 Crown Colony Drive is scheduled for completion in late 1987. Shown here are John O'Hearn, senior vice president of Meredith & Grew; George A. Higgins, New England regional Partner of the Linpro Company, developers of the building; Mayor Francis X. McCauley, and trumpeter Bob Corviello, band director of Quincy High School.

Bill Would Restrict General Dynamics In Shipyard Sale

Sen. Paul Harold (D-Quincy) and other local legislators Tuesday filed a bill which, if enacted, could prevent General Dynamics from selling only the clean pieces of the 182-acre Quincy shipyard and leaving the dirty portions of the property alone under a waiver from the Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Under the present law, General Dynamics could sell about two thirds of the property for commercial or residential use and virtually abandon the property's polluted inner core for up to 15 years, according to Harold. The DEQE can waive clean-up responsibility for the property owners for 15 years, requiring only that temporary precautions are taken to prevent health threats. General Dynamics has not applied for such a waiver and the DEQE has not indicated that it would give one to the firm, but Harold worries that this might be the plan. "The firm recently hired a New York firm to study selling the yard in pieces.

"If I were General Dynamics," he said, "I might say 'Let's see if we can get some hard cash off the top from the easy parcels without hazardous waste, and then take the core of the shipyard and actually put it on the shelf.'"

Under the proposed law General dynamics would need the approval of state economic and labor officials as well as the DEQE to obtain a clean-up waiver. According to the new legislation no owner of any Massachusetts parcel of 25 or more acres that has employed 200 or more people in the past five years could get a clean up waiver until the secretaries of economic affairs and labor certified that the parcel was not needed for job creation.

A General Dynamics spokesman declined to comment on the legislation until corporate officials have reviewed it.

If the bill is enacted, General Dynamics may have to go back to serious negotiations with former shipyard employees who want to buy the entire portion of the property.

Peter Gwyn, head of the shipyard workers bidding on the property, said he supports the legislation because it demonstrates to General Dynamics that state officials are commited to full industrial use of the shipyard.

Site Work Started For $24 Million Building At Crown Colony

Vazza Associates has begun site work for their new $24 million 125,000 square foot office building at Crown Colony Place, a development site in Quincy.

According to Jim Gillooly, director of marketing for the company, "400 Crown Colony is set within a 175-acre office park positioned to be the most active address on the South Shore in the next several years."

Located in Quincy at the intersection of Routes 3, 128 and the Southeast Expressway, the park is master planned for two million square feet of commercial development. Current plans include a major hotel and conference center, health care and athletic facilities, day care and transportation.

Gillooly said, "While Vazza has undertaken a number of successful projects in the 128 area, few have had all the advantages of 400 Crown Colony -- exceptional expansion opportunities, proximity to Boston, rapid transit service at the nearby Quincy Adams station and excellent highway access."

The building will feature a six-story polished granite central tower housing a fully landscaped atrium and penthouse office suite. Typical floors offer 21,500 square feet and are designed for optimal individual tenant flexibility.

Scheduled for completion in the spring of 1988, a portion of the building is preleased to the Charles F. Murphy Insurance Co., the Trans-Lease Group and O'Connor & Drew.

The Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre construction was started in 1977; completed by volunteers in 1985; and, officially opened with Ruth Gordon's appearance on November 10th, 1985. It is the official home of Quincy's "Summerfest" Concert program, which originally started in 1983, and was held at the McIntyre Mall at City Hall. The theatre is under the jurisdiction of the Quincy Park and Recreation Board and has recently been the location for a wedding and cultural exhibits.

The Quincy South Shore Cultural Commission directs the "Summerfest" Concert program, now in it's 5th year. It is a non-profit organization. Its "Summerfest" committee is appreciative for the support it has received from in-kind services of the City of Quincy, direct contributors and the publics' overwhelming response. McCauley: 'Purchase Process Entirely Improper'

City Stalls MWRA Shipyard Buyout

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority has agreed not to sign a purchase and sale agreement for the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard until it has given Quincy 10 days written notice in advance.

City Solicitor Joseph (Jay) MacRitchie said that the city can seek an injunction against the purchase any time within the 10 days.

The stipulation, executed Tuesday in Suffolk Superior Court, Boston, by Judge Andrew Meyer, prevented a rumored signing of the agreement yesterday (Wednesday), according to MacRitchie.

Quincy had planned to seek a temporary restraining order, but MacRitchie said the city was pleased with the judge's action.

According to MacRitchie, there have been "clear violations" by the MWRA of the open meeting laws, as well as a state law regarding the legal advertising of purchases over $25,000 by any state agency, city or town.

"I think the city has a good shot at invalidating what has been done," said MacRitchie.

But MacRitchie said he could not conjecture if the MWRA would then start the process to purchase the yard over again.

"The process was entirely improper," said Mayor Francis McCauley, who was among city and state officials shocked to learn last week of the MWRA's plans to purchase the shipyard for a reported $49 million.

The MWRA board voted 9 to 1 to purchase the yard for use in moving construction workers and materials to the Deer Island Sewage Treatment Plant.

The purchase would increase the likelihood that, if the property meets all other standards, it would be a front runner for the burning or composting of sewage sludge for the Deer Island Plant, which Quincy officials oppose.

"The state has not been 'heads up' with us on this," said Anderson, who noted that the shipyard had not been on the board's agenda for the meeting.

"If this was such a wonderful thing for everyone concerned, then why were they so reluctant to have anyone know this, including the chief executive officer of the city of Quincy?" Anderson asked.

"The city has a good opportunity to make some defenses," he said.

McCauley said that he has written to the attorney general and inspector general raising legal questions about the agreement.

He said he has also written to MWRA board members asking them to reconsider their votes.

McCauley said the city is also suggesting that the MWRA is exceeding its authority by purchasing the yard's entire 185 acres when it only needs 35 to 50 acres for staging.

State Sen. Paul Harold agreed.

"They didn't use that much staging area for the invasion of Normandy," said Harold.

"If they say they took the extra land for incineration or sludge composting, they are in violation of federal and state government regulations regarding participation in site selection.

"If they didn't purchase the extra land for that purpose, they are wrong because they

McGrath 'Take Yard'

City Council president Stephen McGrath has suggested to Mayor Francis McCauley that the city consider taking the General Dynamics Shipyard by eminent domain.

"Clearly neither General Dynamics or the MWRA have dealt fairly with the city in regards to their recent announcement to convey the facility to the MWRA," said McGrath in a letter to the mayor.

"I feel this may be the vehicle to inject the city forcefully into this discussion in order that the city's interests may be protected," he said.

"I would suggest that the city solicitor look into the subject of a landtaking of the yard.

"Economically, the city could benefit as a landowner directing our own development of the yard and could even include some participation by Massachusetts Shipbuilders, Inc.," said McGrath.

"At the very least, an eminent domain action would force General Dynamics and M.W.R.A. to sit up and take notice of our opposition to the proposed sale.

"I would be pleased to discuss this matter with you further, particularly in regard to possibly hiring an appraiser to determine the value of the

Keep Pressure On Says LaRaia

At a Tuesday morning press conference, Councillor at Large Joseph LaRaia said it was important to keep the pressure on the Mass. Water Resources Authority which has agreed to purchase the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard.

"As a former mayor and councillor representing the district adjacent to the shipyard, as well as a candidate to return to the office of mayor, I feel it is necessary to keep the pressure on those who would divide the shipyard up for their own regional or statewide purposes," said LaRaia.

"We have a stake in the shipyard, the people adjacent to it and the city's overall economic future.

"Our options are few.

"Every day that goes by, we learn more and more about how much less defense we have against the court ordered mandate to the EPA and the state. We still must use whatever legal defense is possible since time is important to us as well as those who would take the shipyard for unacceptable purposes.

"I urge the mayor to impanel a "Blue Ribbon" committee of business, political and community leaders to open discussions on a regular and timely basis with the executive director of the Mass. Water Resource Authority.

"Paul Levy has said that he wants to be a good neighbor; we should not give him the option to do otherwise. The blue ribbon panel would also work to limit the use of the shipyard to a staging area.

"It is the lack of communication that has forced the city into this crisis, and we should not repeat our experience with General Dynamics over the last several years."

LaRaia continued, "General Dynamics has virtually been a non taxpayer in the city since their yearly tax bill of $2 million is offset by the city's payback of $2.8 million for an overvalue court judgement. We will now have to assume a $4.8 million deficit if the shipyard becomes non taxable. Our payback obligation will continue for six more years.

"The administration must work to seek monetary compensation from the state in lieu of losing tax revenue," said LaRaia. "The city is in no position to increase its tax losses in that magnitude.

"The loss of revenue from the closure of our city landfill and the additional cost of hauling it out of the city represents an increased expense of projected $4 million to the Quincy taxpayers.

"Finances are becoming an annual major issue," he said.

Quincy Opposes Braintree Incinerator

Mayor Francis McCauley announces the city of Quincy is opposed to the siting plan for the Clean Harbors Hazardous Waste Incinerator to be located in Braintree.

The Quincy Health Department's participation in the Local Assessment Committee, (L.A.C.), has raised questions about possible health and safety hazards to area residents, according to McCauley.

The L.A.C. is concerned about air quality and odor emissions from the proposed plant and the development of an acceptable evacuation plan, McCauley said.

have exceeded their authority. Now they are getting in the real estate business and are risking public monies.

"That's not their function. It's not necessary for them to purchase the whole yard."

Harold noted that he has worked with Francis Reilly and former shipbuilders at the yard trying to purchase the property in conjunction with the MWRA.

"The MWRA has pushed their partners out of the picture," said Harold. "Now the tail is wagging the dog."

Paul Levy, new executive director of the MWRA, said the purchase decision was forced by repeated delays in talks between General Dynamics and Reilly.

McCauley said that he spoke with Robert Stoker, corporate vice president and treasurer of General Dynamics, Aug. 6, and no mention was made of a purchase by the MWRA.

When McCauley later asked Stoker about the deal, he said there was nothing concrete until Aug. 10, according to the mayor.

"The whole thing was put together rather hastily," said McCauley.

The mayor said he is considering taking the shipyard property by eminent domain, as suggested by Councillor Stephen McGrath, but "it is not on the top of my list."

"We're gathering information," he said. "We're not rejecting the suggestion, but land taking is of a great magnitude. Would the state approve it?"

McGrath also said he would be willing to call a special City Council meeting to discuss the shipyard issue, and has informed councillors of the possibility.

McCauley said he has no plans right now to form a blue ribbon committee as was suggested by Councillor at Large Joseph LaRaia at a Tuesday morning press conference.

LaRaia, a mayoral contender, said the panel would be comprised of business, political and community leaders to open discussions on a "regular and timely" basis with the executive director of the MWRA.

"Paul Levy has said that he wants to be a good neighbor," said LaRaia. "We should not give him the option to do otherwise.

"The Blue Ribbon Panel would also work to limit the use of the shipyard to a staging area.

"It is the lack of communication that has forced the city into this crisis, and we should not repeat our experience with General Dynamics over the last several years."

Councillor-at-large Patricia Toland said the city should examine the financial feasibility of acquiring the shipyard by eminent domain.

Councillor Toland also said the city should "go to court, tie the whole situation up for a few years, until we receive lead pipe guarantees from the state that there will be no composting or burning of sludge.

"The city must rally together with our state congressional delegation so that Quincy will control the future of the shipyard," she said.

Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro, in whose ward the shipyard is located, said, "It's very depressing that this should take place when we're looking for something more positive to take place at the shipyard.

"General Dynamics has never had anything positive to do with the city of Quincy. They've only taken from the city of Quincy.

"This is just a continuation of the type of neighbor they've been to Quincy."

DeCristofaro noted that the council's rezoning of the property to Planned Development, which was proposed, will not appease the state agency. That designation would have given the council control over what goes into the yard.

"All our efforts to ... the land to PUD will go by the boards," he said.

Block MWRA's Purchase Of Shipyard, Says Toland

Councillor-at-large Patricia M. Toland issued a statement concerning the MWRA's intention to buy the Quincy Shipyard.

"Our first goal should be to block the purchase of the shipyard by the M.W.R.A. initially by gaining a restraining order or injunction from the courts," she said.

"The issues of public notice to the city by the MWRA as well as the executive session at which this course of action was proposed and voted are legitimate legal questions for the courts to consider."

Councillor Toland continued, "Our second goal should be to examine the financial feasibility of acquiring the yard by eminent domain. Then, we, the city of Quincy, could lease it and control it!

"A question that comes immediately to mind is how much is the yard really worth? Last year's assessment was for $22 million. Why has the state offered a figure of $49 million?

"We, the taxpayers, will eventually be paying those millions in the water-user bills we will receive from the M.W.R.A. This seemingly outsized figure should be challenged.

"Why does the MWRA need the entire yard anyway? It looks as if there may be other plans in the works we have not yet heard about. And that brings us to the subject of sludge.

She said. "Our third goal could be to go to court, tie the whole situation up for a few years, until we receive lead pipe guarantees from the state that there will be no composting or burning of sludge.

"One of the most serious problems associated with incineration plants is air ambience, i.e., the quality of the air surrounding the facility. It seems fairly simple to understand that such an operation should not be in a populated area, but rather in a remote area where the undesirable elements in the air become diluted as the air spreads itself thinner, thus reducing hazard to human life.

"The city must rally together with our state congressional delegation so that Quincy will control the future of the shipyard." Councillor Toland stated.

MEMBERS OF the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women, established in 1974 to address the needs of women, were sworn in during recent ceremonies in the mayor's office. From left, seated, are Marian Fitzgerald, secretary; Dorothy Poutree, corresponding secretary; Mary Beth Curran, vice chairman and Kathleen Butler, chairman. Back, Donna Reardon, Beth Ann Strenge, Janice Oldfield, Stephanie Coose, Kathleen McCormick, Shirley Shultz, Beverly Shores, Carol DeMerritt, Deborah Orman, Margaret Murphy, Arloa Webber, Trudy Buckley, Melissa Nichols-Goldstein, Laura DiTullio, and Jean Leslie.

Sheets Reports Sewer Fund Has Reached $250,000

Ward 4 City Councillor James Sheets reports that the Sewer Rehabilitation Fund has reached $250,000 since going into operation in March of this year.

He expects that the total in the account will reach $1 million by the spring of 1988. At that time work can start on the sewer system.

The plan for the rehabilitation fund was introduced by Sheets in the fall of 1986, approved by the city council and then enacted into law by the state legislature. Sheets indicated that the Quincy delegation assisted in getting the measure passed through the legislature, at that time, the only legislation of its kind in the state.

According to the legislation a one per cent fee is charged on all new construction, except single family homes. This one per cent must be paid before a building permit is issued. All funds must be used for sewer rehabilitation and appropriation is with the recommendation of the mayor and approval by the City Council. Councillor Sheets said only through this method would we ever be able to correct the sewerage back-up problems in the city of Quincy. He expects that $7 million to $10 million will be collected over the next five to six years.

$7.7 Million In New Construction

The Quincy Building Department issued 180 permits for construction estimated to cost $7,781,940 during the month of July.

According to the building department, $163,187 was received in permit fees, and $360 for public safety inspections.

A total of 87 dwelling units was added through new construction, and two units through alteration.

Permits were issued for seven, one-family dwellings estimated to cost $824,000.

One permit was issued for a two-family dwelling estimated to cost $100,000, and one permit was issued for 78-unit dwelling at 10-44 Winter St. estimated to cost $3,435,000.

Five permits were issued for garages estimated to cost $44,000.

There were 103 residential alterations at a cost of $986,000, 23 other alterations, $2,304,000; seven removals, $5,300; 16 signs, $30,780; and 17 miscellaneous, $52,860.

The totals for July, 1987 were $8,529,391.

All Beaches 'Swimmable'

Quincy's beaches were considered swimmable according to water quality samples taken Aug. 11 by the Quincy Health Department.

The health department considers beach water samples of fecal coliform counts of less than 200 swimmable.

Counts of over 200 are unacceptable and unhealthy for swimming, according to the department.

He's On Vacation

"I'm on vacation," Gov. Michael Dukakis was quoted as saying when asked last week about the break-off of negotiations that might have brought some ship construction and repair work back to the General Dynamics shipyard site.

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority just a few days before had made a power-play land-grab at the shipyard and Quincy had expressed well publicized fears that it is going to get dumped on by the state.

But don't bother the man. He's got bigger things like Iowa and New Hampshire on his mind. He's running for President, you know.

So, he's taking a little vacation.

And did someone say, "So what's new? He's been on vacation since he started running for the Presidency the day after he was re-elected to run the state."

The MWRA's sudden move to grab off every inch of the 185-acre facility for an estimated $49 million gives Quincy every right to be fearful of what might be ahead.

The MRWA originally said it needed only 35 acres of the facility for a staging area from which workers and materials would be ferried to Deer Island off Winthrop where the new sewage treatment plant intended to clean up Boston Harbor will be built.

Now the MWRA is about to gobble up the entire shipyard site -- 185 acres -- or more than five times the land it had said it needed for the staging area.

At this point the taxpayers of Massachusetts should be a little concerned, too. The state is going to be digging into their pockets for $49 million -- most of it for 150 acres of land that the MWRA really doesn't need.

Quincy suspects -- and with good reason -- that the MWRA isn't offering $49 million for a temporary staging area.

It fears the MWRA will turn around and build a permanent incinerator there to dispose of the sludge from the Deer Island treatment plant.

And then maybe next, the trash incinerator that Senator William Bulger and Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn have been jousting over will suddenly sprout there. Could Bulger resist state owned land in Quincy if it meant keeping the incinerator out of his backyard?

So, in addition to having potential health problems heaped on it, Quincy also loses an estimated $2 million in tax revenue because the state-owned shipyard site will be tax exempt.

And Quincy loses control over what may be built on the site.

It would seem quite obvious that General Dynamics really doesn't give a hoot about Quincy or its former workers who had hoped to preserve some kind of shipbuilding at a yard that built some of the most famous fighting ships and commercial vessels in the world.

General Dynamics, it appears, is quite happy to grab the money and run.

Talks between the MWRA and the former workers got no-where last week.

Peter Gwyn, head of the workers group, said it offered to pay the MWRA $15 million for 130 of the 185 acres.

Paul Levy, executive director of the MWRA, and the man who bulldozed the 9-1 vote by the authority's board of directors to buy the shipyard, said Gwyn "was asking for a giveaway and "What I said to him is that we're not a welfare agency."

That was what Governor Dukakis was asked about when he replied: "I'm on vacation."

We think the Governor should get back from vacation as quickly as possible and stay in Massachusetts for awhile and tend to his chores for awhile.

Right now, Quincy could use a little assurance that we have nothing to fear and an indication that our Governor is really interested in our problem and might do something about it.

At least try.

Primary Day: Little Action

Preliminary Election Day in Quincy Sept. 15 will have many more voters at home than at the polls.

Only two contests: Ward 3 and Ward 5 City Council seats.

City Clerk John Gillis sees a "very light turnout" and thinks the results should be known within an hour -- maybe sooner -- after the polls close at 8 p.m.

GILLIS

There are 13 precincts in the two wards: seven in Ward 3 and six in Ward 5.

The city has a total of 39 precincts so voters in 26 of them won't be voting that day.

Four candidates are running for the Ward 3 seat being vacated by John Lydon who is stepping down: Lawrence Chretien, Tom McDonald, Howard MacKay and William Reardon.

Gillis estimates the Wards 3-5 preliminary election will cost the city about $16,000.

Which means the city gets to save a little money.

A city-wide preliminary election (mayor, council at-large and school committee) would run about $40,000, he says.

This will be the second city election using the new punch card-computer system that has replaced the old obsolete paper ballots.

□

ONLY 50 VALID signatures are required on nomination papers to become a candidate for city councillor at-large.

McGRATH

But the Stephen McGrath camp collected an estimated 1800 names and turned in about 1500 to the city election department.

But it wasn't done as a show of strength, says McGrath, who is leaving his Ward 5 seat to run city-wide for the first time.

"it was an excellent opportunity," he says, "to have my organization establish itself city-wide as soon as possible."

"And, it was an excellent way to introduce my candidacy city-wide."

McGrath says he collected some of the names himself. He has also been out knocking on doors three or four nights a week in Wards 3, 4 and 6.

He says he will cover all sections of the city before the Nov. 3 final election.

"It gives you the opportunity to see what is on people's minds," he says.

□

McGRATH'S good friend, former Rep. Andy Card of Holbrook is campaign coordinator for George Bush in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont and Puerto Rico.

BUSH

Card who was with Bush four years ago and later became a White House aide to Ronald Reagan, says Bush is definitely the Republican presidential frontrunner and that he is "very strong in the south."

Which, Card adds, may come as a surprise to Massachusetts voters who read only Massachusetts newspapers.

CITY COUNCILLOR Ted DeCristofaro has a proposal that deserves and will get a lot of support: the week of Sept. 13 be known as "WJDA Week in the City of Quincy."

DeCRISTOFARO

The Quincy radio station will be observing its 40th anniversary. Founder, the late James D. Asher put the station on the air for the first time Sept. 13, 1947. The station's call letters, JDA, are his ititials. The station is now run by his son James (Jay) Asher as present president-treasurer.

ASHER

DeCristofaro notes that "The station's contributions to the community through its public service announcements and countless acts of charity has meant a better quality of life for area citizens.

"WJDA's pursuit of excellence in broadcasting are recognized and truly appreciated. The station has made a valuable contribution to our area with the dignified, professional and, still caring manner."

"It is only fitting that suitable recognition and tribute be paid to WJDA as they celebrate this very important milestone -- their 40th year in broadcasting."

We'll be happy to second that, Ted.

TIM CAHILL, candidate for City Councillor at-large, is officially opening his campaign headquarters at 833 Hancock St. Thursday, Aug. 27 at 7:30 p.m. Everyone is invited. Refreshments will be served.

How Would You Rate Ronald Reagan's Performance As President?

JIM McDONOUGH, 23, unemployed, Squantum.

"Zero. If he had spent as much money on the people here as he has spent on the "star wars" defense plan, things would be a little better."

PAUL KURTZMAN, 19, Bank Teller, Quincy.

Quincy Getting A Bum Deal On Shipyard

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a Quincy resident, I feel the City of Quincy is being given a bum deal in regards to the recent proposed sale of the Quincy Shipyard to the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

The M.W.R.A. says the shipyard is ideal for use as a staging area for construction materials to be used in building two sewage treatment facilities on Deer Island. Apparently, the authority worked out a deal of sorts with the town of Winthrop to keep construction truck traffic out of the town. So, Quincy gets the trucks and then barges.

The shipyard should remain a shipyard but this new development is bad news for any future Quincybuilt ships. First, we get the staging area and, then, how long before the sludge process plant opens?

The town of Winthrop will be spared the heavy anticipated truck traffic during the Deer Island construction period but barges will be constantly causing a nuisance to commuters who travel across the Fore River bridge. The bridge will be opening so much that portions of Route 3-A in Quincy Point as well as portions of the same road in neighboring North Weymouth will look like a long, a very long, parking lot.

Governor Dukakis is right when he says, "There's a limited number of (clean up) sites that are available" but the governor is wrong when he supports taking 135 acres of prime industrial property off the city's tax rolls.

It is time for Quincy's delegation to the State Legislature, Mayor McCauley and the Quincy City Council to band together to oppose M.W.R.A.'s plans tooth and nail.

I wonder, is the City of Quincy, possibly, being punished for bringing the original harbor cleanup lawsuit to court, and for the creation of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority?

Torchlight Parade In Support Of FDR's NRA

Aug. 19-25
1933
54 Years Ago

Quincy was preparing for a mammoth torchlight parade in support of the National Recovery Administration (NRA), a set of business codes designed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt to help bring the country out of the Depression.

"The first major engagement in the Great War of 1933," it was called by Newell A. Clark, who was styled a "general" in the NRA's penchant for military terms. Anna N. Swenson, a typist at NRA's Quincy office, was called "captain of the keys."

The parade, organized to show that Quincy is solidly behind employers and businessmen who subscribe to the NRA code, is to move down Hancock St. to South Quincy, then back to Merrymount Park for a mass meeting.

Parade marshal will be Commander Jerome L. Sullivan of the John A. Boyd Camp, United Spanish War Veterans; and honorary marshal will be Commander Frederick H. Bishop of the Massachusetts GAR.

Meanwhile, Mrs. T.L. Williams of 74 Edwards St., Quncy Point, won $10 first prize in a contest to select a slogan for the Quincy NRA with "NRA Saves USA."

Contest judges were Mayor Charles A. Ross, Miss Annie Prescott of the Quincy Patriot Ledger and William D. Shields of the Quincy Evening News.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

D. Scott Deware

One of the most widely violated axioms is "Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today." It has been said that it is only human to put things off ...

We at the Deware Funeral Home have found that people that have not "put off" making certain decisions concerning their funeral arrangements experience a peace of mind. They experience peace of mind in knowing that they, by proper planning, are sparing their families many traumatic decisions and financial burdens at a very difficult time. By pre-arranging the desires and wishes of one's funeral, burial and expenses can be specified to eliminate confusion, differences of opinion and difficult decisions on the part of family members.

We at the Deware Funeral Home have many free brochures and booklets available concerning pre-planning and pre-financing. Why not stop by today and pick one up? And remember we are always available for a complete, no obligation discussion ...

Prizes were donated to the top three entries by Friendly's Ice Cream, Baskin Robbins Ice Cream and McDonald's Restaurant.

Arts and Crafts Specialists Amy McElroy, Janice Ruane and Lisa Ventola coordinated the event.

How Not To Get Conned

No one would fall for a fraud if it looked like a fraud, right?

So most of the time it looks like something else -- a good deal, a business opportunity, a gift, or a chance to make a quick buck. Fraud works because people don't recognize it until it's too late. To stop fraud, you've got to know it when you see it.

For the next few weeks we will be discussing fraud and how you can prevent yourself from becoming the victim of it.

Know Your Con:

If someone wanted to take your money, how could he get it? The common crook might try a hold-up. But what about the uncommon crook? The con artist. The dishonest businessman. The cheat. They're after your money too. But they don't use a gun. They use fraud.

Fraud includes many different activities. A con game is fraud: a crook tricks a victim into handling over some money, and then takes off with the cash. Shady or dishonest business practices are fraud: They convince consumers to pay more money than a product or service is worth. Phony investment deals or fake business opportunities are frauds: they take advantage of a persons desire to make money.

With so many different kinds of fraud, it's almost impossible to tell just how big the problem is. But the estimates are shocking. Losses due to consumer fraud are estimated to be at least $21 billion a year.

Free enterprise. The open market. It's the American way. And most of the time it works. Unfortunately, it works for dishonest businesses as well as honest ones. Unscrupulous businesses don't mind taking advantage of an unwary customer.

"Let the buyer beware" is their motto - and you just might be the buyer.

Here are some good rules to follow all the time - whether or not you suspect a fraud.

- Don't believe something for nothing offers. You get what you pay for.
- Be suspicious of high-pressure sales efforts.
- Take your time. Think about the deal before you part with your money.
- Get all agreements in writing. Insist that agreements are in "plain English."
- Read all contracts and agreements before signing. Have a lawyer examine all major contracts.
- Compare services, prices, and credit offers before agreeing to a deal. Ask friends what their experiences have been with the firm or service in question.
- Check the firm's reputation with your Consumer Affairs Office or local Better Business Bureau.

If you follow these tips, you will make things harder for the swindler. And you could save yourself a lot of money.

Next week: Door-to-door sales and unsolicited merchandise.

Koch Asks Removal Of Wollaston Sidewalk Planters

Thomas P. Koch, candidate for City Councillor at large, has written to Mayor Francis McCauley requesting that the city remove the large planters on the sidewalks in Wollaston Center.

Koch noted that "not only are the planters unsightly litter collectors but also that they are obstructions to pedestrians as well as motorists trying to park their cars on Hancock Street."

The trees in the planters which have been replaced before are again dead or dying, he said. "To plant new trees in those large pots would be a waste of taxpayers' money," he said. "The pots bake in the sun all day and without rainfall, the trees have little chance of survival.

"If the people of Wollaston as well as the merchants of the Center insist on new trees, the trees should be planted in the ground where they will have a much better chance of survival especially in drought situations.

Public Service His Campaign Thrust, Says Condon

Councillor at-large candidate Michael Condon recently met with concerned Merrymount residents at the home of Arthur D. Burke, 44 Virginia Rd., and said that the thrust of his campaign would be public service.

"I am not interested in making shallow campaign promises," Condon said, "but rather in making a 100 percent commitment to servicing the needs of all the residents of Quincy. This means being visible, accessible and accountable."

Many of the residents in attendance voiced their concern over the deterioration of the Quincy school system. "Our children deserve the best possible education that we can provide," Condon said.

"We must remember that they are the future of Quincy," he said.

Condon added, "if elected I will work diligently with the Mayor and members of the school committee to help revitalize our school system. Our students and teachers will need to see a major commitment from both elected officials and the general public if we are to improve the quality of education in Quincy."

'Cleverness Will Not Save Us' Sermon At Bethany Church

During the summer at Bethany Congregational Church, Coddington and Spears Sts., Quincy Center, there will be one worship service at 10 a.m. in the sanctuary.

The Rev. J. William Arnold, senior minister, will preach the sermon Sunday, Aug. 23. His topic is "Cleverness Will Not Save Us." Melissa J. Mikami will be the lay scripture reader.

Lewann Semchenko, soprano, will be the guest soloist, with Peter E. Krasinski, Bethany's director of music at the organ console. Mrs. Semchenko will sing "New Songs" by Dvorak and as the offertory, "Come Ye Blessed" by J. Prindle Scott.

The sacrament of Christian baptism will be administered during the service to Timothy John Arnold, Jr., son of Timothy John Arnold and Debra Lee (Daily) Arnold, and grandson of Rev. and Mrs. J. William Arnold.

The church school is closed for the summer. However, nursery care is provided for babies and toddlers.

The worship service will be broadcast "live" direct from Bethany's sanctuary at 10 a.m. over radio station WJDA, 1300 kc.

A fellowship hour will be held in the Allen Parlor at 11 a.m., immediately following the worship service.

Individuals and families from the area and visitors are invited to share in both the worship and fellowship.

For information concerning Bethany's ministries and programs, contact the church office at 479-7300.

Layman Sundays Continue At Squantum Church

The 9:30 a.m. service at the First Church of Squantum marked the third in a series of six Layman Sundays scheduled for the summer.

Craig Zoehring provided the music in place of the vacationing Mary Ruth Scott. Zoehring conducted the service last week.

Lay minister was Tom Williamson, supported by Deaconess Renee Johnson.

Following the reading from the Scripture of St. Paul's essay on the nature of love, found in the First Letter to the Corinthians, Williamson spoke on the dangers of idle talk and how a Christian should deal with it.

Illustrating how stories, if true to begin with, tend to become enlarged or distorted in the retelling, Williamson urged critical examination.

In the final analysis, he pointed out, it is inconsistent with the concept of loving concern for one's neighbor to carry tales, even if true, that could be damaging to his interests or good name.

In support of this principle, he cited the words of Jesus as recorded in St. Luke, "Condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned."

In the ministry of beauty the altar flowers last week were brought to Clara Cole who is in the hospital.

The altar flowers this week were provided in memory of Elizabeth Holmes by her husband, Harry.

A yard sale is scheduled for Saturday at 10 a.m. on the lawn of the church.

The service next week will feature a discussion by a group of young people of the church who have returned with Pastor Gene Langevin from a two-week Christian conference held at the University of Redlands, Ca.

Burke Opposes Use Of Shipyard As Dumping Site

Kevin Burke, a candidate for the Ward 5 City Council seat, stated that he opposes the use of the Fore River Shipyard as "a dumping ground for sludge and trash generated by neighboring cities and towns."

Burke said, "I sympathize with Senator William Bulger and Mayor Raymond Flynn. Boston, like Quincy, is facing a serious problem and needs to work very hard to find an adequate means and location for disposal of trash and sludge.

"However, Quincy simply is not and should not be Boston's garbage can. The agreement to sell the shipyard to the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority ("MWRA") makes real the possibility that Quincy will not only be forced into accepting and burning trash from Boston, but also that it will be selected as the sludge treatment plant site now being considered."

"I hope the state will seriously consider sites other than the shipyard. Each potential site will raise environmental concerns. Nonetheless, it seems that Deer Island or Spectacle Island are logical sites for the sludge treatment plant and the South Bay location proposed by Mayor Flynn would appear to be an appropriate location for Boston to take care of Boston's trash. The spirited Bulger-Flynn debate and power struggle should not cloud the lens with which we view possible incinerator locations.

"Taking the trash incinerator out of the city of Boston would impact adversely on both Boston and Quincy. It has been estimated that it would cost the city of Boston some $200 million over 20 years in extra shipping expenses if the incinerator is located outside the city.

"Quincy, on the other hand, would be harmed by placing the sludge or trash treatment facilities at the shipyard in a number of ways.

"Without even discussing the potential adverse environmental impact and odor created by the use of the shipyard as a trash or sludge treatment facility, Quincy must face the harsh reality that, by purchasing the shipyard, the MWRA has eliminated over $2 million per year in tax revenues for Quincy.

"In addition, it has possibly jeopardized the job prospects and ship building future for over 4,000 shipyard workers who have given their heart and soul to their work, their employer-General Dynamics, and their hometown-Quincy.

The MWRA performed an end-run that would have made Vince Lombardi proud. Its conduct calls into serious question whether it can now deal in good faith with the shipyard workers and whether the workers can realistically expect fair treatment from the MWRA."

While Burke said he applauds the efforts of Mayor Francis McCauley and the City Council in stopping the pending sale, he noted that it may be too late.

"I hope that the sale to the MWRA can be blocked or at least structured to protect the interest of Quincy and its shipyard workers," he said. "Perhaps as Council President Stephen McGrath suggested, an eminent domain proceeding by the city might give the city the leverage necessary to provide a maximum benefit to the city of Quincy. Quincy's elected officials, candidates, and citizens should combine forces to insure that Quincy's interests are protected.

"Specifically, Quincy should seek compensation as a substitute for the loss of tax revenues that will result from the tax exempt ownership of the shipyard by the MWRA," Byrne said.

"Possibly, the governor could invoke Executive Order 215 to insure that the city receives additional funds if in fact a sludge treatment facility is placed on the shipyard site.

"The city should also obtain guarantees that the hazardous materials on the shipyard site will be cleaned up in conformity with Chapter 21E of the General Laws of Massachusetts and that the public will be given access to the waterfront. That kind of arrangement would help the city to create a safe and aesthetically pleasing parcel of property."

Burke also suggested that, "The city should also negotiate to prevent installation of Boston's trash incinerator at the shipyard and gain assurances that local ship workers will be given priority and financial assistance in reopening a substantial portion of the shipyard for ship building.

"Finally, the city should be guaranteed direct involvement in the planning and future use of the shipyard site. The city and its officials should not be kept in the dark as was the case with the negotiations regarding the purchase of the shipyard by the MWRA."

John McDuff Candidate For School Committee

John H. McDuff, Jr., 53, of South St., Quincy Point, announces his candidacy for election to the Quincy School Committee.

A graduate of Emerson College, he has been employed as a manager for a major Boston hospital for the past 25 years.

McDuff, a previous school committee and city council candidate, said that his reason for running was to have some input in the upgrading of the education of the youth of the city and to help provide them with a solid learning experience based on traditional values.

He said, "I am disturbed by high school graduates who read and write at a sixth grade level. I am unhappy when young people can't even locate the United States on a world map.

"Our schools are giving a less than satisfactory education in history and government, which are so necessary for well-informed citizenship.

"Learning must be something we love throughout our lives, not just a crash course in how to earn a living. Learning must be loved and nurtured for its own sake."

McDuff, who says he is a champion of lower taxes, is a member of Citizens for Limited Taxation.

He is founder and president of the Quincy Animal League, where he led the successful fight to repeal the Pound Seizure law, and has been a driving force behind the new dog shelter soon to be constructed in Quincy.

JOHN H. McDUFF, JR.

As a member of the Quincy Citizens Association, McDuff has been active in efforts to halt overdevelopment in the city. In May, he was honored by the Q.C.A. as "Citizen of the Year" for 1987. He received the Laurence J. Curtin Award and a commendation from the Massachusetts Senate for his civic activities.

McDuff is also a member of Massachusetts Citizens for Life, and the South Shore Humane Society.

Citing his longtime involvement in the community, he stated, "I believe we all have a duty to help improve the quality of life in our city, and I pledge to the people of Quincy all of my energy, intellect and integrity in raising the standards in our schools. If elected, I will do my very best. No candidate can promise more, and none should be allowed to deliver less."

Yes, there are certain death benefits for which veterans may be eligible.

Quincy Hospital Offers Advice On Preventing Falls In The Elderly

Falls are a very common cause of serious injury in the elderly.

Older people fall more easily than young people, suffer more serious injuries from falling, and do not heal as quickly. Falls occur for a number of reasons, including limitations associated with aging (poor eyesight, unsteady on feet, etc.) and side effects of medications. In addition, there are many conditions within the home and daily habits which are responsible for 40 to 50 per cent of falls. Many of these conditions can be changed easily.

As specialists in emergency medicine, the staff at Quincy City Hospital are experts in the treatment of injuries resulting from falls. However, they would much rather prevent falls from happening. We hope the following suggestions will be instrumental in keeping you healthy, active and independent.

Use the following suggestions as a checklist in going through your home. Some may not apply to you, but you will find most of them helpful and easy to follow.

Stairways are a frequent site of falls. Often falls are caused by mistakenly thinking that the bottom has been reached, and "missing" the bottom step. Stairways should always have:

- Adequate lighting on the stairs and the landings - a light switch at the top and bottom.
- Non-skid surfaces or carpeting which is firmly tacked down.
- Handrails on both sides of the stairs which are small enough to grasp firmly, and far enough from the walls to be grasped easily.
- Handrails with a knob at the bottom which is reached by the hand only after the feet have left the staircase.
- Top and bottom steps which are painted a different color.

Hallways, kitchen and living areas should have adequate lighting. With regard to rugs, floors and carpets, they should have: no throw rugs that slide. All carpeting edges should be tacked down. Carpeting and/or padding should be thick and shock-absorbing. No highly-polished wood flooring. No thresholds over which older persons might have difficulty lifting their feet safely.

Furniture should be arranged so that pathways are not blocked. No extension cords should be exposed. Tables should not be wobbly. Rollers on furniture are dangerous. Avoid low furniture. Chairs should be sturdy, have supportive arms, and not be slippery. Use no small, slippery footstools.

Avoid sharp-cornered furniture. Have adequate lighting with light switches easily reached from doorways. Always have flashlight handy for emergency situations. Hallways with baseboard lighting are safest. And everyone, elderly or not, should watch for pets, small children, toys and other objects that might appear in unexpected places.

In the bathroom, provide adequate lighting in all areas, as well as nightlights. An alarm system in the bathroom is a good idea. Grab-rails near the toilet and the bathtub should be provided. Any rugs should have a rubber-backed, non-skid backing. Non-skid mats in the tub, and possibly a non-skid seat. The toilet tissue holder should be convenient without too far a reach. And a consideration for the elderly might be a bedside commode at night.

In the bedroom, a flashlight should always be near the bed for emergencies, as well as a bedside phone and/or alarm. Nightlights should illuminate the path from bedroom to bathroom. And a bedside remote control light switch should be provided.

Outdoors: make certain that you have adequate lighting for doorsteps and walkways. Wear well-fitting shoes with low heels and non-skid soles. And be especially careful of curbs, ramps, rough ground, icy or wet pavement, or walkways.

Miscellaneous suggestions include:

Be careful at twilight, when lighting is often poor. Be careful when adjusting to new eyeglasses, especially bifocals or tinted glasses. Be cautious in unfamiliar surroundings. Avoid fast-moving situations (such as crossing very busy streets). Rise slowly from bed and chairs. Consider wearing a personal emergency call system, especially if you live alone. Avoid leaning too far for objects which are out of reach. Be sure that expected support points (tables, chairs, etc.) are sturdy. Avoid collisions between cane or walker and other objects. Be cautious after drinking alcoholic beverages. Avoid turning your head suddenly, as they may cause some dizziness in some individuals. Avoid working on objects (such as ceiling lights or curtain rods) which require you to work with your arms raised above your head.

We encourage you to accept your limitations and request the help of others whenever necessary in the interest of your own safety.

Boredom, depression, lack of concentration and loss of confidence can all lead to falls. Remain active and confident by attending social events and exercising (such as walking) regularly, as long as you are healthy, and with the approval of your personal physician.

If you should suffer a fall, the Emergency Department at Quincy City Hospital is specially skilled to care for your needs. We hope that the above suggestions will make that trip to the hospital unnecessary.

Best Season In Over 10 Years

Things Looking Up For Quincy Legion

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy Legion baseball team posted a 9-9 record this season, its best record in more than 10 years, and just missed qualifying for the Zone 6 playoffs.

Of the nine losses four were by one run and one by two runs. The team was blown out of only one game, an 11-1 loss to Canton, which was avenged with a Quincy win by same score. Three of the one-run losses came late in the game due to mental errors.

The team loses only four players and the future looks bright. The coaches say there could be five or six openings if a couple of the border line players don't show a little more next season.

Pitching was a problem this season and could again be a problem next year. Returning are Robbie Higgins, one of the best pitchers in Zone 6, who is headed for the University of Maine; Jim Dennis, who came up with some outstanding efforts this year and will be back pitching for Quincy High, and Joe Taylor, who hopes to pitch next spring for Quincy High.

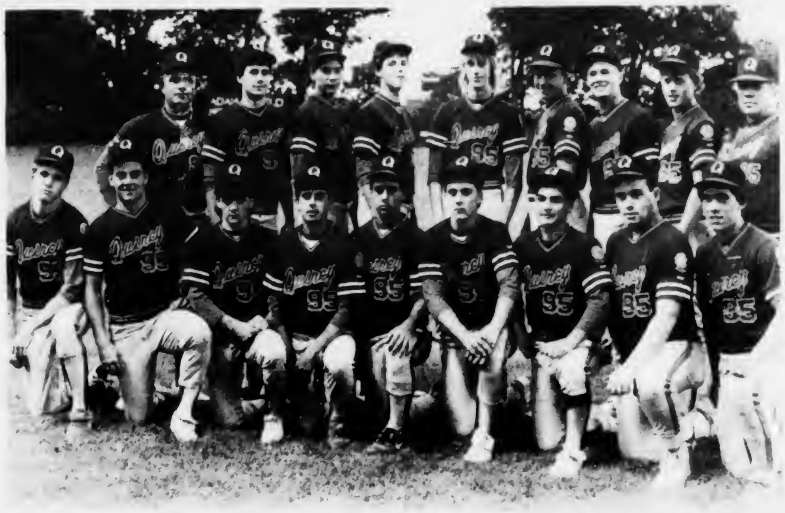
The team loses Bob Laracy, one of the best relief pitchers with his deceptive sidearm delivery but who left the team at midseason for personal reasons.

Returning players Jim Kearns, Mike Connors, Joe Gately and knuckleballer Nick Dragone all did some pitching this year and could help brighten the pitching picture next season.

Kyle Robertson, the starting catcher, is gone but Quincy is deep in catching with Mike Toland, one of the team's best hitters and a catcher for B.C. High, returning as well as Bill Mulkern and Sean Gately, both excellent catchers who also play in the infield.

Mulkern will be back at first base and Sean Gately at third. Both are two-year starters. Higgins will be back at shortstop when not pitching and the only starting infielder not returning will be second baseman Steve Happas.

Waiting to step into infield spots are Dragone, Kearns and Tim Baker. Dragone and Kearns saw considerable infield action this season.



The outfield has Peter Tufts, who hit one of the longest home runs in Zone 6 this year (over 400 feet), returning as well as Dennis, the starting right fielder when not pitching and a .300 hitter. Center fielder Bill Roche is gone but Kevin Duffy, who started in left field, speedster Paul McLellan, a power hitter, Kearns and Dragone all have outfield experience.

Coaches Ed Spring and Dick Laracy point out that all positions are open but it will be hard moving some of this year's players out.

"One of the things most returning players have going for them is they play more than one position," said Laracy.

The coaches and players thank John Quinn, the team's number one supporter, who has done so much the past two seasons to help the team, and also thank the sponsors who took ads in the program book. Without their ads the team would not have been able to operate.

The team will have a breakup dinner Aug. 24 at the Colonial Restaurant on Hancock St. Jackets and sweaters will be given to the players later this year.

$25,000 Allocated For Faxon Park Improvement

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro announces that up to $25,000 has been allocated for the renovation and refurbishing of Faxon Park.

The top field area will include rototilling and regrading the infield area, filling and installing a four foot border around the infield, and the remaining turn areas will be dressed with screened loam and seeded, according to DeCristofaro.

The lower field will include rototilling of the existing clay field and installation of diamond mix, rototilling the inside and outside four foot border around the infield and installing a four foot border of sod. The infield and outfield areas will be loamed and seeded, DeCristofaro said.

The playground area will be relocated to afford easier access for parents and children and new equipment will include a swing set, a four-unit hobby horse and park benches, he said.

Councillor DeCristofaro stated that the park area has recently undergone a general cleanup. However, he feels the renovations and refurbishing of Faxon Park is long overdue.

"When completed, the park will afford the community many hours of pleasure and enjoyment - particularly for the young people of the area," said DeCristofaro.

Lighting Monument To Be Unveiled At Veterans Stadium Friday

A granite monument recognizing the efforts of all those who helped install permanent lights at Veterans Memorial Stadium will be unveiled Friday at 6:45 p.m. at the stadium.

Everyone who played a part in finally getting the lights has been invited to the ceremonies and asked to enter the stadium through the rear gate.

Following the unveiling of the granite monument a reception will be held at Amelia's Restaurant located in the Marine Bay Complex in Squantum. Individual awards and recognition will take place at that time.

Bob Meenan, president of the lighting committee, expressed hope that everyone who helped toward the installation of the lights will attend the ceremonies.

THE RIDE Extended To Quincy In September

Mayor Francis McCauley announces he has been informed by James F. O'Leary, general manager of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, that they have expanded THE RIDE to Quincy.

Service will begin during the first week in September.

According to Mayor McCauley individuals will be required to pre-register with the authority, providing evidence of disability and residency within the service area. After acceptance, these transportation handicapped individuals will be able to travel within the designated area for a one-way fare of 75 cents utilizing pre-purchased tickets. Service will be available Monday through Friday between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m., with no restrictions placed on trip purpose.

Mayor McCauley added that this project has been of much interest to the Mayor's Commission on Handicapped Affairs which meets the second Monday of each month in the second floor conference room in City Hall to investigate matters of importance to the handicapped, such as "THE RIDE" service.

This service is of vital importance to the citizens of the city. Mayor McCauley noted that providing this transportation service could mean that individuals no longer need to rely on someone else for rides to and from stores, doctors, relatives, etc. It means, in essence, that disabled people will become more independent.

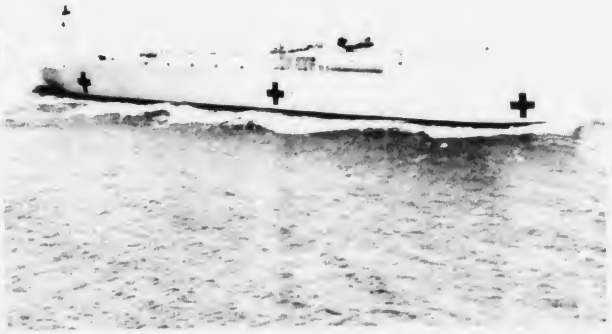
Quincy Woman Nurse Aboard Largest Hospital Ship

By Spec. 4. MIKE HAGBURG
U.S. Army
Public Affairs Representative

Aboard the USNS Mercy (T-AH 19) – Lt. Cmdr. Suzan Mader of Quincy, decided to become a nurse in the Navy because of the educational opportunities and the chance to travel.

On her latest assignment, she's found both - aboard the United States Naval Hospital Ship Mercy.



Currently the largest military hospital ship afloat in the world, the Mercy carries more than 700 medical and support personnel from the Air Force, Army, Navy, United States Public Health Service, and the Philippine medical community. Its 12 operating rooms, 80-bed intensive care unit and 1,000-bed hospital make it the largest trauma center in the United States.

The Mercy's first assignment has been a five-month humanitarian and training mission to the Philippines and South Pacific, where its medical teams have provided medical, surgical and dental support to the people of the region.

Between the ship's arrival in the Republic of the Philippines March 18, and its departure for the South Pacific June 1, American staff members worked and trained hand in hand with Armed Forces of the Philippines medical personnel embarked aboard the ship - and civilian doctors in communities visited by the ship.

USNS MERCY – The Navy's newest hospital ship USNS Mercy (T-AH 19), christened in November 1986, set sail on hr maiden voyage Feb. 27, 1987, for a five-month humanitarian and training mission through the South Pacific. Embarked aboard is a detachment of Helicopter Support Squadron Five (HC-5), homebased in San Diego, Ca. The ship is operated by the Military Sealift Command and carries a 1,000-bed Medical Treatment Facility. USN photo by Mader is a member of the Mercy's cadre crew, and will serve aboard the ship for several years.

"I was shocked when I was assigned here," said Mader. "I'm the only operating room nurse in the cadre crew."

Formerly assigned to the Naval Hospital, Groton, Ct., Mader has served 13 years in the Navy. She enjoys being a Navy nurse.

"I think Navy nurses get much more respect than civilian nurses," said Mader. "The doctors treat us like colleagues - not handmaidens. Navy medicine is very progressive."

While on the Mercy mission, Mader has served in the ship's operating room complex. During the Philippine portion of the mission the operating room complex was one of the busiest places on the ship. Mercy surgical staff performed an average of 100 surgeries a week.

"It was a lot of hard work," said Mader. "But we weren't expecting it to be a picnic. We moved a lot of patients in and out."

Mader enjoyed working with patients in the Philippines.

"I really liked the patients we had - most were very nice and very appreciative," she said. "There were many who left a lasting impression on me - and that doesn't happen too often when you work in an operating room."

Mader also was happy to return to the Philippines.

"I love the Philippines," said Mader. "I was stationed there before and this cruise was like a trip down memory lane for me. It's a pretty country and I love the people."

When the Mercy mission ends, Mader will be stationed aboard the ship in Oakland, Calif., the Mercy's homeport. There the ship will be maintained in a reduced operating status, ready for emergency deployment within five days.

ESL Summer School Students Check Space And Ocean

By ELIZABETH TOBEY

"Yesterday: outer space! Today: under the ocean!"

The words of the English as a Second Language Summer School director, Mary Sofis, express the excitement felt by all who participated in recent field trips. Over 45 students were involved in this two-day adventure; visiting the Omnimax Theatre at the Museum of Science, and the various oceanic exhibits at the New England Aquarium.

English as a Second Language Summer School is a five-week summer program for Quincy students who are learning the English language. Classes are held at North Quincy High School.

Wednesday's and Thursday's trips were special. The Omnimax Theatre, which was completed in March of this year, is the Museum of Science's latest addition and boasts a mammoth screen on which life-like images are projected. The seats are placed in steep rows of steps, and are tilted backwards to give each viewer an uninhibited view of the screen. The first film seen by the students was entitled "A New England Time Capsule," and showed various scenes from the Boston area. The crowd shrieked with delight as it experienced a helicopter flight amidst Boston's skyscrapers and a 90 mph joyride on the expressway.

"The Dream is Alive," a 45-minute film about the Space Shuttle program, is aptly titled. Footage from outer space was shot by NASA astronauts using special Omnimax cameras. The late Judith Resnik, member of the "Challenger" crew, filmed much of the footage. The liftoff of the shuttle filled the screen with sand-colored billows of smoke which looked as if it would roll out into the audience. The gentle images of the astronauts floating high above the cloud-rippled surface of the earth gave the audience a special feeling of oneness.

The trip to the New England Aquarium was an opportunity to learn about the inhabitants of the ocean. Following New England Aquarium guides, students observed the many species of fish which live in the "big tank," the centerpiece of all the exhibits. Among the animals living there are moray eels, skates, giant sea turtles, and sharks. Although the sharks looked fearsome, the guides explained that they were quite docile, resulting from their hourly "over"feeding. Divers were observed feeding the sharks from large pails of fish.

ESL students also attended the sea lion and dolphin show on the aquarium's stationary boat, the "Discovery." A large male California sea lion performed tricks with a beachball, fetched colored rings, and showed off his talent as a comedian. The three dolphins who followed his presentation jumped through hoops and leaped to heights of 25 feet.

No matter what country of origin one comes from, the ocean and outer space are sources of wonder. The ESL students enjoyed learning about both.

The home of Everett and Denise Goodrich at 105 Brook St., Wollaston, was the site of a recent coffee hour for school committee candidate Bob Jarnis.

The coffee was organized to give neighbors an opportunity to meet and question the candidate.

Many of the neighbors were parents of young school age children that will be attending either the Montclair or Wollaston elementary schools. The Wollaston school will reopen this fall due to general overcrowding in the nine other elementary schools.

Jarnis said there was a sense of excitement at the coffee due to the reopening of the Wollaston school. Parents cited their pleasure in having a school within walking distance.

"We're thrilled," said Ellen Hunter of 151 Taylor St. "Last year, all the neighborhood school children had to be bused, even though the Wollaston school was just a block away. This year, with the Wollaston opened, our kids can walk to school. We're thrilled."

Jarnis said he had some extensive discussions with the neighbors. The hostess, Denise Goodrich, expressed concern regarding the increased traffic in and around the Wollaston School since its closing six years ago. It was thought that additional stop signs near the school are required. Particular problems were noted on Brook St. at the intersections of Taylor St. and Highland Ave., according to Jarnis.

At the suggestion of the candidate, the group agreed to contact parent members of the Wollaston School Steering Committee regarding the traffic issue. The committee was established in January at the request of Jarnis to address just such parental concerns prior to the election of PTO officers when the school formally opens.

This is the first candidacy for Bob Jarnis, who is a member of the Citywide Parents Council and has been active in school issues.

Simon Fireman Reappointed To Export-Import Bank

The U.S. Senate has approved President Ronald Reagan's reappointment of Massachusetts business executive Simon C. Fireman to a four-year term as a director of the Export-Import Bank of the United States.

Fireman, who was the founder and board chairman of Aqua-Leisure Industries, was initially appointed in November, 1986 to fill the unexpired term of Richard Hughes of Oklahoma.

In two decades of operations, Fireman had led Aqua-Leisure Industries, with international headquarters in Avon, to multi-million dollar annual sales as a major manufacturer of recreational swim products, luggage and travel accessories.

In appointing Fireman to the Exim Bank, which is the agency charged with supporting U.S. exports, Reagan made Fireman responsible for creating programs of assistance to stimulate small and medium sized companies to enter the export field. The goal is the reduction of the $200 billion U.S. trade deficit.

SIMON C. FIREMAN

Since being sworn in by Vice-President George Bush as the only businessman among the Exim Bank's five directors, Fireman has created the nation's first Interagency Task Force on Trade. He is chairman of a 24 member group comprising representatives from the Department of Commerce, State, treasury, U.S. Trade Representative, Small Business Administration, Overseas Private Investment Corporation and the United States Information Agency.

The task force on July 15 will launch PROJECT GREAT, an international information campaign morning Grass Roots Education about Trade. The campaign is designed to acquaint exporters, prospective exporters, banks and other financial institutions with the Export-Import Bank's programs of loans, credit, working capital, guarantees and insurance which are available to support export activities.

Fireman, a former Quincy resident, previously served President Jimmy Carter and President Reagan as an advisor on international trade.

Long active in civic affairs, he was president of Temple Beth El, Quincy; a member of the Board of Managers of Quincy Hospital; and chairman of the city-wide celebration of the Eightieth Birthday of motion picture star Ruth Gordon, a Quincy native.

Be Careful Of Flowers Hospital Cautions

The staff of Quincy City Hospital has issued a word of caution concerning the toxicity of common flowers and plants.

Some commonly found flowers and plants bear leaves and fruit which can be poisonous if ingested. While eating vegetation is not common among adults, it is a temptation that many children find irresistible.

These flowers and plants contain parts which can be toxic:

Azalea: One of the most dangerous; ingestion may cause muscular paralysis, including the heart, or depression of the central nervous system, which could be fatal.

Bird of Paradise: Ingesting the seed pods may cause nausea, vomiting or diarrhea.

Black Locust: Eating the bark, foliage or young sprouts may cause depression, vomiting, diarrhea, and weakened heartbeat, and is often fatal.

Calla Lily: Eating any part of this plant may cause intense burning sensations and irritation of the mouth and stomach.

Castor Bean: Eating any part, but particularly the seeds, may cause a burning sensation in the mouth. Swallowing two or more seeds may cause serious illness or death.

Daffodil: Eating the bulb may cause serious vomiting, diarrhea, trembling, convulsions and sometimes death.

Daphne: Eating any part may cause burning and ulceration of the stomach and intestines, bloody vomiting and diarrhea.

Iris: Eating leaves, roots, and fleshy portions may cause severe but temporary digestive upset.

Jerusalem Cherry: Eating berries may cause vomiting, diarrhea and collapse.

Lantana: Eating berries may cause gastro-intestinal irritation, muscular weakness and circulatory difficulties, and is sometimes fatal.

Oleander: Eating any part may cause nausea, depression, bloody diarrhea, weakened and irregular pulse and paralysis.

Poinsettia: Eating leaves and stem may cause diarrhea, abdominal cramps, and delirium. Sap can cause skin irritation and, if rubbed in the eyes, blindness.

Poison Oak: Touching may cause skin irritation.

Privet: Eating any part may cause bloody vomiting, diarrhea, severe irritation of digestive tract and general nervous symptoms.

Ranunculus or Buttercup: Eating any part may cause stomach irritation, diarrhea, and in large quantities, convulsions.

Rhubarb: While the stalk is edible, eating leaves may cause vomiting, severe abdominal pain, muscle cramps, and in large quantities, coma and death.

Wisteria: Eating any part may cause severe vomiting, abdominal pain and diarrhea.

Yellow Jasmine: Eating any part may cause thirst, dilation of the pupils, reddened skin, headache, high blood pressure, rapid pulse, convulsions, delirium and coma.

If you suspect that a poisonous plant has been ingested, empty the stomach, either with a finger in the throat or a non-prescription medicine known as syrup of Ipecac (which should be on hand in every home), and then immediately take the victim and a sample of the plant ingested to the hospital Emergency Room.

If in question regarding the plant's toxicity, contact the Poison Control Center at 232-2120.

Polluters Face Up To .$25,000 Per Day Fines

Environmental polluters will face new civil fine penalties of up to $25,000 per day under new legislation recently signed into law, State Senator Paul D. Harold warns.

The new law, reported favorably by the Criminal Justice Committee, which Harold chairs, and which he carried to the Senate, more than doubles the general civil fine for pollution from $10,000 per day to $25,000, and increases many existing criminal penalties.

Harold said the statute covers a wide range of violations, including various water and air pollution offenses, disposal of dredged materials, negligent oil spills, unauthorized construction on coastal tidelands, altering wetland and coastal areas without a permit, solid waste disposal, hazardous waste facility siting, and pesticide distribution and use.

It also increases the maximum fine for violating municipal sewer regulations from $20 to $5,000 per day, and allows the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) to set fines for violating the state Environmental Code as high as $25,000, up from the current $500 maximum.

The bill was filed by former Atty. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti, Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy, and Rep. Steven Angelo (D-Saugus).

'Biggest Honor Of My Life'

John 'Jake' Comer American Legion National Commander

JOHN P. COMER

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

It's easy to understand why John P. "Jake" Comer of Quincy calls his election as national commander of the American Legion the "biggest honor" of his life.

He is only the second man in Massachusetts and the first from Quincy to be elected to the Legion's highest office. In all, there have been 70 national commanders, five coming from New England.

Comer, who was elected today (Thursday) during the American Legion National Convention in San Antonio, Tex., joined the Legion in 1962. He has held an office every year and "kept moving up" until he was confronted with the possibility of running for national commander four years ago.

The right "ingredients" were there to allow him to run for the one-year post, Comer said.

"I have the right job, the right family and many supporters. Without them, I wouldn't have been able to do it," he said.

Comer took a leave of absence from his job as executive director of the Quincy Public Housing Authority and hit the campaign trail.

Once he made known his intention for national commander, Comer said there was "great enthusiasm" among his many supporters, especially in Quincy and Massachusetts.

"The people I have helped, helped me," he said. As an example of the tremendous support, Comer said the easiest part of the campaign was raising money.

Comer raised about $100,000, with two thirds of it coming from state supporters. He estimated $5,000 worth of campaign funds came from Quincy supporters.

Tributes:

Dick Koch: He Had Time For Everyone

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

He was once awarded an electric clock from the Houghs Neck Community Council inscribed, "Dick Koch, who has always had time for Houghs Neck."

But the inscription could really apply to all sections of the city, and to citizens from the very young to the elderly who benefited from his devotion to his work and his charitable endeavors.

Richard J. Koch, Sr., executive secretary of the Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments and active in charitable and community causes for four decades, died suddenly Sunday. He was 64.

City officials, friends and colleagues fondly remember him like this:

"He was a wonderful human being," said former Mayor Arthur Tobin, now clerk magistrate of Quincy District Court. "He and his family instilled an awareness and pride in our city and in the flag.

"He was highly thought of among people of all ages, from the young in the Koch Club to senior citizens.

"The things Dick Koch involved himself with were always for the betterment of his fellowman and the betterment of the city, and that's a rarity today," said Tobin.

Another former mayor under whom Koch served, Walter Hannon, called Koch "an extraordinary man."

"He was a guy who worked at bringing up a great family, and found the time and energy to manage all of the Koch Club activities," said Hannon, senior director of Marina Bay.

RICHARD J. KOCH, Sr.

Hannon, who said he had known Koch since he was 15 years old, added, "He was my dear friend, and I will miss him greatly."

City Councillor Joseph LaRaia, another former mayor, called Koch "a legend in the city."

"It seems like only yesterday that the City Council was voting on an ordinance to create the position of park director and Dick Koch was slated for the position in the early 1960's," said LaRaia.

"His contributions to the community are going to be missed dearly," said LaRaia. "His shoes will be hard to fill."

Current Mayor Francis McCauley praised Koch's ability to run the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

"When I asked him to take the additional responsibility of heading the cemetery department, he accepted the responsibility," said McCauley.

"Almost immediately, it went from poor to excellent condition.

"He was a capable, competent and dedicated individual, and we will miss him sorely," said McCauley.

City Continues Court Fight Against MWRA

The city was scheduled to continue in state and federal courts this week its fight against the purchase of the closed General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority for a reported $49 million.

Lawyers for the city were scheduled to seek a preliminary injunction against the purchase of the 185-acre yard yesterday (Wednesday) in Suffolk Superior Court, Boston, according to Mayor Francis McCauley.

In addition, they were to seek an order prohibiting any action on the purchase and sale agreement by the MWRA board at its meeting yesterday, he said.

Also this week, the city was scheduled to go into federal court to request that the Environmental Protection Agency's motion to direct the MWRA to purchase the yard be denied, McCauley said.

Michael Deland, EPA regional administrator, said the motion was made to maintain the momentum that has developed over the last few weeks of Boston Harbor Cleanup.

A status conference with the MWRA and General Dynamics was also to be requested, according to McCauley.

Quincy received written notice last Friday that the MWRA plans to sign a purchase and sale agreement for the yard in 10 days.

"If it goes unchallenged, they could sign a purchase and sale agreement as early as Aug. 31," said McCauley.

"We're not opposed to a staging area at the yard," he said, "but we are against them purchasing the whole 185 acres when it is not necessary."

Local officials fear the rest of the yard may be used for a sludge treatment plant and or trash incinerator.

"We feel we have a good case," said the mayor. "They don't need that amount of land. They may not even need 35 to 50 acres for a staging area.

"It is a public agency and it is exceeding its authority.

"We're not trying to slow down the harbor cleanup. We started that (in a lawsuit against the MDC in 1982)

"The land they are grabbing is very important property in Quincy, he said.

"It's critical that the judge grant a preliminary injunction."

Quincy, Braintree, and Weymouth officials met with Paul Levy, the new head of the MWRA, last week to discuss the agency's planned purchase of the yard.

But MWRA executive director Paul Levy couldn't give the group any assurance that a sludge treatment plant and or trash incinerator would not be located on the property.

He said that no decision has been made on usage of the bulk of the 184-acre yard after 35 to 50 acres are used as a staging area to transport workers and materials to the Deer Island Sewage Treatment Plant.

"We expressed our major concern that purchase of the shipyard in total is not acceptable to Quincy, Braintree or Weymouth," said McCauley, in whose office the meeting with nearly 20 officials was held.

The mayor said the group expressed concerns ranging from the loss of taxes to Siciliano's award for employees of cities with a population of 10,000 and over, will be presented Nov. 7, at 7:30 p.m. at the MMA Awards Banquet at the Marriot Hotel, Copley Place, Boston.

He was nominated by

Mayor Francis McCauley for his "overwhelming dedication and commitment to serving the community, not only in his full-time position with the city, but also in the innumerable hours of volunteer time which he offers on a daily basis."

"Acting as general foreman in the General Services Devision of the Quincy Police Department for the past 15 years, Mr. Siciliano continues to provide outstanding services for the city," said McCauley.

In addition to his full-time position with the Police Department, Siciliano devotes 40 to 50 hours per week, on average, to his volunteer positions as Auxiliary Police Chief and Deputy Director of Public Safety of the Civil Defense Agency.

He is also a member of the Mass. Siciliano also provides support to the American Red Cross, National Guard, veteran and civic organizations, Sons of Italy, Community Awareness and Emergency Response, Quincy Community Television and Quincy Cable News.

In 1985, he was awarded The Quincy Sun's Citizen of the Year Award. He was recipient of the Employee of the Year Award presented by Mayor Francis McCauley in 1984.

The Outstanding Municipal Employee of the Year Program is sponsored annually by the MMA to recognize municipal employees who have made exceptional contributions to their cities and towns.

The nominees are judged on their length of service to the municipality, significant achievements made within the scope of their regular jobs and special contributions made outside of their routine responsibilities which demonstrate outstanding initiative, perseverence and dedication.

Business Concerned Over Registry Traffic Impact On Downtown

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Local businessman and the City Council president have told the mayor they are concerned about inadequate parking when the Registry of Motor Vehicles moves to Quincy Sq. in late October.

But Mayor Francis said the situation seems to be under control since the Ross Parking deck behind the new registry location is scheduled to be completed at the end of October.

In a letter to the mayor, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association president Robert Quinn said that the registry is scheduled to move from its Broad St. location to Quincy Fair on Oct. 31.

"The completion date of the parking area and deck behind Quincy Fair needs to coincide with the registry move," Quinn stated. "Failure of this will result in a chaotic parking situation for the west side of the downtown area.

"Inadequate parking during the Christmas season, which begins in mid-November, will have a negative impact on retail sales for members of the QCBPA," he said.

Council president Stephen McGrath also expressed concerns about parking.

McCauley wrote to Robert L. Hutchinson, Jr., Registrar of Motor Vehicles, and explained the situation.

"There are concerns that if the registry moves on Oct. 31, as scheduled and if this move occurs before the completion of the Ross Parking Garage addition, severe traffic problems in this area may occur," McCauley stated.

"I would appreciate it if you would review this situation so that the planned move of the registry will coincide with the opening of the parking addition," he said.

According to Principal Planner Kevin Shea, the 124-space garage addition is expected to open Oct. 29.

"We're pretty well on target," said Shea of the $1.5 million project which began under construction in April.

McCauley noted that 18 parking spaces will be reserved for official registry cars.

A shelter for the homeless is scheduled to locate at the Broad St. site when the registry moves.

Wollaston Man Named To $40,000 City Traffic Engineer Post

A 36-year-old Wollaston man has been appointed to the $40,000 a year position of traffic engineer in Quincy.

Mayor Francis McCauley announced Tuesday the appointment of David A. Kinnecom of Beach St. to the newly created position effective Sept. 9.

The appointment will expire the first Monday in February, 1988. It is subject to reappointment by the mayor.

A graduate of Cornell University, Kinnecom has over 15 years of professional technical experience in transportation planning, traffic engineering, highway design and highway environmental impact assessment in the New England area.

He has worked as traffic engineer for the Rhode Island Department of Transportation and most recently was employed at Storch Engineers of Boston.

Kinnecom was selected from a field of 14, according to Planning Director Richard Meade, out of whose office the traffic engineer will work.

"We're especially pleased to have a Quincy resident in the position," said McCauley.

"He doesn't have to read about the traffic problems, he has lived them," he said.

The position of city traffic engineer was established as a result of a recommendation by a traffic task force appointed by McCauley.

A major aspect of the job will be to carry out improvements recommended by the recent Quincy Traffic 2000 study.

Recommendations scheduled for immediate action include design and construction of $2.8 million of vehicular and pedestrian improvements targeted for five Quincy Center locations, according to McCauley.

The locations are Hancock St. and Dimmock St. intersections; Coddington St., Washington St., Temple St. and Hancock St. intersections; Granite St. and Parkingway intersection, and Granite St. and Burgin Parkway intersection.

"Some of the traffic changes can be handled quickly and easily," said McCauley.

"Others will require ordinance changes and will go before the City Council," he said.

Part of Kinnecom's job will be to seek federal and state funds for traffic changes, according to McCauley.

"If we implemented all of the recommendations in the Traffic 2000 study over the next eight to 10 years, it would cost $9 to $12 million," said the mayor.j

Kinnecom is married and the father of two children.

Morrissey Wants Fishing Spotter Planes Restricted

Rep. Michael Morrissey has contacted the Department of Marine Fisheries informing them of numerous complaints he has received about spotter planes in Quincy Bay flying too close to residential areas early in the morning, and throughout the day.

Morrissey has requested that the department restrict the use of the planes before 8 a.m. and from within 500 feet of any residential area, as well as prohibiting the fishing boats from within the mooring area.

The spotter planes locate schools of fish and radio the position to the fishing boats who then move in for the catch he said. The fishing boats operate with a permit from the Department of Marine Fisheries that allows them to catch Manhadden, more commonly known as "Pogies."

In response to Rep. Morrissey's concerns, the Department of Marine Fisheries has indicated that it will restrict the use of spotter planes in the future through it's permit process.

"I don't want to put the fishermen out of business," said Morrissey, "but the area residents should not be disturbed by these planes, especially in the early morning hours. They should also be spared the hazard of low flying planes in residential areas."

"I am confident that some fair guidelines can worked out."

Dick Koch

Often when a well-known individual dies, those asked to comment or pay tribute are overly generous with their praise.

An individual who was not particularly well-liked becomes popular, someone of average intelligence becomes exceptional, people become more than they were in life.

But such is not the case with Dick Koch, who deserved all the tributes spoken since his death on Sunday, and more.

In addition to being an excellent administrator, Dick was a thoroughly good person who was generous with his time, appreciative of help, and always ready to offer encouragement or praise for a job well done.

He had a sense of humor that made him comfortable to be around.

Dick exemplified everything good about Quincy.

And now it's up to Quincy to see that the programs he gave so much of his heart and time to continue.

It's time for others to make sure that the Koch Club, the recreational and social organization for youngsters which he started, goes one.

Now it's up to others to see that the needy are cared for, especially at Christmas, and that the Flag Day Parade continues to be a Quincy tradition.

People who give as much as Dick did, while maintaining a marriage and raising seven children, are rare indeed.

It will be a tough job to fill his shoes, but we should at least try.

Dick deserved that. And more.

Carrying on his good programs will be the finest tribute of all and a living memorial to a man who should never be forgotten.

Dick Leaves A Big Void

Someone once told Dick Koch he could easily have been a millionaire.

Dick laughed.

"No, really," the other continued. "Did you ever stop to think if you took all that time you have given to all those causes and put it into a business venture how much money you would have made?"

"Money," replied Dick, growing serious, "isn't everything."

DICK KOCH Sr.

To him money wasn't everything or very important.

Family, friends, church, community and country were.

But when it came to raising money for a worthy cause, that was a little different. He did it, many, many times. And, he knew how to do it.

It might be the Heart Fund in Febraury or the Cancer Crusade in March or April. Or the Muscular Dystrophy Association all year round.

Or helping to feed the hungry, clothe the poor or making needy youngsters happy at Christmas by delivering dolls and toys to them. Or having Santa himself visit young shut-ins. Or presenting TV sets and personal gifts to patients at Long Island Hospital.

The list of his kind deeds goes on and on -- touching the lives of those of all ages.

He was a doer, a mover.

He knew how to get things done and got them done -- and done right. He worked as hard himself as anyone else involved. Usually harder.

He wasn't one of those people who join a cause to get his or her name on a sheet of stationery for the prestige of it. And then sit back and do little or nothing.

But his name on an organization's fund-raising letterhead was always sought because they knew if they had his name, they also had him. One hundred percent.

He wore a daily big, friendly smile. But he was a no-nonsense man.

As an executive secretary of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, he believed there was only one way for people to do a job: the right way.

He carried that over to anything he was involved in.

And, if a particular job wasn't done the right way by someone that big smile somehow didn't seem so big and friendly.

Although he never ran for public office himself, he had a lot of political clout and savvy.

He served as Quincy coordinator when a certain young Congressman decided to run for the U.S. Senate. His name: John F. Kennedy.

The late President is the only honorary member of the Koch Club which started out as a softball team after World War II and grew into a social-recreational organization that has had thousands of members down through the years.

Some of today's members are the sons and daughters -- grandsons and granddaughters -- of earlier members.

Incidentally, JFK never cared much for having his picture taken with a hat on. But for Dick Koch he posed for the camera proudly wearing a Koch Club baseball cap.

When it came to Koch Club sports, the accent was on participation -- not who were the better players. Everyone got a chance to play baseball, basketball, soccer or to bowl.

When someone was thinking of running for public office, he or she went to Dick for advice -- and hopefully - for support.

He helped Betty Scanlon and Harold Davis get elected to the School Committee and Paul Harold to the city council and state senate.

George Burke who was elected to the City Council with help from Dick and then went on to become Norfolk County District Attorney, said this week he looked on Dick as a "father image." To which Dick would probably respond if he could hear that, "What do you mean, 'father?' I'm not old enough to be your father. Maybe a brother or uncle."

And you could picture that big Dick Koch smile as he said it.

Dick gave a lot of himself to many people and to many worthy causes.

One of those causes was the fight against muscular dystrophy.

Dick served with me as co-chairman of the Quincy South Shore Jerry Lewis Telethon Committee and played a major role in the committee raising over $1 million for muscular dystrophy research and patient care.

He loved his country and flag. Anyone who has stood on Hancock St. on Flag Day the past three decades knows that. Hundreds of youngsters from the Koch Club and other youth organizations waving American flags and marching down Hancock St.

And there is the Koch Club scholarship fund established by Dick and his wife, Simmy to help Quincy and North Quincy High School graduates to go on to college.

Dick's many activities down through the years would keep 100 -- maybe 1000 -- men busy.

But above all that, he was a good husband, father, grandfather and brother and a good son of Quincy.

And, he was my friend.

I mentioned that big, friendly smile of his. He also had a big, friendly heart to go with it.

But it just gave out on him Sunday.

We are all going to miss him. His death at age 64 leaves a void in Quincy that just never will be filled.

Not the way Dick could fill it.

Thoughts About Richard J. Koch

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The City is hurting. Men, women and children of all ages are mourning the loss of a very big man who was a true and dear friend to so many of us. Richard J. Koch gave so much to the people of the City, and he looked for nothing in return.

How did this devoted husband and father always find time to do all that he did for others? He was so thoroughly decent -- he was so unselfish. He was always the first one to visit a sick friend at the hospital. He never missed a wake or a funeral to comfort the relatives of departed friends. He was always there for whatever charity or cause needed him.

He was a dedicated employee of this City and he cared about it. He cared about each and every member of the Koch Club which he founded. He provided so many productive and worthwhile activities for adults -- and how many children treasured the thought of sports without competition.

This man was special -- one of a kind. His death leaves the City stunned -- in a state of shock. We will miss this man with his big smile and a kind word for everyone.

He has left an indelible mark on the City of Presidents, and our lives have been enriched by having known him.

Monsignor Scally Will Be Sadly Missed

Editor, Quincy Sun,

I have been asked to write in behalf of those of us who attend the 6:30 a.m. Mass each weekday morning at St. Ann's of Wollaston from September to June.

Monsignor Scally will be sadly missed for many reasons - among them is that he provided the only early daily Mass for the working men and women South of Boston. The Monsignor sincerely empathized with daily communicants.

A 'Thank You' From Peter Family

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Peter family would like to thank everyone who helped make the third Chris Peter Memorial Blood Drive a success.

We collected 96 pints of blood at a time when the need was great.

So to the volunteers, the workers, "The Sun" for the coverage it gave us and, most especially, the blood donors, you did a great job.

SEEKS SEWAGE PLANT

Rep. Avery W. Gilkerson (R-Quincy) filed a bill in the State Legislature that would authorize the state to construct a sewage disposal plant to replace the one at Moon Island and charge the cost to the city of Boston.

The action came after Health Commissioner Dr. Richard M. Ash warned swimmers the pollution in some parts of Quincy Bay, which he blamed on the Moon Island plant, had reached a critical point due to two days of calm weather and smooth seas.

An angry Gilkerson also said that he will introduce an order at the next meeting of the Quincy City Council to enable Quincy to sue for a restraining order that would prevent Boston sewage from befouling Quincy waters.

Fourth Layman Sunday At First Church Of Squantum

The first hymn, Beethoven's Hymn of Joy, was a particularly fitting introduction to the 9:30 a.m. service of the First Church of Squantum.

Fourth in a series of six consecutive layman Sundays, the day was given over to the young people of the church who, together with a few young-at-heart seniors, had just returned from an inspiring two-week Christian conference or "quest" held at the University of Redlands of California.

Following the Pastoral Prayer delivered by Patti Langevin-Hurd, the Scriptural reading by Andrew Ogilvie, and Dedication of the Offering by Sarah Mildram, a representative panel comprised of five juniors and three seniors, all sporting bright-colored "Quest" tee shirts delivered in spontaneous fashion their individual impressions of the conference. Patti described how all 1500 attendees, 1200 juniors and 300 seniors, assembled at "Gatherings" held on five consecutive nights in a-style ampitheatre on campus.

Each meeting was keynoted by the hoisting of a huge banner bearing teh one-word theme for the evening. Patti went on to marvel at how smoothly the whole group worked together despite great differences in age.

Stacie Holmes, a senior, seconded that idea, taking occassion to read a letter she had just received from a girl she had talked with at the conference.

Andrew mentioned the strong international flavor of the gatherings, citing in particular the influence of a large contingent from Puerto Rico, most of whome spoke only Spanish.

From time to time during the discussions, the group paused to sing songs they had learned and this point, Andrew led in the singing of a song in Spanish.

Sarah found a motorcycle-escorted march 1500 strong down the main street of town especially exciting. Hazel Mayne, Andrew's grandmother emphasized how hard the group actually worked, starting at 8:30 a.m. and still at it until late in the evening. Upon departure, each received a little replica of a railroad track to remind him to "keep on track."

Further, on the subject of work activities, Mendi Hurd, Patti's daughter, described how they split up in the morning into small groups to discuss various assigned subjects called "Questing Points," and in the afternoon, attended classes where, among other things, they composed songs of their own.

On the adult side, Patti spoke of special training classes featuring ways to make points with children. For example, a large and fragile balloon was introduced. Its name was Bill. The idea was to gently keep Bill moving around the room without breaking him.

To show that the conference was not all work, Ruth Swenson, the third senior, described an exciting trip via aerial tramway up a nearby mountain. What particularly impressed Debbie Stohlberg was how much you get to know about another person when you share the same room for a couple of weeks.

By way of summation, Pastor Langevin, seated in the congregation, commented that what they brought back from Quest would influence the work of the church here for years to come.

Scott Williamson, who grew up in Squantum, came all the way from Framingham to provide special music.

The Altar flowers were given in loving memory of Duncan Preston by his wife Isabel and daughter Jennie.

ST. JOSEPH'S NEW PARISH CENTER
(Quincy Sun photo by Charles Flagg)

Cardinal Law To Dedicate St. Joseph's Parish Center

Bernard Cardinal Law will visit St. Joseph Parish, Quincy Point, Saturday, Aug. 29, to dedicate a new building to be called the G. I. Nickerson Center.

Dedications of the new area comes on the 60th anniversary of the dedication of the original building in 1972.

The original school contained eight classrooms, a library, offices and a small meeting hall.

Over the years, as enrollment climbed and more teachers were hired to service the expanding curriculum, some small areas were created in the lower level of the present school, but this was far from adequate, according to Sr. Anne Judge, SND.

Over the last several years, students have been transported weekly to the Salvation Army Gymnasium for gym classes. With the dedication and opening of the new addition that will no longer be necessary, she said.

This new building will service both the students in the school, and the parish at large as it will provide the space necessary for the many activities and meetings that are a very large part of the parish life at Saint Joseph's," said Sr. Judge.

The dedication will begin with the 4 p.m. Mass, after which there will be the dedication and a reception in the new building. All are welcome. Fr. Joseph Downey is church pastor.

Dick Koch: He Had Time For Everyone

agreed.

"He was a great administrator," said Gillis. "Dick knew how to handle people and to get things done."

Gillis' association with Koch went back to 1947-1948 when both ran for the City Council.

"Neither of us were successful," laughed Gillis, who noted that Koch was a success in all the other aspects of his life.

"If we had more Dick Kochs, and more Flag Day Parades (which his Koch Club sponsored), we'd have a better country," said Gillis.

"He did so much for the people in Quincy," said Assistant City Clerk Thomas Burke, who added that Koch started the Young Democrats organization in the city.

Recreation Director Barry Welch called Koch "the ultimate public servant."

"His personal beliefs and the benefit of recreation activities were advanced through the Koch Club programs and were even more evident in his professional commitment to the public parks in Quincy," said Welch.

"To those of us who grew up in Quincy, we know it to be a better place because Mr. Koch cared so much."

According to Sen. Paul Harold, among Koch's greatest talents was his organization skill.

"He was always willing to the legwork, and never sought recognition," said Harold.

It was Koch who advised Harold to get his start in politics by encouraging him to recharter the Mass Young Democrats 21 years ago.

"I rechartered the group and was elected president," said Harold, who later went on to become a city councillor and then state senator.

Gerard Coletta served on the Park and Recreation Board with Koch for the past 25 years.

"When the Fenno St. basketball courts were renamed in Dick's and my name, I said at the time that it was an honor to have my name associated with Dick Koch," said Colletta.

"I still feel that way now. He's done more for the city than anyone.

"When Dick gets to where he's going, there's going to be some real good programs, some clean parks and some happy people, because dick people, because Dick wouldn't have it any other way."

Ray Cattaneo was Koch's assistant director for 15 years.

"His heart was in it so much as far as helping others," said Cattaneo. "He never thought about himself.

"He was a tremendous teacher as far as what we are supposed to do in life."

Fr. Cornelius Heery, pastor of Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy, where Koch was a member and an usher at the 5 p.m. Mass on Sundays, said that Koch did his good works "quietly and without ostentation."

"When I think of Dick Koch, I always think of the gospel message of Matthew's:

"Our Lord said, I was hungry, you gave me something to eat; I was thirsty, you gave me something to drink, I was naked, you clothed me.

Atty. George Burke said that over the 20 years that he participated in the Koch Club as a manager, captain and player, Koch became a father symbol to him even though he was only 10 years older.

"I never met a man who did so much good, and never looked for any accolades or any one to praise him," said Burke.

According to Burke, Koch got him interested in politics in the campaign of a young man who at that time was running for the U.S. Senate.

"It turned out, he later became president of the United States -- John Kennedy," said Burke.

Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro remembered Dick Koch as a caring and giving person.

"I have known and had the pleasure of working with Dick Koch for about 30 years, and can honestly say I know no person who was as caring and giving.

"He was in my estimation one of the best department heads that the city has ever had and leaves a void that will be difficult to fill.

Richard J. Koch, Sr., 64

City Official,

Leader In Charitable Causes

A funeral Mass for Richard J. Koch, Sr., 64, of North Quincy, executive director of the Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments and a tireless worker in numerous charitable activities, was held yesterday (Wednesday) at Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy.

Mr. Koch died of natural causes Sunday morning at Quincy City Hospital after being stricken at home.

Flags were flown at half staff in the city.

A lifelong Quincy resident, his name was well-known in the city even though he never held elected office.

The former Merrymount Park on Southern Artery was renamed the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex in the late 1970's.

He was appointed executive secretary to the Quincy Park and Recreation Board in 1962.

In 1970, he was named full time administrator to the Forestry section which was transferred to the Park Department.

Mayor Francis McCauley asked him to take over the Cemetery Department as well in 1983.

Mr. Koch received a host of awards, citations and certificates of appreciation for his efforts.

"His heart was in it so much as far as helping others," said Ray Cattaneo, who worked with Mr. Koch for 15 years as his assistant director.

D. Scott Deware,

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

For millions of youngsters, August is a time when tragedy (or joy) overtakes them. For those who love the freedom of summer, hot weather and outdoors, and lack of study, school's reopening is stark tragedy.

For millions of others, who love school and association with friends and learning, it's a time of joy. Geniuses and successful men and women have developed from both temperaments. Winston Churchill, for example, was a poor student.

In today's world, however, successful study is more important than ever. As the world grows more technical and complex and competition becomes greater and greater, education becomes increasingly important.

It is not only the best investment for the student but the best investment for adult citizens in their community.

Therefore, accept the beginning of a school year as a challenge. If you are of school age, and make the best of it. School years, and one's youthful years in general, are not always easy years.

But they are years of opportunity and challenge ... and those who move out to meet the opportunity and challenge in school today are likely to be the leaders of tomorrow.

Living With Your Loss

Over the years, much has been written about what people experience when someone they love dies. However, one thing we've learned is that grief is a very individual process a person goes through.

There are no rules to go by, but there are some helpful guidelines. Many of these are discussed in our unique brochure entitled, "Living With Your Loss" written by noted bereavement expert and author, Dr. Earl A. Grollman.

Stephen Durkin To Seek Re-election To School Committee

Quincy School Committee Vice-Chairman Stephen J. Durkin, 31, of 125 Colonial Dr., Quincy, announces his candidacy for re-election.

In his statement, Durkin said during the next few years, the school system will be faced with "critical decisions that will determine the educational paths it will follow in many years."

"If re-elected, I look forward to working with our new superintendent in determining those paths and in steering the school system along the road to excellence.

"Our school committee must provide the leadership necessary to formulate the most effective policies, and to make certain that those policies are implemented," Durkin said.

According to Durkin, issues that the school committee will address include "the need to respond to the changing needs of the consumers of education, our children, by exploring the possibility of expanded pre-school programs and after-school recreational and educational enrichment programs."

"In addition, we need to commit ourselves to making the middle school concept more effective and to better prepare our early adolescents for high school," he said.

"With the devastating and increasing costs of administering special education programs, we need to develop more effective in-systems programs and instruction to avoid out-of-system tuition and transportation.

"Moreover, the school system must examine the changing demographics in the city and take steps to alleviate potential overcrowding in certain schools and to stabilize school boundary lines for years to come, so that students will not be continually uprooted," Durkin said.

STEPHEN J. DURKIN

Durkin said an area of "critical importance" is the need to obtain increased funding to maintain the school system's physical plant, the deterioration of which has each year detracted from funding for academic needs.

Durkin added "we must focus on what is being taught in the classroom at all levels and to work toward ensuring that students who graduate from our school system can read and write adequately and that they are well-rounded in their educational experiences, with an understanding of government, history, and public affairs, as well as a proficiency in mathematics, science, and computer education.

Durkin's record includes:

- Successfully proposed the establishment of a policy to limit class sizes at all grade levels.
- Initiated revision of school system's homework policy, establishing time guidelines for assignment of homework on a regular basis.
- Established a subcommittee on special education to bring about improvements in program offerings.
- Advocated the re-opening of the Wollaston School; voted against closing Sterling Middle School.

Durkin is a practicing attorney and is a part-time faculty member at Northeastern University. He is a graduate of New England School of Law and the University of Massachusetts. He also attended Quincy Public Schools and graduated from North Quincy High School in 1974.

He lives with his wife Maureen and their three-month old Daughter Mollie, in Quincy.

Durkin, who has been active in community affairs, said "In Quincy, I believe that the city needs to make a greater financial commitment to our schools and to our children, who have more than any other group bourne the brunt of Proposition 2½ cuts in services provided by our schools, our libraries, and in recreation.

"We as a city need to make our children's needs a top priority and we need to start taking educational concerns more seriously," he said.

City Receives $105,000 Rental Rehabilitation Funds

Mayor Francis McCauley announce that Quincy has been granted $105,000 by the US Department of Housing and Urban Development under its 1987 Rental Rehabilitation Program (RRP).

The figure is about triple the amount received by the city for FY1986, he said.

In addition, low and moderate-income tenants of properties assisted under this program may be eligible for Section 8 certificates or vouchers, according to McCauley.

Under the RRP, the city will provide Zero Percent loans for 50 percent of the total rehabilitation cost not exceeding $5,000 per unit for the rehabilitation of eligible residential investment properties. The loan is payable in 15 years but payment starts on the sixth year, McCauley said.

To be eligible for RRP assistance, certain requirements must be met, including:

- At least 50 percent of the units in the property must have low or moderate income tenants, defined as 80 percent or less of the median income in the Greater Boston Areas;
- The property is located in a target neighborhood; and
- The property has one or more substandard conditions.

Interested parties are encouraged to contact the Office of Housing Rehabilitation at 773-1380 ext. 397. Burke Calls For Study On Pit Bull Terriers

Atty. Kevin Burke, a candidate for the Ward 5 City Council seat, has called for a study on pit bull terriers and potential dangers they pose to residents of Quincy.

Burke said he is taking the action as a result of his conversations with a number of constituents in Ward 5 who have expressed their deep concern over the dangerous propensities of pit bull terriers.

Burke said, "The dangerous characteristics and tendencies of pit bull terriers has received national attention. A number of the residents of Ward 5 have expressed their concerns over these dogs. I am fearful that a resident of Quincy may be seriously injured as a result of an attack by a pit bull terrier. Therefore, I am asking that the city council conduct a study relating to pit bull terriers and, if necessary, ban pit bull terriers within the city limits."

Burke also noted that there are ways to control pit bull terriers short of a citywide ban. He said, "Section 157 of Chapter 140 of the General Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts empowers the city to investigate complaints that a dog is of a vicious disposition. After investigation, the city may order 'restraint or disposal of such dog as may be deemed necessary.' In addition, the revised ordinances of the City of Quincy closely track the state law and can be an effective tool in controlling dangerous animals. The current laws enable us to both study the problem and deal with the danger posed by these dogs immediately on a case by case basis."

Burke said that his goal is not only to address existing problems but also to work on issues of concern to the city's residents before they become a serious problem. He said, "I hope we can take action before someone is hurt."

Comer American Legion National Commander

"People have been very good to me," he said.

As national commander, Comer has set an agenda with some lofty, yet obtainable, goals.

One is raising an unprecedented $1 million to go towards such charities as the Child Welfare Foundation and the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Another goal Comer hopes to achieve is increasing the American Legion's membership to three million. That figure, along with one million auxiliary members, would top the four million membership mark.

The Legion's highest membership was in 1946 with 3,200,000 members. According to Comer, today's figure of 2,800,000 is the highest since 1950.

It's quite possible that Comer will achieve that goal since there are currently 27 million veterans in the United States.

Comer said he wants veterans to join the American Legion to inform them of their benefits and because "there's strength in numbers."

"We're not just a war organization. The American Legion works very hard in the neighborhood and the community," he said. Comer pointed out the American Legion's Boys and Girl State programs and the many Legion baseball teams as examples of the Legion's dedication to the development of youths.

Working through 16,000 community-level posts, the military service veterans are also dedicated to a strong natio and compassionate care for veterans, their widows and orphans and community service.

Another goal Comer has outlined is speaking before the U.S. Congress and with President Ronald Reagan in an effort to try to "stop the erosion of veteran benefits."

"We want to make sure the proper cuts are made in the right place," he said.

Earlier this month, Comer, along with other Legionnaires, met with President Reagan at the White House and presented him the first copy of "Central America; The Search for Consensus." This special kissue of The American Legion Magazine is devoted to the Policy Coordination and Action Group's fact finding missions to Central America including the group's policy recommendations.

Comer said the American Legion, despite apparent differences in specific recommendations, continues to support the Central American policy espoused by the Reagan Administration four years ago, with some recommendations for further study.

The Legion's policy recommendations for Central America include:

- Provide consistent aid to the Nicaraguan contras or "freedom fighters."
- Encourage democracy in, and exclude Soviet influence from, Central America.
- Re-evaluate the effect of the economic embargo against Nicaragua.

Comer said he personally disagrees with the embargo.

According to Comer, who recently toured Nicaragua, "no one is winning the war" between the Sandinistas and Contras. In fact, Comer said the Sandinistas are "worse off" because the Soviet Union is "upset" at the amount of aid it is supplying the Sandinista regime.

He added the United States should continue to support the Contras in order to force the Sandinistas to the peace table.

"The Sandinistas are afraid of the United States. They believe the U.S. will invade them," Comer said.

On the other side, Comer said "Without American aid, the Contras couldn't keep going after 12 months."

Comer said he supports Reagan's Central American policy towards Nicaragua because the United States "must get rid of the Soviet and Cuban presence there."

Despite the ongoing battles, Comer is optimistic. "I don't think it will be another Vietnam. I think cooler heads will prevail."

Comer also expressed his sentiments towards the Iran-Contra hearings.

First, he said the hearings should have been conducted in private to safeguard our national security. Since the hearings were broadcast on television, Comer said foreign countries, including our enemies, were "given tips on how we (the U.S.) conduct secret missions."

Regarding Lt. Colonel Oliver North's popularity, Comer said North was "under the wrath of congressmen" and thus put on the defensive.

"America loves an underdog," Comer said.

Comer, who does not believe the ends justifies the means, said North was "an American doing his job."

Lastly, Comer said the U.S. Supreme Court should decide whether the Bowman Amendment is constitutional.

Comer enlisted in the United States Air Force, serving during the Korean conflict as a communications specialist. He received an honorable discharge in 1955 with the rank of Airman First Class.

In 1962, he joined the Thomas J. Roberts Post 78 in West Roxbury. The post voted him a life member and awarded him a Gold Life Membership card.

Positions he has served include post commander, department commander, national executive committeeman, chairman of the National Executive Committee's Liaison Committee to the Foreign Relations Commission and member of the National Executive Committee's Finance Committee.

He has also been active in many community organizations including the Ave Maria Council 1535, Knights of Columbus in Quincy since 1961 and treasurer of the Daniel Webster-Quincy Point Junior High School PTA.

Comer has also been presented various service awards, among them the Horizons for Youth Service to Youth Award, Ward Two Civic Association Annual Unity Award and the Quincy Kiwanis Club Service Award.

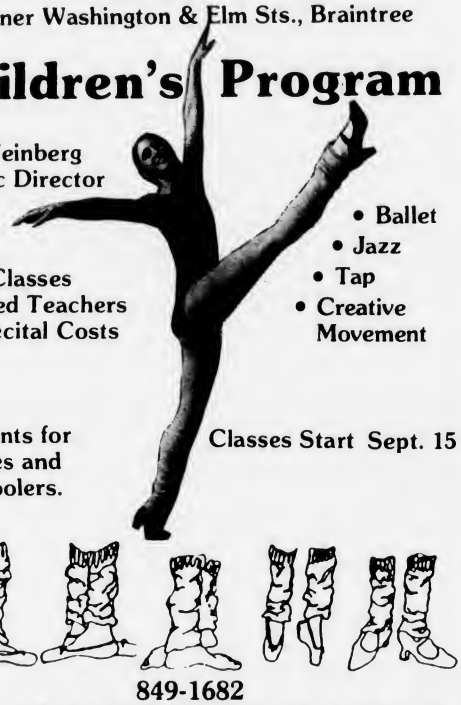
As national commander, Comer will make about 1200 appointments, one of which is Paul Hunt of the Morrisette Legion Post.

Hunt will become a member of the National Veterans Preference Committee, a "very important committee" within the American Legion, Comer said.

The hardest part of being national commander will be "the loneliness of being on the road," said Comer.

He'll be home in Quincy just five times in the next year. In that time, Comer will travel the globe in four major worldwide trips.

His destinations include Korea, Taiwan, the Philippines and Hawaii in May, and Brussels, England, Ireland and Germany in August. Comer will also visit Mexico, Panama, Guatemala, Honduras and Costa Rica.



And although Comer will spend a lot of time traveling the world, he'll also make a stop in Boston in October.

That's when he'll be back to attend the National Commander's Homecoming, a three-day event from Oct. 9 through 11.

During that time, family, friends and supporters will welcome him home and pay tribute to him.

It will be a year for both he and Quincy to remember.

How Not To Get Conned
(Part 2)

Door To Door Sales:

"Small monthly payments": Used to disguise the total cost of the item, which is usually outrageous. The vacuum cleaner you buy for "only" $10 a month for four years will cost you $480.

"Nothing like it in the stores!" True. The vacuum cleaners in the stores are probably of better quality and come with a warranty.

"Wont find this price anywhere!" True. The prices in the stores are probably lower.

"Easy Credit!" True. They don't care what your credit rating looks like. Once you sign for the purchase, paying for it is YOUR problem. Be wary of "low monthly payments." Find out the total amount you'll pay over the life of the loan, then subtract the actual cost of the item itself. The difference is what you'll pay in interest. Your bank, credit union or local legal aid society can tell you if the interest rate is fair.

Many door to door sales people are honest and hard working. But there are a few who try to cheat their customers. Be careful. Watch for those "catchwords" used above.

Whenever you make a purchase in your home totaling $25 or more, the salesperson must give you a written contract and two Notice of Cancellation Forms. You have three days to change your mind and use one of those forms to cancel your contract.

Unsolicited Merchandise:

Cagey conartists will send you a "gift" in the mail - a tie, a "good luck" charm, a key chain. You didn't order it. What do you do?

If you're the kind of person they're looking for, you'll feel guilty and pay for it. But you don't have to.

- If you haven't opened the package, mark it "Return To Sender." The post office will send it back - at no charge to you.

- If you open the package and don't like what you find, throw it away.
- If you open the package and like what you find, keep it - FREE. This is a rare instance where the rule of "finders, keepers" applies unconditionally.

Whatever you do, don't pay for it. Look at your "gift" as an honest-to-goodness way of getting something for nothing. And don't get conned if the giver follows up with a phone call or a visit - by law the gift is yours to keep.

Next week: Charity Frauds - Investment Frauds.

Lydon-Russell Home Helps Re-forest Public Lands

Lydon-Russell Funeral Home of Quincy will arrange for a young tree to be planted on public lands in Massachusetts for each service that they perform through their recent affiliation with the Forty Oaks Association.

The tree helps renew Massachusetts forest life and provides a living memorial to honor the deceased.

The program is part of a large endeavor, in cooperation with the Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association, to restore the countryside with living trees.

After each service, close family members or friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged by the Lydon-Russell Funeral Home.

Once the foresters have planted the tree, the designated relatives and friends will be sent an official certificate of planting suitable for framing.

The living memorial program is an example of a new approach being taken by the funeral directors as a whole, and by John J. Lydon, Jr. at the Lydon-Russell Funeral Home in particular, to increasingly contribute to their community and the environment.

Quincy, North Quincy Football Squads Report Today

By TOM SULLIVAN

It's that time of year again.

The Quincy and North Quincy High football squads will begin full-scale workouts Monday morning with double sessions.

Actually, the teams will report today (Thursday) for three days of conditioning without pads.

Fourth-year Quincy coach Jack Raymer will greet the Presidents for the start of full-scale drills Monday morning at 5:30 and the squad will work out at Faxon Field until 11 o'clock and return for an afternoon workout from 12:30 to 2:30 each day next week.

Raymer will have John Taglieri, who did a remarkable job with the defense the past two years, back as an assistant as well as Bob Noble, who coached the Quincy Elks of the Quincy Youth Football League for several years, and Jim Kennedy. Returning after an absence of two years will be John Sullivan, former coach for several years.

At this writing the freshman coach was undecided.

The Presidents finished 4-6 last year, losing to North Quincy, 24-7, on Thanksgiving.

Quincy will open Friday night, Sept. 18, against Cambridge Rindge and Latin at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium, the first of four home games under the lights. This is also a Suburban League opener.

North Quincy, under sixth-year coach Ken McPhee, also will report at 8:30 Monday. The Raiders will practice from 8:30 to 11:30 and again from 1:30 to 3:30 at Cavanagh Stadium daily next week.

McPhee, whose team also finished 4-6 last year after its impressive win over Quincy, has all of last year's assistants returning in addition to a new addition, Dean Merlin.

Ted Sadowski, the "dean" of all South Shore coaches, is back for his 29th season at North. Kevin Cobban, Pete Zoia, Pete Chrisom, Jamie Walsh and freshman coach Tom Carter, coach of the North Quincy Apaches of the Youth Football League, also are back.

North will open against oldtime rival Milton on Saturday, Sept. 19, at Milton at 1:30. The Raiders' first Suburban League game will be at Newton North on Friday, Oct. 2, at 2:30. The Raiders have three home night games.

This is the final season Quincy and North will have to play perennial Suburban League champion Brockton in football. Neither has had much success against the Boxers in the past several seasons. Brockton has nearly as many students in the freshman class as Quincy and North have in the entire school.

He served with Quincy Sun publisher Henry Bosworth as co-chairman of the Quincy-South Shore Jerry Lewis Telethon Committee which has raised over $1 million to fight muscular dystrophy.

Lighting Monument Unveiled At Stadium

A beautiful granite monument honoring those who contributed to the permanent lights at Veterans Memorial stadium was unveiled last Friday night at the stadium with most of those who contributed men and machines present.

The monument was unveiled by Linda Montilio of Monti Granite, who donated and engraved it. Mrs. Montilio is known as Quincy's "artist in granite."

She was introduced by president Bob Meenan of the lighting committee, which did a remarkable job of raising the more than $100,000 needed to install the lights in a little more than 10 months.

The monument has the names of all the firms who donated both men and equipment and those who contributed $500 or more, names of the committee members, a map of Quincy and the logos of Quincy and North Quincy high schools.

Following the unveiling, a reception was held at Amelia's Restaurant at Marina Bay.

Meenan, who congratulated the committee for realizing the "impossible dream" by raising the money in such a short time, presented special awards to new School Supt. Dr. Robert Ricci, retiring Supt. Jack Osterman, Sen. Paul Harold, Tom Picard, Nick Marsney, John Warren, Bill LaForest, Dennis Fitzgibbons, Tom Sullivan of The Quincy Sun, John Quinn, Mrs. Montilio and Ron Tierney.

Awards also went to the members of the advisory board, Marty Finnegan, Joe LaRaia, Pat Toland, Cliff Marshall, Mike Morrisey, John "Butch" Mahoney, Barry Welch, John Gillis and Quincy Sun publisher Henry Bosworth.

Plaques also were presented to the following donors:

Feely's Baked Enamel, Granite City Electric, Wollaston Wine, Quincy Police Betterment Ass'n, Pneumatic Scale, Cathay Pacific, Central Real Estate, Beacon Sporting Goods, Mayor Frank McCauley, Barrett Family Restaurants, Electrical Union 103, Joe's Pub, Quincy Savings Bank, Montilio's Bakery, N.E. Hennessy A Big Booster

Millane Has Eye On 1988 Olympics

By TOM SULLIVAN

Jeff Hennessy, longtime coach of the Quincy Track Club, and Michelle Millane, one of the finest female athletes ever at North Quincy High Schol, have come a long way together since first meeting back in 1975 when Hennessy started in as coach of the year-old Quincy Track Club.

Now, Michelle, who at 23 years of age has done things and gone places most people can only dream about, has hopes of making the 1988 Olympics in her specialty, the discus, and Hennessy is one of her biggest boosters.

"After years of rigorous training, Michelle achieved one of amateur sports loftiest goals when she was named to the East squad for the USOC Olympic festival July 25-31 at Duke University," said Hennessy. "Competing against the behemoths of the sport, Michelle at six feet and 170 pounds was actually dwarfed by some of the throwers.

"She placed eighth at 148 feet, 7 inches, far below her best throw of 160 feet, 7 inches and she would have had to throw six feet over her best just to finish seventh on a night when heat and humidity had all the throwers well off their best."

Michelle is actually the third Quincy Track Club athlete to compete in the Olympic Festival. Quincy's Brian Donahue and Lauren Andrews of Hull and Boston University appeared in past years.

Michelle, a tall, pretty blonde, began her long journey in 1975 when 10 years old in what could be considered a random meeting with Hennessy, who was only 18 himself and trying to make a name for himself in the coaching ranks. The QTC, a track club founded by the late Frank Kelly the year before for the youngsters of the city, was also in its infancy and the three grew together.

Today the QTC is one of the most respected youth track clubs and the largest in the country, mostly due to the hard work of Hennessy, who was developing winning programs at Atlantic Junior High and North Quincy High and is presently at U Mass Boston helping the women's program to four NCAA Division 3 championships.

Michelle reached unprecedented heights with the club in 1976 she became the number one runner at 12 years old when the QTC began its cross country program. In 1977 she threw the discuss 96 feet, 9 inches, the best throw in the country for a 12-year-old, she won the baseball throw in Boston ARC O-Jesse Owens games and won a trip to Los Angeles, and she closed out the season with a throw of 103 feet, 6 inches in the discus as a 13-year-old.

The following year she competed in the AAU age-group championship in Miami and placed second in the discus (116-4) and third in the shot putt (41-6).

In 1979 she attended Central Junior High and set the junior high shot put record of 35-5. She won the softball throw at the Jesse Owens meet and won another trip to Los Angeles. She attended the New England track camp where she met Northeastern University coach Joe Donaghue.

In September of 1979 she entered her sophomore year at North Quincy High where she began an outstanding career which saw her win six titles, being named to six Patriot Ledger all-scholastic teams and four Boston Globe all-scholastic teams.

In 1980 she broke the 40-foot barrier with the eight-pound shot put, took second in the indoor state meet and was named a Patriot Ledger all-scholastic. Later in the year she won the Class B and all-state discus and was named a Patriot Ledger and Globe all-scholastic.

In 1981 she won the state Division 1 indoor shot and again was both a Globe and Patriot Ledger all-scholastic. She lost for the first time in the discus in the Class B meet and also lost in the all-state meet, but won the New England crown and made the Ledger all-scholastic team. Later in the year she qualified for and attended the AAU-Junior Olympics in Winston Salem, N.C., at Wake Forest University and placed seventh, missing a medal by just two inches.

She was a member of the North Quincy High student council and was elected homecoming queen in November of 1981.

The following month she took part in the YAL Junior Olympics in Memphis, Tennessee, where she won two more medals in the shot put and discus. She received All-American honorable mention and was ranked 50th in the country in the discus.

MICHELLE MILLANE

At Northeastern, under the tuteledge of Coach Joe Donaghue, she won four New England championships in the shot put and discus and took part in the Penn Relays and the ECAC championships. She was named Northeastern's outstanding female athlete in 1983 and broke the 150-foot barrier in the discus.

In 1985 SC she took a year off from collegiate competition to concentrate on her nursing curriculum.

As part of Northeastern's co-op program, she spent last summer in Ireland working in Dublin's Jervis Street Hospital, an experience she called "wonderful and educational." While in Ireland she also completed and trained working out at the University of Dublin and she took second place in Ireland's National Champions as a guest competitor.

In February of this year she won the New England title in the shot put with a toss of 46-9 and in May won the outdoor New England crown in the discus.

Michelle won the Class 1 indoor shotput, was second in the US Easterns and was selected a Ledger all-scholastic in March 1982 and the next month she was awarded a full scholarship to Northeastern for track. She was to major in nursing.

The following month she won the Class B discus but lost in the all-states in driving rain. She again made the Ledger and Globe all-scholastic teams.

In July of that year she took part in the Miss Quincy Bay Race Week beauty pageant.

Hennessy, now 31, laughts as he remembers that pageant.

"We sat and watched her in the swimsuit and gown competition and we were spellbound," he said. "She looked absolutely beautiful. The crowd went wild when she came out. Although she didn't win, she thoroughly enjoyed it and afterwards she and Lauren Anderson (QTC teammate from Hull) and I piled into a car and drove straight to New Jersey in the middle of the night. She had a meet the next day."

That meet qualified her for the YAC USA Junior Olympics in Nebraska where she won a bronze medal (third place) in the discus.

In June she was named Northeastern's outstanding female athlete of 1987, placed second in the ECACs, threw the discus 160-6, her personal best, in a development meet at Boston College, graduated from Northeastern and received her pin from the NU School of Nursing. In July she won the discus in the Bay State Games.

Michelle currently is in Europe and is spending her final "free summer" touring 12 countries. She intends to work in a Boston hospital and is mulling over several job offers. She also plans to work with young people.

She helped out at Brookline High School with the shot putters and also helps Hennessy with the young up and coming throwers in the QTC, guiding them alongside the man who got her started, the man who still takes time to offer Michelle sound advice and moral support.

What is Michelle's secret? "Lot's of hard work and guidance from God," she said. She takes part in weekly youth group sessions at the Sacred Heart Parish Hall every Sunday night. "I've been surrounded by a lot of good people who have helped me, Jeff Hennessy, Joe Donaghue, Lou Tozzi, my high school coach, and George Liset and my parents. I have a lot of friends who respect what I'm doing and have been very supportive. It's a good feeling having that kind of backing. I've put in a lot of time and this makes it all worth while."

When asked about her Olympic hopes, she remains cautiosly optimistic. "I have to improve some," she said. "My goal is to get into the Olympic trials in 1988 and I will keep training for that. All I ever really wanted to do from the time I was a kid was to become a nurse, travel and go to the Olympics."

It is almost like she has the entire city of Quincy standing by to lend a hand.

No one is rooting harder for her to achieve her goal than Jeff Hennessy, who has supported her, coached her and guided her since first meeting her in 1975.

Quincy Junior All-Stars Win Braintree Tourney

Quincy's 11-year-old Junior Baseball League all-star team won the recent Braintree Youth League tournament, the first Quincy Junior League team to win a tournament outside of Quincy.

The team no only won the title but dominated every game, outscoring the opposition, 59-3 in four games.

Quincy opened with a 14-0 romp over South Weymouth as Mark Karlson pitched three-hit ball, struck our 13 and walked only one. He also had two singles.

Danny Duncan led the offense with a home run, a double and five RBI. George Wirtz, Paul Tagney and Robbie Guennari had two hits apiece and Mike Berry, Terry Manning, Jamie Schatzl, Steve Manning and Chris Geary had one each. Mark Thibault, Sean MacDonald, Keith Driscoll and Jimmy Byrne stood out on defense.

Quincy's next victim was Brookfield, 5-1 in Quincy's toughest game of the tournament. Berry scattered nine hits, struck out six and walked just one. He also had akey singe. Guennari had a towering home run and single and Karlson had a homer. Duncan and Mark Cahill each had a double and a single and Terry Manning, Geary and Thibault had singles. Wirtz, MacDonald, Tagney, Schatzl, Steve Manning, Byrne and Driscoll all played strong defense.

Quincy rolled over HydePark, 19-1, with Karlson again pitching a three-hitter, striking out eight and walking three. He also had a single.

Guennari had a grand slam homer, a solo homer and a single, MacDonald and Geary had three hits each, Cahill two singles, Thibault a triple and Terry Manning, Duncan, Berry and Steve Manning a single each. Tagney, Schatzl, Wirtz, Driscoll and Byrne were defensive standouts.

Quincy met South Weymouth again in the championship game and the result was even worse than in the opener as Quincy led, 21-1, after 3½ innings and the game was called.

Karlson allowed five hits and struck out six. Duncan and Steve Manning each had two hits in the first inning when Quincy exploded for 11 runs. Duncan added a hit in the third. Cahill had two doubles and a single, Guennari a double and single and Karlson, along ball hitter, caught Weymouth by surprise with a perfect squeeze bunt. He also had a base-clearing double. Wirtz had a triple and single and continued his outstanding play at third base. Byrne, Berry, Driscoll, Terry Manning, MacDonald and Thibault also had hits and Tagney, Schatzl and Geary shone defensively.

The team was coached by Dan Duncan, Steve Mitchell, Bob Guennari and John Floyd.

6 Youngsters Win City Hotshot Competition

Six Quincy youngsters have captured city championships in the Pepsi NBA hotshot competition sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department and Milton Pepsi Cola.

This is the first step in a national competition that could result in an appearance at a Boston Celtic game at Boston Garden or the NBA finals.

The Quincy champions competed in a district playoff and advanced to the city championship in three different age groups. The winners are:

Boys 9-12, David Gunther; girls 9-12, Jenny Marks; boys 13-15, Brian McPartlin; girls 13-15, Jennifer Richmond, boys 16-18, Shawn Lynch, girls 16-18, Maureen Shea.

The runners up in the Quincy championship are: boys 9-12, Eric Zimmerman; girls 9-12, Leah Lomond; boys 13-15, E.J. Nordstron; girls 13-15, Christine Barrett; boys 16-18, Pat O'Donoghue; girls 16-18, Lisa Morrell.

Pepsi NBA hotshot competition involves shooting baskets from five "hotspots" marked on one half of a basketball court. There is a one minute time period and normal rules apply for rebounding and dribbling. Participants may not be a member of a school varsity basketball team.

The next stop for the Quincy winners is the New England championship at University of Massachusetts at Boston in October.

The annual program is part of the summer playground program of the city of Quincy and was coordinated by Mary Holleran and Jaime Paz, sports and special events specialists.

David Tilley, Jr. Ward 5 Candidate

Tilley stated that "as a result of the gravest crisis ever to have faced the City of Quincy, we are prepared to offer over 30 years' experience in the field of environmental concerns to the citizens of Ward 5 as well as all residents of Quincy.

"Never before has Quincy been faced with such explosive environmental issues. Our State Legislators will require complete efforts on the part of our citizens and of city officials with a proven record of environmental concerns."

Tilley cited his early education at Norfolk County Agricultural School, as a former chairman of the North River Valley Conservation Commission, member of the City of Quincy Conservation Commission, and a present member of the Quincy Environmental Commission.

"My lifetime of concern with the serious issues of environment and conservation speaks for itself and I have not become an instant expert for the purpose of running for public office," said Tilley. "It is my sincere desire to serve the citizens of this city as an elected public official and to continue the work of my entire adult life."

Tilley, a U.S. Army veteran, is married to the former Gail Gunderson of Wollaston.

Phelan Urges Long-Term Solutions To Traffic Problems

Charles J. Phelan, Jr., candidate for Ward 5 City Councillor, urges the city to seek solutions that will reduce traffic over the long-term.

Speaking at the home of Paul and Margaret Doherty, 56 Standish Ave., Phelan said:

"Traffic in Ward 5, as well as throughout the City, has become an increasing threat to the safety of our neighborhoods and the health of our residents. As the Traffic 2000 Study indicates, a large number of our neighborhood streets are being used as bypass routes for motorists attempting to avoid congested intersections. In addition, the study indicates that, as a result of auto emissions, areas around the Southern Artery, Quincy Shore Drive and Newport Avenue fail to meet air quality standards. These two problems not only create health and safety concerns but clearly indicate that the quality of life in our neighborhoods is suffering from excessive traffic.

"The current traffic problems are a result of the commercial development that has gone largely unrestrained for a number of years. I am strongly in favor of short-term solutions that deal with current traffic volumes. However, if our neighborhoods are to survive and the quality of life improve, we must seek longterm solutions that deal with the cause rather than the effect.

"In my opinion, the most striking part of the Traffic 2000 Study is not about traffic at all but is contained in the projections of city-wide development. The study estimates that nearly 6.4 million square feet of office space will be developed between now and the year 2000. A large portion of this development having already been approved. The result is that traffic is projected to increase by almost 30 percent over the same period."

Phelan suggested that commercial development is not as beneficial as its supporters claim.

"Proponents of commercial development argue that additional tax revenues provide residents with stable tax rates," he said. However, this is not entirely true. Increased commercial development places costly burdens on city services. Office buildings require new and more sophisticated fire apparatus. The increase in traffic requires road and signal improvements. The 2000 Study estimates that it will cost the City over 12 million dollars to alleviate the current traffic problems. In addition, the City is left with costly sewerage and waste disposal problems created by a transient work force with no stake in the community. Therefore, it appears that commercial development simply inflates both sides of the balance sheet; the net result being minimal in terms of additional revenues."

"In order to ensure that the current traffic situation gets better not worse, we must be able to effectively control the amount of future commercial development. This is why I have previously advocated the drafting of a master plan. A master plan would allow the citizens to dictate acceptable levels of development and control the location and character of such projects; thereby, controlling traffic flow and volume."

Its present mission is to promote and maintain troop morale by providing music for military formations, formal concerts and recreational activities. The band makes over 100 off-post appearances a year in community parades, festivals and special ceremonies.

A PINATA was carefully constructed by Carlyn and Joanne Vella as part of their exploration of a new world through a foreign language at the seventh annual Summer Institute for Gifted/Academically Talented Students. Both girls learned conversational Spanish and were introduced to Hispanic culture in their "Hola Amigos" course.

Keenan Says 'Small' Ward Problems Councillor's Most Important

John F. Keenan, Ward 5 candidate for City Council, told supporters this past week that the next Ward 5 councillor's most important job will be to guarantee the resolution of the "small" but very important problems that face the ward.

Keenan said that the ward councillor is the person responsible for having sidewalks repaired, stop signs painted, tree-limbs removed, new trees planted, and abandoned cars towed.

"These are the types of problems," Keenan said, "that most affect the quality of our everyday lives." "It is the councillor's job to contact the relative city departments and keep on them until the problem is resolved."

Keenan also stressed that a councillor must walk and drive through the neighborhoods on a regular basis and be in constant contact with the residents.

"Often times the little things get overlooked," he said, "so it takes the extra initiative of the councillor to find and resolve these problems."

Keenan said that his door-to-door campaigning is indicative of the type of effort needed.

"When you knock on someone's door for the second or third time, he or she knows you are concerned about hearing what is on their mind. "It is this type of concern and attention to detail that must be maintained throughout the years."

"It is the little things in the ward that are the most important, and it is to these that the next ward 5 councillor must devote a great amount of attention."

WEEK OF: August 27

BIRTHDAY THIS WEEK

People think you're rigid in your approach, but you're really quite adaptable. You're also an intuitive teacher. Sometimes you focus too much on details and overlook the broader picture. The coming 12 months focus on renewal of commitment to a cause and an educational project. Romantic streak surfaces over coming months.

AQUARIUS — January 21 - February 19

Look forward to meeting interesting people who may be able to provide education related suggestions. Sensitive family member is feeling more secure. Messages coming your way require careful interpretation.

PISCES — February 20 - March 20

Romance progresses steadily, although you may be too busy to notice. Major strides are made on the job, and community involvement expands. Be sure to take time to review health priorities.

ARIES — March 21 - April 20

Refresher courses are accented during a week that sees you moving in step with the times. Small bonus or medal may come your way by Monday. Family member surprises you with generosity.

TAURUS — April 21 - May 22

Moderation is current byword, watch tendency to overextend yourself, especially in financial area. Good week for working on hobbies, progressing on projects, traveling to new destinations.

GEMINI — May 23 - June 21

Your willingness to see the point of view of others helps you progress in your career. Friends count on you for encouragement, but don't be unrealistic. Creativity is accented.

CANCER — June 22 - July 22

Friends encourage you to pursue a goal, but first evaluate your other priorities. Your sense of humor earns you the affection of someone you admire. Hosting parties is accented.

LEO — July 23 - August 22

Watch a tendency to read too much into events or to look for hidden angles where none exist. A young person is affected by your example, bringing you intangible rewards.

VIRGO — August 23 - September 22

Your great efforts finally pay off, and the praise that's been slow in coming arrives at last. Good week for you and partner to discuss your joint goals.

LIBRA — September 23 - October 22

The hardest part about getting out of a rut is taking the first step -- and you may be taking that step by the end of this period. Joint ventures are positively spotlighted on the weekend.

SCORPIO — October 23 - November 21

Financial dealings with friends require careful consideration. Business dealings require more thought. In romance, spontaneity is the keyword. Fitness program may be implemented after weekend.

SAGITTARIUS — November 22 - December 22

New faces make this one of the liveliest weeks of the season. Family activities may become more costly than anticipated. Your first impressions are now subject to change.

CAPRICORN — December 23 - January 20

Travel is indicated, provided you plan ahead. Originality is emphasized -- more so at the workplace than in your home environment. Thanks to your consideration, gloomy friend cheers up.

QHS Girls Finish Third In League

Members of last year's Quincy High girls' basketball team participated in the recent North Quincy Girls Summer Basketball League and finished third in regular season play with a 7-3 record.

Twelve teams from various location on the South Shore took part for five weeks at the North Quincy gym.

Since high school coaches cannot be involved with their teams until basketball practice begins in November, fathers, brothers and friends of the girls coached the teams.

A mini playoff series was held with the first four teams playing eachg other. Quincy edged second place Milton, 27-25, and upset first place Fontbonne, 27-23, in double overtime.

Members of the Quincy team were Kristen Curtin, Gayle Morrell, Patti Morrell, Jennifer Fay, Karen Craig, Sharon Goodman, Kristen McGhee, Tracey Thornhill, Janet Morrell, Lisa MOrrell and Maureen Shea. They were coached by Glenn McGhee.

Sheets Presses For Motorist Emergency Call Boxes

Ward 4 City Councillor James Sheets has renewed a request that the state Department of Public Works install "Motorist Emergency" call boxes along the Southeast Expressway between Milton and Braintree.

Over a year ago the City Council unanimously passed a resolve, asking for the state to take this action.

But the state has failed to do so, Sheets said.

Sheets indicated that since the closing of the Howard Johnson Restaurant on Interstate 93 (Southeast Expressway) people with automobile breakdowns during the non-rush hours, and particularly during the night, are climbing the fences, in some cases breaking them down, and approaching individual homes to make phone calls.

This is a very frightening experience at 3 a.m. in the morning, with someone wanting to come into your home and make phone calls," Sheets said. He also said that a number of sections of fence have been broken down and need to be replaced.

The Quincy Legislative Delegation will be contacted for their support, Sheets said.

City Continues Court Fight Against MWRA

Quincy to the possibility of sludge treatment or trash incineration at the site.

Levy said he would convey the concerns to the MWRA board, according to McCauley. He also suggested that the mayor designate people to work with the MWRA.

Quincy went to court two weeks ago and obtained an agreement that the MWRA would give the city 10 days written notice in advance before it signs a purchase and sale agreement for the yard.

McCauley said that City Solicitor Joseph (Jay) MacRitchie will meet with the town counsels from Braintree and Weymouth "to put all the legal heads together."

"We tried to impress on Levy the enormous potential adverse effect on three major communities, as well as on the other communities who pay the MWRA assesmant," said McCauley.

"They raised concerns and I agreed to pass all the concerns on to the MWRA board, so to me it was a successful meeting," said Levy.

Sen. Paul Harold said "We are looking for middle ground, but we didn't make much progress."

"It was a predictable meeting," said Quincy's Department of Public Works Commissioner Paul Anderson, the city's representative on the MWRA board.

"Every day that goes by, my concern over the worst case scenario for the yard increases."

City Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro, in whose ward the shipyard is located, said, "The positive part of the meeting is that we got representatives from Braintree, Weymouth and Quincy together to work to somehow resolve this."

McGrath Wants To See Railroad Impact Study Statement

City Council President Stephen J. McGrath has requested a copy of the recent Environmental Impact Statement of the proposed commuter rail service through the City of Quincy.

"I am disturbed at some of the conclusions reached in the report, particularly the conclusion indicating that there would be no adverse impact on Quincy of noise and vibration," said McGrath.

"The reasoning in the report is that as Quincy already has the Red Line that there is, therefore, no further impact caused by the proposed commuter rail

"The logic of this conclusion escapes me, as anyone would realize that the addition of the commuter rail along with the existing Red Line would have to increase the noise and resultant pollution through Quincy," he said.

"I will be reviewing the Environmental Impact Statement carefully and intend to respond in writing to its conclusions," said McGrath.

"I still maintain that commuter rail will have a disastrous impact on neighborhoods from South Quincy through Wollaston to North Quincy," he said.

Wahlberg, Gacicia, Reappointed To Board

Mayor Francis McCauley announces the reappointment of Arthur Wahlberg of 264 Southern Artery, and Peter P. Gacicia of 20 Stanley Circle, to three year terms on the Cemetery Board of Managers.

Their terms will expire the first Monday in September 1990.

Mayor McCauley noted that the Cemetery Board of Managers oversees the management, general supervision and expenditures of all appropriations made for cemetery purposes as well as formuates the rules and regulations governing the sale of lots and the establishment of perpetual care. The board was established in 1958, members serve without compensation.

City Fights For Shipyard Sale Limit

By NANCY McLAUGHLIN

Lawyers for the city were scheduled to appear in U.S. District Court, Boston, yesterday (Wednesday) on various motions to limit the sale of the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard to the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

City Solicitor Joseph (Jay) MacRitchie and Special Counsel Peter Koff were scheduled to appear before Judge David Mazone.

MacRitchie said the city would request that the sale of the yard to the MWRA be limited to the 35 acres it has said it would need for a staging area to transport workers and materials to the Deer Island Sewage Treatment Plant.

Local officials fear the rest of the 185-acre yard could be used for a sludge treatment plant and or trash incinerator.

MacRitchie said the city has also filed an opposing motion to the Environmental Protection Agency's motion to order the MWRA to purchase the yard in connection with the cleanup of Boston Harbor and Quincy Bay.

The action in federal court follows Judge Thomas Morse's denial in Suffolk Superior Court Monday of the city's requested preliminary injunction against the purchase and sale of the yard by the MWRA for a reported $49 million.

In his seven-page decision, Judge Morse denied the city's request but noted that "some legitimate concerns had been raised."

His decision was upheld in appeals court.

If the city is not successful in federal court, the next step would be to go to trial over the sale in state court, according to MacRitchie, but the federal court could take over the case.

The city would allege that the MWRA is exceeding its authority by purchasing the entire shipyard, he said.

"It is an unusual case for a city to take on a state agency," said MacRitchie. "But in 1982, the city took on the MDC and won.

"If you are right, you prevail," he said.

If the city won its case, the purchase and sale could be negated, according to Mayor Francis McCauley.

"We haven't lost the war, just a battle," said McCauley, referring to Monday's action.

The MWRA's new executive director Paul Levy appeared on WROR Radio's Newsmakers program Sunday morning and said that his agency thinks it will be a better neighbor to Quincy than was General Dynamics.

Some Teachers Threaten To Miss Opening Bell

Quincy Public School students are scheduled to return to school Wednesday, Sept. 9, but it is unclear whether teachers, whose contract expired Monday, will return as well.

"A lot of members have spoken to me about not opening the doors of school next Wednesday," said John Buckley, outgoing president of the 700-member Quincy Education Association.

"Down the road, the first month of school, anything could happen," Buckley said.

"I feel strongly that no job action should be taken," said Mayor Francis McCauley.

"We hope to wrap up contract negotiations as quickly as possible," said McCauley.

A second contract meeting with a professional mediator is scheduled for Thursday. The teachers' union is scheduled to meet at 6:30 a.m. next Wednesday to decide if any job actions should be taken.

According to the contract proposal offered by the city, QEA members would receive an 18 per cent increase over three years.

It breaks down to a three per cent hike retroactive to July 1, two per cent raise June 30, 1988, six per cent increase Jan. 1, 1989, and six per cent raise Jan. 1, 1990.

"Eight months of bargaining have been totally unsuccessful," said Buckley.

"Braintree teachers are making more money now than what Quincy teachers will make in three years," he said.

"That's the problem. Quincy's teacher's salaries have slipped drastically in the last 12 years.

"The city, in terms of development, real estate, construction, banking, investments, is doing beautifully. That's the material aspect of the city.

"But the soul of the city is its education and I'm sorry to say that it is failing because the mayor does not treasure his teachers.

"He does not see the importance of children and the development of their social posture, their attitude, skills and career opportunities.

"We've been treated so shabbily over the last 10

Early News Deadline For Next Week's Sun

Because of the Labor Day holiday, all news, social and sports releases as well as advertising copy should be submitted by Friday at noon to the Quincy Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Sq.

Have a safe, happy holiday weekend.

Sun Pledge Center At Ch. 5 To Help Jerry's Kids

The Quincy Sun MDA Telethon pledge center will do its thing for Jerry's Kids at WCBV-TV Ch. 5 this Labor Day weekend.

Members of the pledge center have been invited to join the operations at Ch. 5 in recognition of their achievement of raising over $1 million in the past 10 years.

The money was realized from pledges and fishbowl receipts at The Sun and through special events such as swim-a-thons, spelling bees, softball games, flea markets and other activities.

A special section of Quincy telephones will be manned at Ch. 5 by Sun pledge center members Sunday night starting at 8:30 p.m.

A fishbowl is now on display at The Sun office and will be in operation on Labor Day.

Those wishing to donate to the fish bowl to help the fight against muscular dystropy may do so now or on Monday.

The Quincy Sun pledge center and committee reached the $1,000,586 mark last year. Co-Chairmen have been Sun publisher Henry Boswork and the late Richard J. Koch, Sr., executive secretary of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

The 11th annual MDA softball doubleheader originally scheduled for last week was postponed because of rain but will be played tonight (Thursday) at Adams Field.

The Police and Firefighters will meet at 6:30 p.m. and the City Officials and News Media All Stars at 8 p.m.

This year's doubleheader is being dedicated in Koch's memory.

Other fund-raising events will continue. Plans include a spelling be.

Bosworth paid this tribute to Koch:

"Dick played a major role in the success of our pledge center and other events sponsored by the Quincy-South Shore Jerry Lewis Telethon Committee.

"He was always there when you needed him. He gave so much of himself to so many people and so many worthy causes.

"We are all going to miss him. Quincy will never be quite the same."

Fishing Spotter Plane Won't Fly Until 8 A.M.

The pilot of a private plane who has been flying over Squantum as early as 5a.m. to spot schools of fish for fishermen has agreed not to fly over the peninsula before 8 a.m.

According to Mayor Francis McCauley, Einar Bergby of the North Shore had been hired by commercial fishermen to spot schools of fish in Quincy Bay.

The plane is owned by Viking Airways and flies out of Beverly Airport, he said.

"My office received many calls from Squantum residents complaining of a low flying plane over the Squantum peninsula as early as 5 a.m.," said McCauley.

He also said he received a petition from Rona Goodman, Squantum Community Association president, with about 150 names of Squantum residents disturbed by the plane.

With the help of Leo Luchini of the Quincy Police Department and Harbormaster Bernie Reisberg as well as the mayor's office, the operator of the plane was tracked down, according to McCauley.

Council Environmental Committee To Meet On Shipyard Purchase Issue

The City Council's Environmental Control Committee will meet Tuesday, Sept. 8, at 6:30 p.m. to discuss the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority's planned purchase of the General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard.

According to committee chairman Michael Cheney, the committee will have the opportunity to question representatives of the MWRA and Paul Anderson, Quincy's Department of Public Works Commissioner and MWRA board member.

Councillor Cheney noted that the decisions that will be made in the very near future will affect the quality of life for all the residents of the city of Quincy for future generations to come.

He said that in a recent report regarding the Residual Management Facilities Plan, the MWRA has recommended that General Dynamics Shipyard be utilized as a transfer, composting and or combustion site for the sludge that is produced from 43 communities in the MWRA sewage district.

Councillor Cheney noted that there are three separate plans for incineration within two or three miles of the Town River area: the possibility of a sludge incineration site at General Dynamics, a toxic waste incinerator further up Town River in Braintree, and the newly proposed trash incinerator in Weymouth, as well as recent discussions concerning reopening the Egar Plant Power Station.

In the event that any one or all of these proposals comes to life, the citizens of Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree can expect the air quality to be significantly reduced within the vicinity of the above mentioned city and towns, according to Cheney.

"We must take every measure possible and explore every avenue to stop any form of incineration within the vicinity of the residents of Quincy. Over the course of many years, the state has destroyed our harbor and our bay and now they are moving forward to destroy our air quality," said Cheney.

Councillor Cheney noted that he hopes that the Sept. 8 meeting will be productive and solutions to these serious problems will be found.
